A medicine company arrived in the city yesterday from St. Hilaire and will give a show on the vacant lots back of H. Lewin's store.

Ole Nicholson, of St. Hilaire, was arrested Tuesday by Chief Benzie, he being intoxicated. A fine of $5 and costs was imposed.

About twenty river drivers from Red Lake Falls arrived in the city Monday and remained until today on their way up to the outlet. They will bring down Red Lake Falls logs.

Ed. Wilcox is busy these days locating settlers upon the diminished reservation. There are a large number settling up there and it is reported that a creamery will be started in the near future.

The news comes from Washington that it is discovered that all the green pine cut on the Leech Lake Indian reservation was cut by Indians, who were clearing up lands for farms. That is about the best explanation yet offered. The theory that white loggers were responsible was quickly disposed of.

Weaning Young Pigs.

Almost all pigs are more or less stunted when it comes time to wean them from the dam. The only remedy to prevent this is to accustom the pigs early to eat a little milk, which may be given to them when they are 8 weeks old. This is a good thing for the sow also, as the pigs will not tug at her teats so ravenously and will gradually begin to wean themselves. If any are runts, it is a good plan to let these suckle the dam one or two weeks after the thrifty pigs have been taken off.

Beef Bulls.

The Texas Stockman says: The demand for pure bred bulls of the beef breeds still continues, and prices for prime stock will doubtless remain good for several years, as the demand is large and the supply limited.

HAIL AND RAIN

It Does Considerable Damage Near Red Lake Falls.

The report comes from Red Lake Falls that a severe storm swept over that section Sunday. The rain fell in torrents, accompanied by a hail storm that did considerable damage to gardens and crops that are forward. The fall of hail continued 15 minutes, and $200 worth of window glass was broken out of the buildings in Red Lake Falls. The storm passed easterly and the damage from hail was widespread, although it cannot occasion serious loss as it is too early in the season.

WE CELEBRATE

The Fourth in the Good Old Way.

A mass meeting was held in the city hall Tuesday evening to make arrangements for the celebration of the Fourth of July. Mayor Dobner presided and Lars Backe acted as secretary. The matter of a celebration was discussed at some length, and it was the unanimous opinion that owing to the fact that a large number of farmers living tributary to here could not attend a celebration at any other place, it was the duty of the citizens of this place to provide a suitable celebration. An executive committee of three—Messrs. Ira C. Richardson, B. A. Young and H. Fant—was appointed to have full charge of the celebration and the appointing of sub-committees. The committee is a very strong one and will insure to the citizens of Thief River Falls a grand celebration of the day. Every person in the city should render all the assistance possible to the committee.

THE NEWS,

Minnesota congressmen should receive appointments on the best committees. They were the original Henderson boomers.

J. H. Block, of St. Peter, will probably be the next state treasurer of Minnesota, and a better selection could not be made.

Ex-Gov. David M. Clough is said to have decided to go to the lumbering country in Washington state to make his future home.

It is said that C. A. Towne's friends in the Sixth district are declaring that if he is not elected to congress next year he will go abroad to live.

A tornado swept across a portion of Wisconsin Monday doing a great deal of damage. Nearly 100 were killed at New Richmond and a greater number injured.

J. C. McCook, United States consul at Dawson City, reports to the secretary of state, under date of March 31, that the gold produced in Alaska during the year 1898 will exceed $20,000,000, and he predicts that the output for 1899 will be double that amount.

When people feel inclined to grumble at the weather we are having here in the northwest, let them stop and consider how much more pleasant it must be down east where the temperature has been touching the nineties and where factories have been obliged to close temporarily in many instances, owing to there being so many cases of prostration among the workmen. Minnesota seems to average up pretty well, after all.—Detroit Record.

Did you ever hear of such a thing as a political machine of the pure Populist denominations? Read this from the McIntosh Times, a Populist newspaper, and be enlightened:

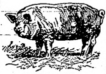
> The close shave experienced by the Populist county ticket at the last election emphasizes the fact that ring rule is distasteful to the people under the Populist, as under Republican rule, and that although purchased delegations may insure nominations, they do not increase the party strength, and are not likely in the future to insure election.

It is officially announced that the government of Japan will enter the international patent union on the first of July next. This will be good news to American manufacturers, as there has been no way to protect foreign patents in Japan, and that empire is filled with machines made by the Japanese in imitation of the best American and European patents. All a Japanese needs is a sample and he is able to reproduce it with marvelous accuracy. The common mills, the machine shops, the printing offices and every other industrial plant in Japan is equipped with imitation machinery. In 1895 I attended an exposition at Kobe, where a great building was filled with mechanical products of Japan, and nearly every one of them was a copy or a modification of some foreign invention. The Japanese have a patent system under the control of Mr. Matsudaira, who had charge of their exhibition in the manufactures building at the World's Fair, and they protect their own inventions, but they have persistently refused to protect foreign patents against piracy—in their own country until other nations would recognize them as one of the civilized powers of the world. That recognition will take place in July, and Japan will join the international patent union at the same time.—William E. Curtis in the Chicago Record.

PIG OF TODAY.

Changes Wrought by Breeding in Twenty-five Years.

The majority of pig breeders would doubtless show little hesitation in affirming that the pig of today is infinitely superior to that which was generally found in this country, say, a quarter of a century since, writes Sanders Spencer in the London Stock Breeders' Magazine. Of this there appears to be little doubt, and, further, the breeders of pure bred pigs would appear to be well within their right when claiming that this marked improvement was mainly owing to the pigs which had been distributed from their herds, principally for crossing in the more ordinary farm pigs. But do the pure bred pigs of today possess anything approaching as many of these commercial points as they should possess or are they so much in advance of the common country pigs as they were two or three decades since? We fear not. And yet the difficulty of improving the pig stock of the country is now far greater than it was in years gone by, owing to the difference in form and quality between the two classes of pig having become less pronounced.



TYPICAL PIG OF TODAY.

Another difficulty presents itself to the breeders of pure bred pigs of today—the public taste, or fashion, demands a pig of the form and substance which is somewhat contrary to the form of the original pig, which carried the greater part of its weight in the fore quarters, whereas now the pig of today must furnish the greater portion of its meat from the ribs and hind quarters. Thus the pig of today must be a manufactured article, since the wild hog, from which all our domesticated pigs are descended, was so formed for defense and for the search for roots, bulbs, etc., that the major portion of its weight was in the fore quarters. We not only have to attempt to produce pigs totally dissimilar in form and character to the original foundation stock, but we have to be most particular in mating animals from as similar a source as possible, or we inevitably produce a pig with many of the undesirable points of the parents, and with few of those qualities which we are anxious to see exemplified in the pig of today. It is a well known fact that if we cross animals of two diverse types, and having but little in common, the probabilities are that the element of value in each particular parent will war with those of the other parent, and that the result will be an animal very similar to the original foundation stock, which possessed few, if any, of those points which had been cultivated.

Barley For Horses.

If barley is used at all for horses, it should be boiled and mixed with cut hay, roots, etc., and in this shape is far less dangerous and well adapted for fitting a horse quickly for sale or show, but for farm horses or those working at common labor there is no necessity of giving such boiled feed more than once a week, say on Saturday night, to move the bowels freely and cool the horse out over Sunday. If fed dry, the barley should be ground and mixed with oats and bran and should not form over one-quarter of the mess at any one meal and should not be fed more than once daily. We are insisting upon this because barley is dangerous food for horses, not so nutritious or digestible as oats, can usually be sold for a good price to buy oats and bran and finally for the reason that barley is splendidly adapted for the feeding of hogs along with boiled potatoes. Another danger in feeding barley is due to the "awns" or beards causing intestinal irritation, even enteritis and death, and this is the more liable to happen where the barley has not been properly cleaned, as is apt to be the case on the farm. In the malted state, or as brewers' grain, barley is often fed to brewers' horses and keeps them fat, soft and sleek, but such horses have to be gradually accustomed to the food and any horse put suddenly upon it would be liable to colic and death. In India they parch the barley, and we understand that in this form it is much less dangerous and proves valuable as food for horses.—Dr. A. S. Alexander in Breeder's Gazette.

John Patterson Tuesday sued the Great Northern before Judge Johnson for horses that were injured while being shipped last spring. The railroad made no appearance, and a verdict of $98 was given the plaintiff.

Work has been commenced by the city authorities of building a pier in the Red Lake river near the old North spring mill. It will be used as a boat landing and as a landing for the city fire engine in case of a fire in that part of the city.

There are more houses under the course of construction in Thief River Falls today than ever before. A vacant house cannot be found in the city and there are a number of mill men who will bring their families to this city as soon as they can secure a suitable dwelling.

F. J. Stebbins was pleasantly surprised last Friday evening by a number of his friends. The evening was spent in playing whist and those present were: Messrs. Hansen, Jackson, Meehan, Mullarky, Lewin, Dobner, Robbecke, Knox, Eastman, Richardson and Grundy.

The St. Hilaire and Red Lake Falls base ball nines were to have played a game of ball Sunday on the grounds of the former, but owing to the rain only two innings were played. St. Hilaire was ahead. About 200 people from Red Lake Falls and 100 from this city were present.

About twenty people arrived in the city from Warren Monday and they will remain for a week hunting and fishing in this vicinity. They drove over with five teams and are camping on some vacant lots near H. E. Mussey's home on the East Side. They seem to be greatly enjoying themselves.

About twenty river drivers from Red Lake Falls arrived in the city Monday and remained until today on their way up to the outlet. They will bring down Red Lake Falls logs.

Ed. Wilcox is busy these days locating settlers upon the diminished reservation. There are a large number settling up there and it is reported that a creamery will be started in the near future.

The news comes from Washington that it is discovered that all the green pine cut on the Leech Lake Indian reservation was cut by Indians, who were clearing up lands for farms. That is about the best explanation yet offered. The theory that white loggers were responsible was quickly disposed of.

Weaning Young Pigs.

Almost all pigs are more or less stunted when it comes time to wean them from the dam. The only remedy to prevent this is to accustom the pigs early to eat a little milk, which may be given to them when they are 3 weeks old. This is a good thing for the sow also, as the pigs will not tug at her teats so ravenously and will gradually begin to wean themselves. If any are runts, it is a good plan to let these suckle the dam one or two weeks after the thrifty pigs have been taken off.

Beef Bulls.

The Texas Stockman says: The demand for pure bred bulls of the beef breeds still continues, and prices for prime stock will doubtless remain good for several years, as the demand is large and the supply limited.

HAIL AND RAIN

It Does Considerable Damage Near Red Lake Falls.

The report comes from Red Lake Falls that a severe storm swept over that section Sunday. The rain fell in torrents, accompanied by a hail storm that did considerable damage to gardens and crops that are forward. The fall of hail continued 15 minutes, and $200 worth of window glass was broken out of the buildings in Red Lake Falls. The storm passed easterly and the damage from hail was widespread, although it cannot occasion serious loss as it is too early in the season.

WE CELEBRATE

The Fourth in the Good Old Way.

A mass meeting was held in the city hall Tuesday evening to make arrangements for the celebration of the Fourth of July. Mayor Dobner presided and Lars Backe acted as secretary. The matter of a celebration was discussed at some length and it was the unanimous opinion that owing to the fact that a large number of farmers living tributary to here could not attend a celebration at any other place, it was the duty of the citizens of this place to provide a suitable celebration. An executive committee of three—Messrs. Ira C. Richardson, B. A. Young and H. Fant—was appointed to have full charge of the celebration and the appointing of sub-committees. The committee is a very strong one and will insure to the citizens of Thief River Falls a grand celebration of the day. Every person in the city should render all the assistance possible to the committee.

THE NEWS,

By John W. Eastman.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

Minnesota congressmen should receive appointments on the best committees. They were the original Henderson boomers.

J. H. Block, of St. Peter, will probably be the next state treasurer of Minnesota, and a better selection could not be made.

Ex-Gov. David M. Clough is said to have decided to go to the lumbering country in Washington state to make his future home.

It is said that C. A. Towne's friends in the Sixth district are declaring that if he is not elected to congress next year he will go abroad to live.

A tornado swept across a portion of Wisconsin Monday doing a great deal of damage. Nearly 100 were killed at New Richmond and a greater number injured.

J. C. McCook, United States consul at Dawson City, reports to the secretary of state, under date of March 31, that the gold produced in Alaska during the year 1898 will exceed $20,000,000, and he predicts that the output for 1899 will be double that amount.

When people feel inclined to grumble at the weather we are having here in the northwest, let them stop and consider how much more pleasant it must be down east where the temperature has been touching the nineties and where factories have been obliged to close temporarily in many instances, owing to there being so many cases of prostration among the workmen. Minnesota seems to average up pretty well, after all.—Detroit Record.

Did you ever hear of such a thing as a political machine of the pure Populist denominations? Read this from the McIntosh Times, a Populist newspaper, and be enlightened:

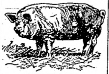
"The close shave experienced by the Populist county ticket at the last election emphasizes the fact that ring rule is distasteful to the people under the Populist, as under Republican rule, and that although purchased delegations may insure nominations, they do not increase the party strength, and are not likely in the future to insure election.

It is officially announced that the government of Japan will enter the international patent union on the first of July next. This will be good news to American manufacturers, as there has been no way to protect foreign patents in Japan, and that empire is filled with machines made by the Japanese in imitation of the best American and European patents. All a Japanese needs is a sample and he is able to reproduce it with marvelous accuracy. The common mills, the machine shops, the printing offices and every other industrial plant in Japan is equipped with imitation machinery. In 1895 I attended an exposition at Kobe, where a great building was filled with mechanical products of Japan, and nearly every one of them was a copy or a modification of some foreign invention. The Japanese have a patent system under the control of Mr. [illegible], who had charge of their exhibition in the manufactures building at the World's Fair, and they protect their own inventions, but they have persistently refused to protect foreign patents against piracy in their own country until other nations would recognize them as one of the civilized powers of the world. That recognition will take place in July, and Japan will join the international patent union at the same time.—William E. Curtis in the Chicago Record.

PIG OF TODAY.

Changes Wrought by Breeding In Twenty-five Years.

The majority of pig breeders would doubtless show little hesitation in affirming that the pig of today is infinitely superior to that which was generally found in this country, say, a quarter of a century since, writes Sanders Spencer in the London Stock Breeders' Magazine. Of this there appears to be little doubt, and, further, the breeders of pure bred pigs would appear to be well within their right when claiming that this marked improvement was mainly owing to the pigs which had been distributed from their herds, principally for crossing in the more ordinary farm pigs. But do the pure bred pigs of today possess anything approaching as many of these commercial points as they should possess or are they so much in advance of the common country pigs as they were two or three decades since? We fear not. And yet the difficulty of improving the pig stock of the country is now far greater than it was in years gone by, owing to the difference in form and quality between the two classes of pig having become less pronounced.



TYPICAL PIG OF TODAY.

Another difficulty presents itself to the breeders of pure bred pigs of today—the public taste, or fashion, demands a pig of the form and substance which is somewhat contrary to the form of the original pig, which carried the greater part of its weight in the fore quarters, whereas now the pig of today must furnish the greater portion of its meat from the ribs and hind quarters. Thus the pig of today must be a manufactured article, since the wild hog, from which all our domesticated pigs are descended, was so formed for defense and for the search for roots, bulbs, etc., that the major portion of its weight was in the fore quarters. We not only have to attempt to produce pigs totally dissimilar in form and character to the original foundation stock, but we have to be most particular in mating animals from as similar a source as possible, or we inevitably produce a pig with many of the undesirable points of the parents, and with few of those qualities which we are anxious to see exemplified in the pig of today. It is a well known fact that if we cross animals of two diverse types, and having but little in common, the probabilities are that the element of value in each particular parent will war with those of the other parent, and that the result will be an animal very similar to the original foundation stock, which possessed few, if any, of those points which had been cultivated.

Barley For Horses.

If barley is used at all for horses, it should be boiled and mixed with cut hay, roots, etc., and in this shape is far less dangerous and well adapted for fitting a horse quickly for sale or show, but for farm horses or those working at common labor there is no necessity of giving such boiled feed more than once a week, say on Saturday night, to move the bowels freely and cool the horse out over Sunday. If fed dry, the barley should be ground and mixed with oats and bran and should not form over one-quarter of the mess at any one meal and should not be fed more than once daily. We are insisting upon this because barley is dangerous food for horses, not so nutritious or digestible as oats, can usually be sold for a good price to buy oats and bran and finally for the reason that barley is splendidly adapted for the feeding of hogs along with boiled potatoes. Another danger in feeding barley is due to the "awns" or beards causing intestinal irritation, even enteritis and death, and this is the more liable to happen where the barley has not been properly cleaned, as is apt to be the case on the farm. In the malted state, or as brewers' grain, barley is often fed to brewers' horses and keeps them fat, soft and sleek, but such horses have to be gradually accustomed to the food and any horse put suddenly upon it would be liable to colic and death. In India they parch the barley, and we understand that in this form it is much less dangerous and proves valuable as food for horses.—Dr. A. S. Alexander in Breeder's Gazette.

Weaning Young Pigs.

Almost all pigs are more or less stunted when it comes time to wean them from the dam. The only remedy to prevent this is to accustom the pigs early to eat a little milk, which may be given to them when they are 3 weeks old. This is a good thing for the sow also, as the pigs will not tug at her teats so ravenously and will gradually begin to wean themselves. If any are runts, it is a good plan to let these suckle the dam one or two weeks after the thrifty pigs have been taken off.

Beef Bulls.

The Texas Stockman says: The demand for pure bred bulls of the beef breeds still continues, and prices for prime stock will doubtless remain good for several years, as the demand is large and the supply limited.

HAIL AND RAIN

It Does Considerable Damage Near Red Lake Falls.

The report comes from Red Lake Falls that a severe storm swept over that section Sunday. The storm passed easterly and the damage from hail was widespread, although it cannot occasion serious loss as it is too early in the season.

WE CELEBRATE

The Fourth in the Good Old Way.

A mass meeting was held in the city hall Tuesday evening to make arrangements for the celebration of the Fourth of July. Mayor Dobner presided and Lars Backe acted as secretary. The matter of a celebration was discussed at some length and it was the unanimous opinion that owing to the fact that a large number of farmers living tributary to here could not attend a celebration at any other place, it was the duty of the citizens of this place to provide a suitable celebration. An executive committee of three—Messrs. Ira C. Richardson, B. A. Young and H. Funf—was appointed to have full charge of the celebration and the appointing of sub-committees. The committee is a very strong one and will insure to the citizens of Thief River Falls a grand celebration of the day. Every person in the city should render all the assistance possible to the committee.

I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

WANTED.—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. R·I·P·A·N·S, 10 for 5 cents or twelve packets for 48 cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

HOUSE FURNISHING.

How to Give a Small Room a Spacious Appearance.

In a small room the wall paper is a very important item to be considered, the size of the room to all appearances being diminished or increased by the paper. Small patterns should invariably be selected, while those of a neutral tint are preferable, plain cartridge papers and narrow borders generally achieving the best result.

Carpets also largely influence the appearance of a room. In a small room large patterns must be eschewed, small and simple designs being alone permissible, or if the floor is polished and rugs are used they must be narrow and have a border.

Light is yet another influence to be taken into consideration. A dark room will invariably look small and poky, whereas if a pretty bay window be thrown out the same room would undergo a complete metamorphosis. Curtains draped gracefully round a pole and hanging down the side of the bow add greatly to the spacious effect desired.

A low seat filling up the window in question, amply supplied with cushions, is a good method of using up space without detracting from the roomy appearance. A window of this description is very much enhanced by the upper third being formed of little lattice panes or else of stained glass (or even of imitation)

The furniture is the next thing to be considered. Old fashioned, large and cumbersome pieces must be avoided. Indeed it is due to the small rooms of the period that so much gimcrack furniture has come to the fore. However, without necessarily employing gimcrack stuff, we can furnish our small rooms with dainty little Chippendale or empire designs, which are eminently more suited to small houses than mahogany, old English or rococo designs.

Old fashioned, comfortable, large sofas and armchairs must not be indulged in. Corners must all be utilized, lounges and sofas being fitted into the same, above which some dainty shelves should be put up for books and bric-a-brac. Large tables must be avoided.

When possible, it is a good plan to remove dividing doors and throw two rooms into one, decorating the division with curtains, which, draped from the center to the side, should fall thence in a straight line.

Grand pianos or even "baby grands" should find no place in small rooms, the cottage or upright, on account of the smaller space it occupies, being eminently more suitable, while the top lends itself to decoration, forming a shelf for the innumerable bric-a-brac to be found in the average drawing room of the day, for which there is, however, but little accommodation. Pictures, of course, should be small, a very good effect being obtained by a number of small paintings hung together, showing no intervening space of wall, without their sizes and shapes being taken into consideration.

How to Make the Neck Plump.

Following is a recipe which is a tried and true remedy to make a thin neck plump and round: Oil of almonds, six ounces; spermaceti, one ounce; white wax, three-quarters of an ounce; lanolin, two ounces; glycerin (pure), one-half ounce; tincture benzoin, 60 drops; balsam of Peru, one-quarter ounce. Rub thoroughly, but not violently.

How to Prepare the Bath.

To two quarts of boiling water add four large tablespoonfuls of spirits of ammonia, four tablespoonfuls of shaved castile soap, one tablespoonful of turpentine, a tablespoonful of sal soda and three of glycerin. Two drops of oil of roses will dissipate the odor of turpentine, which might be omitted, but is an excellent cleansing agent. Half a teaspoonful is enough for a gallon of water and is like oil to the touch. It leaves the skin moist, soft and delicately perfumed, and is much cheaper than soap.—New York Journal.

How to Make Cement.

An excellent cement for mending broken china can be made by beating the whites of eggs to a froth and adding grated cheese and quicklime after it has settled. A further whipping and it maybe applied to the fractured china, with the result that the damaged article will endure considerable heat and often moisture

How to Be Beautiful.

Powdered charcoal rubbed on the teeth with a piece of soft, cotton cloth will make the teeth as white as pearls. Tincture of myrrh hardens and beautifies the gums. An ice cold bath of soft water without soap to bathe the face and a vigorous rubbing with a coarse linen towel will give freshness to the complexion more than any paint or powder manufactured. To secure red cheeks and to reach a vigorous old age eat onions, cooked or raw, once a day

How to Fry Apples.

Take out the core and slice the apples in thin round pieces. Do not peel. Drop in a pan of hot butter or lard and let them fry a light brown Take out with a strainer, sprinkle them with sugar and serve hot Small apples are best for frying.

How to Make Hair Tonic.

—One-half pint best alcohol, pour in little finest quality castor oil, let stand few minutes to dissolve, then add more of the castor oil. Repeat the operation until the alcohol will not take up or dissolve any more oil. Then add little finest quality of agreeable scent of your own preference. Shake well You will then have one of the finest hair dressings in existence.

How to Make Sponge Cake.

Three eggs, one cup flour, one scant cup sugar, one teaspoonful yeast powder, one tablespoonful milk. Put all in together and stir.

ONE GIRL'S WAY.

Pleasing to Her, but Not to the Young Man.

He was one of those hesitating young persons who, having eyes, see not and, having ears, hear not, and the girl in the case was not that sort.

"Do you know," he said to her one evening as they talked, "that I think a great deal of you?"

"Yes?" she twittered, with coy interrogation.

"Yes, and the more I see of you the more I think of you."

"Yes?" And again the pretty little note of rising inflection.

"Yes, and I want to think more of you every day."

"How sweet of you!" she murmured.

"Yes, and I have something to say to you too."

"Indeed!" This in pretty surprise.

"Yes, and I would say it if I dared. I—I—I"—

"But you don't dare," she interrupted.

"How do you know I don't?" very bravely.

"Because."

"Because what?" And he moved one degree closer.

"Because you don't say it."

"But I will say it."

"When?"

"When you want me to."

"I want you to now."

"Really?" with intensity.

"Yes, indeed."

"Can't you guess?"

"How can I? Tell me, won't you?"

"Well, w-w-will you marry me?" This impetuously after the first two words.

"Oh, Mr. Brown," she cried in much sorrow, "what did you ask me for? I had no idea you were going to say that. Don't you know I am engaged to Mr. Smith and have been for a whole week, and we are to be married in October? I am so sorry"— But Mr. Brown, muttering maledictions, had got out.—Washington Star.

Mother Satisfied.

Mother—I'd just like to know who this young man is you have engaged yourself to.

"Y-e-s."

And Wearies His Readers.

"After all, there's something nice about that newspaper chap Pendipper."

"What is it?"

"He doesn't bore you with stories about his firstborn's brightness. He saves them all for his paper."—Philadelphia North American.

"That man with the whiskers is the greatest curiosity I ever laid eyes on."

"In what respect?"

A NEW COMPANY

Of Which Capt. H. C. Buhse Will Be Manager.

Capt. Buhse returned to this city from Minneapolis Monday, where he had been to secure a new casting of the core wheel which was broken on his boat the first trip up the river two weeks ago. Mr. Buhse was accompanied by W. E. Brown, of Minneapolis, who is now interested in the steamboat, and he will remain here during a part of the summer. The firm of Buhse & Co. has been dissolved and the Thief River Falls Trading and Transportation company is the name of the new firm which will hereafter run the boat. Mr. Buhse will continue to be the general manager, and will have full charge of all the boat's business.

A suit will be commenced against the Diamond Iron Works, of Minneapolis, for about $1,200, claimed as damages sustained by the breaking of the core wheel.

June Weddings.

Matt Barzen and Miss Anna Schlosser, both of this city, were married last Wednesday, June 14, at Showno, Wis. They returned to this city last Saturday, and a dance was given in the evening in honor of the event. They are now keeping house in the Fricker building in the Second ward. The groom is one of the soundest and best business men in the city and has a very large circle of friends. The bride is well and popularly known here, her parents residing on a farm west of the city.

Two popular young people—Louis Lonson and Miss Bertha Peterson—were united in marriage yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the residence of the groom's parents on the East Side in the presence of a few friends. They have an exceedingly large number of friends with whom the NEWS joins in wishing them a long and happy life.

Organized.

Some sixteen old soldiers of Red Lake Falls last week organized a post, and the example should be followed by the old soldiers of this city. The name adopted for the new organization there was Major Beck Post, No. 168, G. A. R., Dept. of Minnesota, and the following were elected as officers:

Senior Vice Com.—J. L. Stewart.
Junior Vice Com.—Simon Paul.

Ringling Bros.' Excursions.

Arrangements have been completed by which all who wish to attend the performances of Ringling Bros.' World's Greatest Shows in Crookston, Wednesday, July 5, can secure special excursion rates on all lines of travel. This will be the only point in this vicinity where the great show will exhibit during the present season, and those who fail to see it will miss the grandest amusement event of the year. Since last season Ringling Bros.' famous exhibition has been doubled in size and is now beyond all question or doubt the largest and best combined circus, managerie and hippodrome in the United States. The performance is given by over 200 high-salaried specialists, in three rings, on two stages, in mid-air, and on a huge quarter-mile hippodrome track. The trained animal features, which are alone worth many times the price of admission to see, include three troupes of wonderfully educated elephants, Lockhart's play-acting elephants, Marchand's pugilistic pachyderms and Souder's elephant brass band, and O'Brien's sixty-one horse act, in which threescore handsome equines perform in one ring, at one time, under the direction of one man. The grand free street parade, which takes place at 10 o'clock in the morning, is the most magnificent display ever seen. Don't miss it.

History of the Trusts.

The glue trust went through because the members stuck together. The leather trust put its whole sole into the matter and succeeded. The rubber men stretched a point and made an agreement. The wheel trust went spinning on to success. The yeast trust was followed by a rise in prices. The milk trust took the cream of the business. The screw men wormed their way together. The ice trust froze the outsiders. The gas trust inflated things to great proportions. The starch trust stiffened prices. The paint trust painted things red. The oyster trust proved to be no shell game. The elevator trust sent things up and down in a lively manner. The wringer trust put a squeeze on the little fellows. The saw trust ripped things open. The salt trust was far from fresh. The crockery trust smashed prices. The fertilizer trust caused a stir in the neighborhood. And the window glass trust let in the light on many dark things.—Hardware.

There was a clean sweep of the carpet trust. The chewing gum combine stuck. The umbrella deal got in out of the wet. The glove and knit goods trust were a perfect fit. The brick combine was built up well. The coffin concern was a stiff proposition. The corset trust was a tight squeeze. The cement pool stuck fast. The candy concern was quickly swallowed. The baking powder trust rose to the occasion. The peanut combine was a roast. The whisk pool went down smoothly. The screw combine held firmly. The kitchen soap concern washed well.

The fish trust bit well. The cigar and tobacco trusts were not all smoke. The air brake trust worked on wind. The woolen trust was a warm proposition. The varnish trust went off with a polish. The biscuit pool was quickly digested.

The billiard and table combine could not be used in the pool. The dyewood combine was off colored. The printers' ink concern made its mark. The upholstery pool was quickly sat on. The metallic roofing concern was on top, but the tile trust was trodden under foot. The beet sugar pool was a sweet subject. The flour deal was well cooked. The cab combine had a good drive, and the bicycle trust wheeled ahead. The hardware pool was hammered home. The lamp chimney concern went off with a crack. The bottle combine was soon filled, and the farm implement trust was a harrowing affair. The pie combine is fruitful and an uppercrust concern.—New York Commercial.

THE DATE NAMED

For the Debate With the Rev. I. T. Aastad.

As Rev. I. T. Aastad has failed to name a place and date for a debate between said Rev. Aastad and the Good Templars upon points set forth in the challenge from the Lodge Breidablik; therefore said lodge decided at a meeting some weeks ago that place and date for such a debate be named as follows: City hall Thief River Falls, on the 27th day of June next, at 7:300 p. m.

So far Rev. I. T. Aastad has not accepted the Lodge Breidablik's challenge and we may look in vain for a debate, but Messrs. Oscar Wolf and John A. Thoren will entertain the people by interesting lectures regarding the Good Templar Order. All are cordially invited. On behalf of the committee,

P. ENGELSTAD.

A Cinch Party.

Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Stranahan entertained a large company of friends last Thursday night. Card playing was the amusement until 12 o'clock, when lunch was served, after which a short time was spent in dancing. Joseph Jerome and Miss Sarah Vaughan won the head prizes and H. Lewin and Mrs. M. J. Burns the foot prizes. Those present were: Messrs. and Mesdames F. J. Stebbins, E. E. Zeh, C. L. Dobner, John O'Day, Joseph Jerome, H. Lewin, Archie Donaldson, N. W. Tarrant, John W. Eastman, Charles Cary, John Moylan, C. C. Jackson and Dr. and Mrs. H. Francis; Mesdames P. Meehan, W. T. Mullarky, Peter Morisette, M. J. Burns, E. E. THE NEWS,

By John W. Eastman.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

Oliver Belmont, the New York millionare, has signified his willingness to purchase the nomination for vice-president on the Democratic ticket next year. "A fool and his money soon parts."

There are six widows and six daughters of soldiers of the revolutionary war still on the pension rolls of the United States, and three survivors of the war of 1812. All in good health, at last reports, and two of the 1812 veterans are 103 years of age.

Gen. Otis' army is to be increased to 35,000 men. Although he has not asked for reinforcements, the president has thought best to send them to him. Gen. Otis has been assured repeatedly that he could have all the troops he wanted, but he has reported that 30,000 were sufficient, and has never asked for more.

One or two of the twin city papers still insist that Senator Nelson should correct his social habits and become a "sassiety" man, to the extent of attending the social functions gotten up by the city people. Senator Nelson is not a statesman of the spike-tailed-coat variety, but is one of the working kind; if the cities must have a society man they will have to go somewhere else to get him. Meanwhile the state at large will continue more than ever satisfied with the work of the junior senator.—Princeton Union.

Editor Norby, of the Ada Herald, went down to St. Paul last week and here's one of his experiences: "We called on State Auditor Dunn while in St. Paul last week, and enjoyed a whiff of the don't-give-a-d—d independence which surrounds his presence. Bob, as he is familiarly called by those who see him often, charges the reform press with having unjustly accused him of harboring friendly towards Jim Hill and his railroad and to hear him discourse on the subject is refreshing to one who is not a Sunday school teacher. We plead ignorance of what the reform press in general has charged up to Bob Dunn, but we know what one reform editor thinks of him. Bob Dunn is one of the few—very few—lumps of salt among the aggregation that shapes the policy of the Republican party in this state today. It matters not to us what his motives or ambitions are or how baldhead, homely and profane he is. He has always administered the duties of his office vigorously, laid bare some rottenness and suggested several reforms. We don't care Bob Dunn's politics are, he is a good officer.

Discussing the awful disaster in Wisconsin, Prof. E. B. Garriott, of the weather bureau, says that when people see a funnel-shaped cloud coming they should throw open every door and window in their houses, and then wait for the storm to pass over.

"Your furniture will probably be damaged by the heavy rain that usually accompanies a tornado," he says, "but your houses will not be carried into the next county, nor torn to pieces by the fury of the winds. The velocity of the wind causes a vacuum in the atmosphere. When the cloud reaches a house with all its doors and windows shut the four walls of the building must give way in that vacuum, or the house is lifted from its foundation and is carried with the wind. When the destructive cyclone visited St. Louis a few years ago many large and substantial houses were blown down. In the path of the storm were many frail houses and sheds. These places escaped without the loss of a shingle. The numerous openings permitted the air to escape freely. On the other hand, where the buildings were large and securely closed the confined air caused destruction. There was a similar incident just outside Chicago a few years ago. Within a few feet of the demolished structure was a workshop and corncrib which escaped without damage.

"It is difficult to forecast tornadoes—or, rather, to predict where one will strike. It is like attempting to foretell where lightning will 'hit.' The only thing to be done when a tornado visits your neighborhood is to, throw open your doors and pray that the storm center will not strike in your neighborhood. The chances of escape about equal those of destruction. The storm may hit or miss you. It is purely a matter of chance."

BAYAN A GONE GOOSE.

It is kind but cold-blooded logic that Col. Henry Watterson, of the Louisville Courier-Journal hands out to the men at present in control of the Democratic party. In a recent issue he says:

"In our opinion the silver issue is a pure delusion. We are not only in favor of the gold standard, pure and simple, but we have not the least fear that it will be set aside in favor of any other standard. It is here to stay. Hence, we regard the agitation as playing right into the hands of the Republicans."

Replying to the claims made by the Bryanites that they can win with Bryan next year upon a 16 to 1 platform, Col. Watterson gives the following reasons why he regards any such expectation as a fallacy:

"In 1896 the country was in the thick of one of the longest periods of famine it has ever known. It is now in the thick of one of its greatest periods of plenty. In 1896 the elements of discontent were rife everywhere. Today the elements of speculation and adventure are everywhere busy and filled with hope. In 1896 the fusion movement expressed an unknown quantity and covered the entire field of disaffection. It is already showing signs of disintegration, having lost many of the states which carried, without recovering any which it lost. In 1896 Mr. Bryan was a new born hero, with a garland of roses encircling him from head to foot. Now he is a weather-beaten candidate and claimant, the novelty worn away and the bloom vanished, both himself and the movement of which he was the embodiment, having spent their force. If defeat was the portion of this movement in 1896, with everything to favor it, what may be expected in 1900, with these favorable conditions reversed?"

THE BEST EVER.

The Fourth Will be Celebrated in Grand Style.

The committee having charge of the Fourth of July celebration this year have made extensive arrangements, and are prepared to guarantee that the celebration this year will eclipse all former attempts. There will be numerous foot races, horse races, bicycle races, slow races, etc., the winner of each event to be given a valuable prize. A purse of $25 will be given to a base ball club.

In the evening a fine display of fire works will be touched off. Next week the News will be able to give full particulars regarding the different events and the prizes to be awarded.

A GRIEVANCE.

The Encroachment of Whites Bothers the Indians.

The Indians have been holding councils at the different sections on the Fosston branch in the reservation to discuss the matter of the settlement by whites at Bena, Cass Lake and other points along the line. A council was held at Cass Lake Monday afternoon and their grievances were then embodied in a petition addressed to Inspector Nesler, requesting the removal of the white trespassers who have been settling on their territory without leave, cutting off their timber and depopulating their waters. The wholesale catching of fish of late has roused their ire to the boiling point and they are determined to have an end put to it. No violence is anticipated. The braves and chiefs assemble as a body of calm, meditative statesmen, and embody their wents as best as they can in writing and present them to the proper authorities, with an expectation and demand that immediate action be taken in the premises.—Walker Pilot.

Killed at Warren.

A. Hockinsen, a prosperous farmer living near Warren, while hauling wheat to market there, was killed Monday. His team became frightened by the cars and ran away, throwing him under the wheels. He died in one hour of internal hemorrhage. He was 55 years of age.

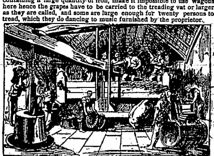
CARRYING THE PORT GRAPES TO THE WINERY, ON THE HEADS OF MEN AND WOMEN, NEAR THE VALLE DE MENETIZ WHERE THEY ARE DUMPED IN THE MASHING VATS TO BE TRODDEN FOR PORT WINE.

The rugged hills with projecting rocks of brown stone and shale containing a large quantity of iron, make it impossible to use wagons here hence the grapes have to be carried to the treading vat or larger as they are called, and some are large enough for twenty persons to tread, which they do dancing to music furnished by the proprietor.



ALFRED SPEER,

the Pioneer wine grower of New Jersey whose Port Grape wine and Burgandy rivals the world, imported the Port Grape vines many years ago, and planted vineyards in the Passaic Valley N. J. The soil in Passaic county, New Jersey, is identical to that of de'Menetiz.

Speer's New Jersey Vineyards

are situated in the Passaic valley below the mountain range and the grapes are carted to the winery in the town of Passaic where they are mashed between rollers made of rubber, which do not break the seeds, and made into wine.

These grand wines of Speer's that have mellowed in flavor in the course of years of ripening, are the choicest wines in this country and can only be obtained by paying a price that is higher than new wines from western vineyards. Mr. Speer deems it necessary for a healthy wine that it be allowed years to mature in wood to get rid of its coarse parts; with this object he keeps his wines several years in fumigated cellars and frequently racks before bottling or offering for sale. The reputation of Speer's wines as a valuable medicinal and family wine extends around the world.

I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

WANTED.—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. R·I·P·A·N·S, 10 for 5 cents or twelve packets for 48 cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

TIMELY HINTS.

Observations on Housecleaning by a Man Who Knows.

If you are a man, never get gay and tell your wife you stood first in the geometry class while at college. If she knows what geometry is, she will have you fit and put down all of the new carpets.

The best plan for the male portion of the family to pursue during this interesting period is to shake the house. If you don't, you may have to shake the carpets.

If your wife asks you to take up a carpet, tell her you are no policeman; but, if she persists, raise one tack carefully with the tack drawer, grasp the carpet firmly in both hands and then start around the room with it.

The above plan has been tried by several citizens with admirable results. Of course many tacks will hit the ceiling, but they all eventually strike the floor. You will be able to find tacks in that room for the next year. They are usually discovered with the bare feet.

The baby is usually a great inconvenience during housecleaning. If quite small, place in the bathtub and then lock the bathroom door. If the baby should in its infantile play turn on the faucets and then drown, you can call the coroner. While that official is at your home jolly him some, and maybe he will help move the bookcase.

If you have a servant, always inform her a week or so before housecleaning that she is perfectly at liberty to invite any of her female relatives to visit her. When they come, meet them at the door with a sweet smile, a bucket of soft soap and a scrubbing brush for each one. Of course, if they should happen to defer their contemplated visit after housecleaning, just inform the servant that she cannot entertain.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Not the Conservatory.

Young Lady—The musical conservatory is in this building, isn't it?

Janitor—No, mum. The musical conservatory is 'bout two blocks down street.

Young Lady (dubiously)—I—I was sure I heard pupils practicing vocal exercises. Are you sure the musical conservatory is not here?

Thoughtful of His Wife—and Himself.

"Is he?"

"Yes; the family moved on April 1 to a house with a lawn in front of it, and when Mrs. Bloomfield's birthday came along toward the end of April her husband gave her for a birthday present a nice light running lawn mower."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Taking a Hint.

How long does it take some people to take a hint? A young man says that he has called six times on an Atchison girl and that her sisters still stay in the room. He says that by the time a man makes a second call at a Topeka home the family have decided which girl he wants, and all the rest move out and give him a show.—Atchison Globe.

CONCERNING SOUP.

How Various Odds and Ends May Be Utilized in Its Preparation.

The cook who would succeed in sending good soup to the table must take care that she has strong and excellent stock ready for it, and the economical housewife will soon find that stock does not always require meat to be bought for its production.

The water in which mutton has been boiled, the bones taken from rolled ribs of beef or from any boned joint or poultry, will make excellent stock for a family soup. The trimmings of large joints or cutlets, the shanks of lamb or mutton or ham, and the large bone of the sirloin of beef will all add to the stock pot and supply a good foundation for the soup.

Soup should never be made with hard water, unless it is of green peas, whose color is preserved by the hard water.

The rule as to quantity is one quart of water to a pound of meat without bone. If the quantity of water is diminished, the soup is increased in strength and richness.

Meat should be put into the soup kettle with very little water at first, and with a piece of butter to keep it from burning. It should be left to stew very slowly until the essence of the meat is extracted. Very long and very slow stewing is one secret of good soup.

Skim the soup pot frequently, and do not let it cool until it is thoroughly done. Onions should be put into the soup soon after it has begun to cook; herbs, carrots and celery three hours afterward; turnips or any other delicate vegetable just before the soup is finished. When celery is out of season, the seeds of the plant, tied up in a piece of clean muslin, will give the flavor equally well.

The coloring of soup is done in various ways. A piece of bread, very brown, may be simmered in the soup for a short time before it is done and will give it a brown color. The ordinary coloring, however, is done by putting a little burned brown sugar into it. The sugar is first put into a saucepan with a piece of butter the size of a walnut and a little catchup. For those who do not dislike them burned onions are an improvement both as to color and flavor.

When clear soup is desired, the stock can be clarified by breaking an egg and using the white and the shell, but with not a particle of the yolk in it. The white is beaten to a stiff.

How to Prepare Stuffed Clams.

Steam and chop 20 large clams, brown three large onions in butter, add one well beaten egg, one-quarter cup of melted butter, 1¼ cups of solid tomatoes, one-half teaspoonful of salt, same of pepper; chop all together once more. Fill the half shell of clam with this mixture, cover with cracker dust, with small pieces of butter on top. Bake 20 minutes in hot oven and serve at once with catchup.

How to Disinfect.

To keep clean the house where a consumptive lives is essential to keep other inmates from contracting the disease. The best and the cheapest plan in the sickroom is to pour carbolic acid and water into a saucer and keep it standing there all the time. A piece of flannel or felt placed in a saucer will check evaporation to some extent. Two saucers are better than one. If there are children or pet dogs and cats in the house, it is better to place the saucer on a mantel out of reach of meddlesome hands. The solution must be renewed every 24 hours.

Much care should be exercised in rinsing the cuspidors with hot water and flushing all vessels used by consumptives with carbolic acid and water.

Carpets and lace curtains are liable to hold germs and dust if a consumptive is confined to a room; hence as much fresh air and sunlight as possible should be instantly admitted.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

How to Make Mackerel Salad.

Take one can of mackerel and cut up an equal quantity of celery. Stir to a cream one cupful of butter, one tablespoonful of mustard, one of sugar, a pinch of salt and pepper and the yolks of three hard boiled eggs rubbed smooth with five tablespoonfuls of vinegar. Pour the mixture over the fish and celery.

How to Terrapin Chicken.

Take three pounds boneless boiled chicken, chopped fine, add to it a pint of broth, one-half pint cream, four hard boiled eggs, five heaping teaspoonfuls richly browned flour, one teaspoonful salt, one cup butter. Rub the eggs through sieve, add the browned flour, broth, eggs and cream to chicken, with two pieces of chopped celery. Cook slowly 15 minutes, season with mace and pepper to suit taste. Just before serving on golden browned toast add two wineglasses madeira wine.

How to Make Flaxseed Lemonade.

Steep two tablespoonfuls of flaxseed for ten minutes in one quart of hot water. Stir in the juice of three lemons, a large cupful of sugar and a wineglassful of wine. Drink either hot or cold. This is excellent for persons suffering with colds or lung troubles.

How to Make Cabbage Salad.

Small head of cabbage chopped fine, an even teaspoon of mustard, an even teaspoon of salt, a tablespoon of sugar, half cup of vinegar, two eggs, piece of butter size of an egg melted separately. Stir all in before pouring over the cabbage. Let all the ingredients except cabbage come to a boil just to thicken except the butter, which add last, then pour over cabbage while hot.

How to Make Fruit Jelly.

One-half box gelatin dissolved, add juice of two lemons and strain. When partly thick enough add two oranges, cut up; two bananas, one-quarter pound figs and one-quarter pound of English walnuts and set away to cool.

MUST GO.

White Settlers Must Move off the Reservation.

Capt. Mercer, of Walker, Indian agent, has received peremptory orders to remove all white persons off the Chippewa Indian reservation within thirty days. This means the obliteration of the thriving village of Cass Lake, the division headquarters of the Great Northern railway on it Fosston extension. The railway property is not included in this order for President Hill holds his right of way through the reservation by an act of congress. For several months the Indians have been dissatisfied with the condition of affairs as they existed at Cass Lake. White men have cut the timber of the reservation whenever they wanted and for building purposes and whisky has been sold to whites as well as Indians. Fishing parties have raided the very best fishing grounds of the reservation and the evil was becoming so serious that the attention of the secretary of the interior was drawn to the facts and his order issued for every white man to vacate.

GRANTED

The Order for Leave to Sue Burkee Bros.

Trustee John Cromb, the well known Crookston banker, last week petitioned the referee in bankruptcy at Crookston, asking that proceedings be commenced against John Burkee, B. E. Burkee, Mary Burkee, Hans Langseth, Erick Hoff and John J. Berqoust. The prayer of the petition has been granted, and a civil action will be commenced in the district court of Red Lake county.

B. E. Burkee and John Burke some time ago conducted a general store at St. Hilaire, which they later disposed of at private sale, defrauding a number of creditors of various sums of money. This spring they petitioned to go into bankruptcy, and the creditors are now attempting to collect their bills. Hans Langseth and the others above named are being sued as the secret trustees of the Burkees. The petition is quite lengthy and alleges that John and B. E. Burkee have an ample amount of property with which to pay their debts, and that the claim which they make that they are bankrupts is untrue.

The suit against the parties will probably be a long drawn out affair, and it may take some time to bring it to a termination. The attorneys for the creditors are Merrick and Keogh, of St. Paul; W. A. Marin, of Crookston, and H. W. Lee, of this city.

NO CRAZY INDIANS.

Commissioner Jones Calls Attention to Curious Facts.

A full blooded Indian lunatic never lived, according to United States Commissioner William A. Jones, of the department of Indian affairs. The statement is rather surprising, inasmuch as the government has recently purchased a site near Canton, S. D., for an Indian insane asylum. Mr. Jones says:

"The occupants of the hospital soon to be opened will all be mixed breeds. Even among them the number of patients is small in proportion to the Indian population of 256,000. The exact number I do not know. Probably there was never a case of insanity in any tribe until the malady was introduced by mixing with the whites.

"Oddly enough, diseases of all kinds are creating the greatest havoc among the best cared for and richest tribes. Those who have to rustle for themselves are gradually increasing in numbers. Among the Osages, in Oklahoma, for example, the death rate is something startling. The nation comprises 16,000 Indians and has $9,000,000 to its credit, drawing interest, in the United States treasury. The reds live in nothing short of luxury, but early in life the braves grow fat and flabby, then contract consumption and die.

"The Sioux, numbering about 20,000, are on the increase. They have no such nest-egg as the Osages and have to work harder for their living. It agrees with them. The Sioux are also making rapid progress along educational lines. The old full-bloods, who never cared for education and stolidly refused to accept advancement, are dying off. There was no hope for them and the only thing to do is to let them go. Most of the aborigines with whom we now have to deal have more or less white blood in their veins. The current idea that education makes them more vicious when they return to their reservations is erroneous. Our statistics show that 76 per cent. of the number lead fairly correct lives. It is true, however, that an Indian inclined to be a disturber is worse when endowed with education."

A Wreck.

Wm. Warner, in company with four others of St. Hilaire, was in the city last Saturday evening. They came up on a hand car, and on the return trip the car jumped the track, hurting more or less all of the passengers. Warner was badly bruised about the head and one of his ribs was broken. His injuries, however, are not of a serious nature, but he will be laid up for a few weeks.

AFFIRMED.

The Decision of the Lower Court Upheld.

Judge Collins has affirmed the decision of the lower court in the case of Patrick Meehan and James Meehan, co-partners, appellants, vs. Phillip Zeh and Mary Zeh, respondents. The case involves the legality of a notice of lien filed in the office of the register of Polk county on real estate located in Red Lake county, it being claimed that as Red Lake county had just been organized from territory just taken from Polk county, the former was not yet organized to such an extent that public documents or record could be filed. The lower court held that the findings did not justify a conclusion of law that the lien claimants are entitled to a lien on the real estate involved. The governor had issued the necessary legal proclamation creating a new county, and the county then became, and is now one of the legally organized counties of the state, but the organizing of the same for judicial purposes and for the enforcement of criminal laws belongs to and is a part of the territory of the old, until the officers for the new have duly qualified. The premises in question were a part of Polk county when the material was furnished, but they were in the newly created county of Red Lake upon the issuance of the proclamation of December 24, 1896. The newly elected register of deeds for the county last named did not qualify until the evening of the 6th of January, 1897. The lien statement was filed in the office of the register of deeds for Polk county on the morning of that day. The ninety days within which the lien claimant could have filed his statement did not expire until several days subsequent to Jan. 6, and it is, therefore, held that the filing of the lien statement in Polk county was of no validity.—St. Paul Dispatch.

THE NEWS,

By John W. Eastman.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

When the country people find out that the cities are "against" the re-election of Senator Nelson that will settle it. Opposition to Nelson in the Twin cities will insure his re-election. There can be no speculation about the Senator's re-election. In the first place the state will be overwhelmingly Republican so far as Senator Nelson's election is concerned and in the second place it will be impossible to draw party lines when he is in the deal.—Roseau Times.

IT WILL.

Marcus Johnson thinks Red Lake county will go Republican, all over, at the next election. It is to be hoped he is a true prophet, as he ought to be, for he is constant in his oversight of its interests.—Bemidji Pioneer.

THE COST OF POOR ROADS.

The Scientific American has figures showing that it costs the farmers of this country on an average 25 cents a mile for transporting their crops to market, while in Europe it costs only 8.6 cents per mile. As the average distance the American farmer has to haul his produce is, according to the same authority, 12.1 miles, he pays on each ton (an average load) transported to market $1.98 more than the European farmer.

Of course the farmer has to stand this expense in the first instance, but he adds considerable of it to the price of his product, so the consumer, in his turn, is compelled to pay a heavy penalty for the almost universal lack of interest in road improvement. This suggests to our mind that before any great change can be made along this line of public improvements that the city dwellers must be made to realize their interest in the matter as well as the farmer; then the revolution which will result in universal good roads will come. It has long been the custom of the few people who have given the matter any thought at all to rail at and abuse the farmer for his apathy in taking up the work which must result in a great benefit to him, but none, or very few, have taken the matter to the people of the cities. Their interests are only secondary to those of the farmers, but they either do not realize that fact, or else desire to shirk the responsibility and throw all the expense upon the rural residents.

An Old Settler.

August Reidl, an old and respected settler of this section, died yesterday morning at his home in Porter's addition. The funeral services will be held tomorrow. The deceased was born August 24, 1820, and was consequently nearly 79 years of age. He had been a resident of this section since 1882, taking a claim near Excel in Marshall county, north of here, where he resided until last fall when he removed to this city. He was a fine old gentleman and was held in high esteem by all who knew him.

OUR SUPPLY

Of Water in the Red Lake River and Red Lake.

W. C. Smiley made some mathematical calculations the other day regarding the flow of water in the Red Lake river, which will be of interest to all people in this section. Red Lake river discharges about 1,000 cubic feet of water per second, or 86,400,000 cubic feet per day. The area of a section is 27,878,400 square feet, and of a township 1,003,622,400 square feet. Therefore, the river would, at its present flow, drain one foot of water from a township in a little over 11½ days. The area of Red Lake is, roughly speaking, about that of 12 townships. Therefore, if all sources of supply were suddenly cut off from the lake, the river could flow for about 140 days or nearly five months, at its present volume, and lower the water in the lake but one foot.

PUNCTURES.

Some of Them Skin Deep, Others a Little More So.

A good fisherman can "hook" his living.

Strangely enough, an angleworm is all curves.

The habit of "tipping" extends even to the ladies' hats.

Though you fill a freight scow with goods, it is still "lighter."

Any one can sit on a jury, but it takes a lawyer to sit on a witness.

Does the shepherd find his flock increases because he puts it away in folds?

A baseball player is much "put out" when the umpire decides against him.

Some persons are so given over to worrying that they fret more or less every time the tide goes out for fear it won't come in again.

A few Americans are going to Europe this summer, but the very popular and fashionable thing will be for one to spend the season right round home, pursuing his usual vocation.

It is rumored that there is to be a combination of the strawberry producers, the object being, we presume, to keep up prices, or to keep up the bottom of the box, which is "likewise."—L. A. W. Bulletin.

The Only Case.

"What is there that a man can do which woman has been unable to accomplish?" asked Mr. Meekton's wife. He was silent.

"Leonidas," she said severely, "I was addressing you. Is there anything a man can do that woman cannot?"

"Well, Henrietta, you know that a man can manage for $6 or $7 to get a hat fit to wear on any occasion—but that's the only case I can think of, Henrietta, wherein he possesses any advantage whatever."—Washington Star.

All Worn Out.

She was resting when her dearest feminine friend called.

"Thank heaven!" she said. "The 1st of May is past. I have had a terribly wearing two weeks looking at flats and houses."

"But you had no intention of moving, had you?"

"Certainly not. But it's the only time of the year when I can find out all about what my friends and neighbors are getting."—Chicago Post.

Economy.

"Well, how do you like living in the suburbs?"

"Fine. It's going to be a good thing for me financially. Our girl has decided to leave and the lady who lives next door says we'll never be able to get another to go out there to work. I shall have $5 a week more to spend for cigars and things now."—Chicago News.

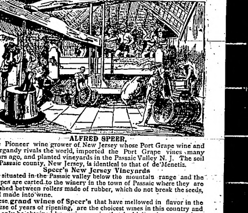
CARRYING THE PORT GRAPES TO THE WINERY, ON THE HEADS OF MEN AND WOMEN, NEAR THE VALLE DE MENETIZ WHERE THEY ARE DUMPED IN THE MASHING VATS TO BE TRODDEN FOR PORT WINE.

The rugged hills with projecting rocks of brown stone and shale containing a large quantity of iron, make it impossible to use wagons here hence the grapes have to be carried to the treading vat or larger as they are called, and some are large enough for twenty persons to tread, which they do dancing to music furnished by the proprietor.



ALFRED SPEER,

the Pioneer wine grower of New Jersey whose Port Grape wine and Burgandy rivals the world, imported the Port Grape vines many years ago, and planted vineyards in the Passaic Valley N. J. The soil in Passaic county, New Jersey, is identical to that of de'Menetiz.

Speer's New Jersey Vineyards

are situated in the Passaic valley below the mountain range and the grapes are carted to the winery in the town of Passaic where they are mashed between rollers made of rubber, which do not break the seeds, and made into wine.

These grand wines of Speer's that have mellowed in flavor in the course of years of ripening, are the choicest wines in this country and can only be obtained by paying a price that is higher than new wines from western vineyards. Mr. Speer deems it necessary for a healthy wine that it be allowed years to mature in wood to get rid of its coarse parts; with this object he keeps his wines several years in fumigated cellars and frequently racks before bottling or offering for sale. The reputation of Speer's wines as a valuable medicinal and family wine extends around the world.

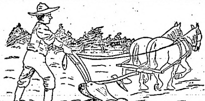
ST. PAUL, - MINN.



I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

WANTED.—A case of bad health that R-I-P-A-N-S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R-I-P-A-N-S on the package and accept no substitute. R-I-P-A-N-S, 10 for 5 cents or twelve packets for 48 cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

DIP THE SHEEP.

A Veterinary Expresses His Sentiments in Plain Language.

Yes, dip the sheep, writes Dr. C. D. Smead in The National Stockman. Nearly every one at the present time realizes the necessity of dipping the lambs, but a whole lot of sheep owners have not yet learned that they don't kill all the ticks when they dip only the lambs. And they never kill half the lice. Every day I hear men say, "My sheep are ticky and are shedding light fleeces." Or: "Doctor, my sheep are pulling their wool. I can't find any sheep ticks, neither can I find any signs of scab." Now there is only one answer to all these questions and only one way to prevent the occurrence of this condition next year and that is to dip the sheep and dip the lambs and don't be fooled into the belief when the wool is taken off and the lambs are dipped and both sheep and lambs begin to improve that you have got through with ticks and lice. No, you have not. There is a lot of them there yet. They don't bite and annoy the sheep in warm weather simply because they live on the exudations (sweat) of the sheep when the weather is warm. But they will be on hand next winter all right, and they will have lots of children and grandchildren and great-grandchildren, and for what I know have a whole lot of cousins, aunts and uncles come from somewhere else to visit them and spend the winter on the poor sheep's carcass, annoying them and taking a whole lot of money out of your pocket. The sheep cannot produce the wool and lambs that they could and would have produced had they all been dipped.

A sheep owner the other day said to me, "Doctor, I have just dipped my lambs and they are literally covered with ticks, and I found some lice on them too." I said, "Why didn't you dip the sheep also?" And he said: "Oh, I guess I got 'em all when I dipped the lambs. The old sheep can stand more than a lamb anyway, you know, doctor." Say, I had courage enough to call that man a fool. He stood on the ground and I was in a carriage, so he couldn't get at me and make me take it back, but I meant it. He was a fool for so believing, and so is every sheep owner in the land who so believes. You see I am a good ways from them and run no risks whatever. A man who year after year will allow a little pest like a sheep tick that can be so easily and cheaply exterminated, yet capable of taking so many dollars yearly out of his pocket, is a fool.

Now the question comes up, What shall I use for a dip? One will say buttermilk, another will say brine and some say, "Get some tobacco stems and steep them up, that is what father used to do." Yes, yes, yes, all have been used and the sheep tick lived and died with old age and left a lot of progeny to mourn his loss. The facts are men use these homemade preparations because they cost next to nothing and it furnishes an excuse for dipping so that cranks like we won't shoot 'em so hard. That is all there is of it. Tobacco stems may, if used strong enough, kill lice and ticks, so will tobacco dust put in the wool, but not one farmer in 500 ever does make the solution strong enough to be effective and that five hundredth man is sick himself or the hired man is laid up for three days and the sheep, more or less of them, are made sick also. "Well, what shall we use?" Why, just send to some of the advertisers of sheep dip and get a ready prepared dip and then use it as directed and wipe out sheep ticks and sheep lice and have done with it. And when you get the dip don't think you know more than the man who made the dip and go to using it half strength, thinking you are practicing economy by so doing. You are not. It isn't the stink that kills the tick, but the required regulated strength.

Sheep Dip For Hogs.

A swine breeder who had a number of pigs 8 or 10 weeks old, old enough to wean, noticed that they were not doing well, and on closer examination found that "some were lousy, some a little mangy, and others looked measly-lied." He used kerosene oil, but it failed to relieve the trouble, and it occurred to him that as sheep dip was good to cure sheep suffering similar troubles he would give it a trial, and he reports the result as follows: "I put in a barrel 25 gallons of water and a quart of dip and stirred it up good, then dipped the pigs. Never saw such a change. Not over 15 minutes' work. Left barrel in the pen, and whenever I saw a pig having the least thing the matter with the skin I dumped it in the barrel of dip. I have the cleanest, nicest lot of shotes ever raised and advise all raisers of hogs to try it. Dip your pigs several times at from 4 to 12 weeks old and see for yourselves. It will more than save the price in feed and in better growth, kills all lice and humor in the skin, besides disinfecting the pigs." The pens also should have been thoroughly cleaned and rid of lice by sprinkling with solution of carbolic acid or anything else that would have the same effect, and probably this was done.—Live Stock.

Canadian Ranching.

Canada's greatest cattle ranching districts are the territories of Alberta and Assiniboia, N. W. T. Their borders inclose a country equal to the combined area of Great Britain, Ireland, Portugal, Denmark, Holland and Belgium, it is said. Calgary, the central and principal of the ranching towns, is situated over 850 miles further north than Montreal, and the surrounding country forms one of the best cattle ranching districts in America. Throughout the greater part of Alberta and Assiniboia the immense herds of horses, cattle and sheep roam at will the year round.

HOW TO TREAT MUMPS.

Seasonable Hints on a Painful Ailment of Children.

Mumps is most frequent between the ages of 5 and 15 years, and, as a rule, the same individual has it but once, says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. It runs its course in from two to three weeks.

The inflammation begins in one or both parotid and other salivary glands and rapidly extends to the surrounding tissue, causing swelling and great pain. The left parotid gland is most frequently attacked first, the right parotid becoming implicated two or four days afterward and often later. Sometimes only one side is affected.

The attack is rather sudden, the first symptoms being a feeling of languor, great depression, chill fever with a temperature of 101 to 103 degrees F. Dry skin, quick pulse, headache and convulsions occur in children who are subject to them. These are followed in a day or two by stiffness and great pain in the angles of the jaw, the mouth being opened with difficulty. A swelling will be noticed below and in front of the ear, pear shaped in appearance, and having a soft, flabby feeling. In from two to five days this swelling matures, remains in this condition about three days and then rapidly recedes. The environing parts are so affected sometimes that the features are greatly distorted, and at times the skin is shiny and red.

Sometimes the saliva is increased and sometimes diminished, while earache or a constant ringing in the ears is present, and deafness occasionally occurs, due to the swelling of the eustachian tube.

The first thing to do is to put the patient to bed. Reduce and control the fever by mild febrile medicines. A bath or a sponging with tepid water is of great benefit. Watch the urine and keep the bowels open. The food should be entirely liquid, on account of the difficulty in swallowing. If there is much pain and restlessness, an anodyne should be given. Dover's powder is a good, safe one and will be found in nearly every household. Place either warm or cold packs, whichever is the most pleasant to the patient, to the affected parts. Keep the patient warm and comfortable and at an even temperature, allowing no drafts. If the swelling continues to linger longer than the sixth or seventh day or if pus or matter is detected, medical aid should be obtained.

How to Make Tomato Soup.

Cook three cupfuls each of brown stock and tomatoes, with a slice of onion and a sprig of parsley, a bit of bay leaf and four cloves, 15 minutes; strain; add one-third of a cupful each of browned butter and flour, and salt, pepper and cayenne to taste. Cook two minutes. Add one tablespoonful of wine, strain and serve.

How to Cure Burns.

A great deal of unnecessary suffering is endured in this world, and much of it is caused by burns and scalds. There is a simple relief for such accidents, which will prove invaluable if properly applied. An application of common whiting and oil, or water if oil cannot be obtained, will draw the fire out of the burn or scald and give immediate relief. Make the ingredients into a paste and lay it over the part affected, covering it with some old linen and cotton wadding. This is one of the most soothing and at the same time best of remedies.

How to Make Potato Bread.

Boil four white potatoes and mash. Add three eggs, one-half cup sugar, one cup shortening, one pint of water, one yeast cake, flour enough to make a sponge. Let it rise two hours. Add salt to taste; make up like bread. Set to rise again; make out in pans. Rise and bake.

How to Make Curry Soup.

Skin, scald and chop two small onions; pare, quarter and chop a large apple; wash half a cupful of rice; melt a tablespoonful of butter in a pan and brown the apple and onion in it; draw the pan to the side of the fire; mix a teaspoonful of curry powder with three tablespoonfuls of cold water. Add it, with the rice and three pints of stock, to the pan and boil until the rice is cooked. Add a teaspoonful of salt and half a teaspoonful of cayenne extract.

How to Make Herring Savory.

Take some soft herring roes, pepper them and roll each one in a thin slice of bacon. Fry in a little bacon fat till done through. Cut some rounds of bread with a fluted cutter, fry crisply a golden brown color. Place each roll on a round of bread and serve very hot.

How to Use Cold Baked Beans.

Simmer three cups of cold baked beans in six cups of water 30 minutes. Season with salt, pepper, a great spoon of tomato catchup, an onion chopped fine (omit if you do not like onion), then strain and add 1½ cups of stewed and strained tomato. Mix together a tablespoon each of butter and flour, add to the soup and boil a few minutes. Serve with croutons thus: Cut slices of bread in small squares and fry brown in butter.

How to Renovate Black Cloth.

Black cloth skirts and coats that have become rusty or mud marked should be cleansed and brightened in the following manner: Boil one pound of logwood, half pound of bruised gall, a quarter of a pound of green vitriol, and two and a half quarts of water. Boil for an hour and a half, strain and sponge all over the cloth when quite cold.

How to Make Fancy Sandwiches.

Chop cold chicken very fine and soften it to a paste with butter and cream. Season with salt and pepper and spread on thin graham or wheat bread. Mushrooms added to the paste give it a spicy flavor. They should be stewed and chopped fine.

Text of Indian Agent Mercer's Order to Cass Lakers.

Capt. Mercer, Indian agent, has finished notifying intruding white men on the reservation to remove from the same. His notification consists of a printed circular which is posted in all parts of Cass Lake and scattered in all the houses. It contains, in addition to extracts from the laws relative to reservations, the following notice:

"By order of the commissioner of Indian affairs, pursuant to instructions from the secretary of the interior, all persons, firms or corporations, trespassing upon Indian lands within the limits of the Leech lake Indian agency, are hereby notified to vacate and remove therefrom within thirty days from this date.

"All buildings, stores and other property remaining within the limits of said agency after said period of thirty days, shall be subject to the penalties according to the statutes in such case provided.

"Attention is also called to the fact that a right-of-way granted to a railroad carries with it no authority for the use of the land granted other than for the construction and operation of the railroad. A general merchandise store on a railroad right-of-way is not allowed.

"All white men living with Indian women within the limits of the reservations of this agency, not legally married, are trespassers, and are included in the above notice; and any white man who, being legally married to an Indian woman, violates the law, disturbs the peace—whose conduct is immoral, whose presence on the reservation is from any cause whatever detrimental to the welfare of the Indians—will be removed."

At a council of Chippewas it was definitely determined to "go the whole hog" and demand also the removal of the Scanlan & Gipson saw mill, which, they allege, gives no employment to Indians. It is not now believed that there will be serious opposition to removal, though it was reported at first that ex-Judge Ives, now publishing a newspaper there, proposed to resist the order.

Glass Bricks.

Glass houses are to be the latest scientific improvements. Glass can be manufactured into bricks that are almost as cheap as the ordinary clay product and are far more durable and healthy. A glass brick is practically indestructible. It will not absorb damp or poison, and it is absolutely noncombustible. But perhaps the greatest advantage of all is that glass is the best nonconductor known, and a glass house or barn ought to be safe from electrical storms. A writer in a French journal describes a room in a glass house built in Brittany of tinted transculent blocks, and speaks of the sedative influence of the pale green light that came through the walls into the study, producing, he says, the same calming effect that one feels in a glen where the light is transmitted through tender leaves. But, after all, a glass house with an electric light in it rather gives a retiring man a shiver, to say nothing about a retiring woman.—Ex.

$200 IN GOODS

Stolen from W. J. Wilson's Store in Ingalls.

W. J. Wilson, who clerked in S. Bisazza's store in this city last fall and later went up to Ingalls, is still playing in hard luck, according to an item in the Ingalls correspondence in the Warren Sheaf. It says:

W. J. Wilson's store was broken into last Sunday night and a lot of clothing, jewelry and numerous other things taken to the amount of $200 or more. Tracks leading east for three quarters of a mile were followed, then turned south, but could not be found after that. No clue can be found as yet, but Constable Johnson started with a search warrant for them. He thinks he can find them. Justice Ingalls issued the warrant. Mr. Wilson is quite excited over it. There was no one in the store at the time the goods were taken.

It is reported that Wilson has made an assignment, and that several of the wholesale dealers of whom he purchased goods do not believe that the goods were stolen, but shipped away by Wilson. It is said that the matter will be thoroughly investigated.

Take Care of the Binder.

A writer in the Dakota Farmer gives the following timely advice in regard to getting binders in condition in season:

"There are many farmers in harvest time who start their binders and the machines work for a while, but soon everything goes wrong and the machine refuses to work. The farmer, in such a fix, starts to town and brings out the agent, who, when he has looked the binder over and can find nothing, tells the farmer it is worn out. Then the farmer goes to town, buys a new machine and gives his note in payment—when he might have used his old machine still. Every farmer should take his binder apart from one to two weeks before harvest time, inspect every wear where is a box worn or put in a new one, and see that all bolts are in place and tightened. When the machine has been put up, take a square and square the machine up, using the rod that runs over the bull wheel between the elevator boards. No matter how old the machine may be, by having all worn out parts replaced and the machine squared you save money and time. One of my neighbors had a machine that would not work, and was about to buy a new one when I went over and squared it up. I found it two inches and a half out of true. He hitched his horses up and the machine worked nicely. He saved $130, and in the fall gave me $2 for my trouble. By knowing just what is wrong you will save money every time."

Married Fourteen Years.

Last Friday was the fourteenth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. James Meehan, Jr., and a number of their friends surprised them at their home that evening. Owing to the inclemency of the weather the attendance was not very large, but those present spent a very enjoyable evening in card playing and dancing. Those present were: Messrs. and Mesdames C. C. Jackson, F. J. Stebbins, K. M. Hansen, H. Lewin, W. T. Mullarky, C. L. Dobner, C. J. Knox, John W. Eastman and Miss May Vaughan.

Daily Mail.

Commencing last Saturday, July 1, daily mail service was put on the Excel-Holt-Ingalls route. This is a convenience to the settlers up north.

A LIVELY TIME

Had in C. A. Robbecke's Annex Last Week.

The following, which is vouched for by all habituates of the Hotel Ogahmah, was furnished the NEWS by a spectator:

One day last week a traveling salesman of a nervous temperament put up at the Ogahmah, and, as night approached, began to entertain doubts as to the security from robbery of his tempting display of goods set forth in the sample room. He accordingly had a makeshift bed made for himself upon one of the sample tables, and at dark personally mounted guard over his treasures, first ascertaining the sleeping quarters of the hotel employes in case it became necessary to call for assistance during the night.

Now it so happens that a worthy citizen of this community, residing at the Ogahmah and justly respected for his sterling integrity and personal worth, was detained till a late hour on that night by—business, and, upon his return, deemed it but just to his sleeping neighbors to retire as quietly as the circumstances would permit. To this end he stepped into the sample room and began to remove his shoes, intending to tip-toe to bed in stockinged feet.

The watchful drummer from his coign of vantage on the sample table viewed the arrival of this intruder with grave suspicion and, when the night prowler seated himself in a quiet corner and commenced softly to remove his footwear, suspicion ripened into certainty and, with a horrified yell, the knight of the grip abandoned his lonely outpost and making a record breaking leap retreated upon the reserves with enthusiasm. Although somewhat surprised at the midnight call to arms, the Ogahmah guards fell in promptly and forming a line of skirmishers advanced boldly to the attack. Charles Helm formed the center of the line of assault, armed with a ponderous piece of artillery of mammoth calibre and murderous appearance. Julius Bushnell and John Conroy occupied the right and left wings, respectively, and the gallant drummer formed himself into a second line or support. This formidable force pushed rapidly forward into the hostile territory and quickly developed the enemy in force, but the foe, far from being terrified at the warlike demonstration, being a man of great personal courage and further strengthened by his own sense of moral rechtude, stood pat and for a moment hostilities seemed imminent. A challenge by the assaulting column lead to mutual recognition and explanations were in order. The indignant suspect failed to appreciate the humor of the situation, and the suspicions of the frightened traveling man were not wholly allayed so that an acrimonious discussion punctuated by the most lurid of expeltives ensued until finally the principals were induced to retire the one to his downy couch and the other to resume his vigil on the patient sample table. The domestic militia thereupon returned to quarters and once more peace reigned in the Ogahmah.

5 PER CENT.

The First State Bank Declares a Dividend.

Last Saturday, July 1st, the First State Bank declared its usual semi-annual per cent. dividend upon its capital stock. A prosperous bank is the greatest boon with which any community is blessed, and the people of Thief River Falls should take a pardonable pride in the fact that we have a dividend-paying bank located here. While a large per cent. of the banks in the Red River Valley are doing a losing business, the business of the First State Bank, since it has been under the management of President C. L. Dobner, has continually increased.

July Weather.

The weather predictions of Dr. Hicks, during the past two months or more, have been watched and followed with increased interest, because of their remarkable correctness. It will be a gratification to know that he says that the destructive storms so fatal to life and devastation of property will cease, in a measure, for this season, before the close of the month of June. Summer storms will continue, and some may be severe, but the fatal frequency of tornadoes will be checked.

July will open with fair weather over most of the country. A mercury disturbance extends from the 2d to the 12th embracing two periods of storms, from the 2d to the 5th, and the 8th to the 12th. A warm period will previal about the 5th, relieved by cooler weather. From the 9th to the 12th will be one of the "heated torms" of the summer, apt to be attended with severe electric storms. Heavy local rains are to be expected. The 14th to the 16th is another period, and threatening weather to follow the new moon on the 19th. Cooler and better weather will follow the 22d, and then another period of storms extending to the 28th, with local summer showers, thunder and lightning and gusts of wind. These storms will work their way eastward with the incoming of August. In portions of the country dry weather will prevail, and in consequence of the heat a drought will follow. But July will be less boisterous that June, and freed from violent disturbances is not to be dreaded.

By John W. Eastman.
PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

It is rather insulting to call G. S. Pease's gubenatorial boom a joke. Placing a man with brains in the governor's chair is not a joke.

J. Adam Bede has announced his intention of becoming a candidate for the Republican nomination in the Sixth district. If he can secure the St. Louis county delegation he will probably be nominated.

GOOD WRESTLERS

Gave an Entertainment Here on the Fourth.

Duncan McMillan, the champion heavy weight mixed wrestler of the northwest, and Fred Fair, of North Dakota, wrestled in Dr. Fountain's tent on the evening of the Fourth. The event was witnessed by a large crowd, and a good exhibition was given by these two princes of the mat.

In the forenoon of the day, McMillan, who masked under the name of Joe Clark, wrestled three local men—Toney Horeysh, John Rogers and W. V. Vreed—for a purse of $50, which he succeeded in winning very easily.

Defends Vining.

Mr. R. B. Vining, agent for the Theo. Hamm Brewing Co., had been asked several times by different people here to get up a float for the 4th of July. While he did not consider it necessary to do so for the sake of advertising his business he thought by doing so it would please the people and also help out the parade. Accordingly he went to considerable trouble and expense and got out a float that he thought would not be objectionable in any way. But to his surprise he found, as he drove out on the street, that Mr. Ira C. Richardson thought different and told him he had ought to be ashamed of himself and ought to know better than to come out onto the street on the 4th of July with such a disgraceful float and ordered him off the street. Although somewhat dissappointed, he drove home, not being out on the street ten minutes. Consequently only a few people had an opportunity to see the float, but ALL who DID see it thought it very nice and spoke in the highest praise of it and REGRETTED very much that it could not be allowed to proceed in the parade which some thought was a parade of itself. In all of the parades that Mr. Vining had seen in large cities he has noticed that they are arranged for the purpose of advertising ALL KINDS of business, and the more display people can make as a RULE at such times the better they are usually appreciated by the committee in charge of the parade, but he finds he is not too old to learn yet, and that it takes all kinds of people to make a world and that the people who accepted ten dollars of the Brewing Co's. money for the celebration would not allow him to participate in the parade.

A Citizen.

Horseless Carriage.

We learn from a source that should be reliable that the mails between Stephen and Roseau are to be carried in a horseless carriage after July 1st next. The carrier will make the entire round trip every day, and his outfit will cost him about $3,000. The world to move. It is about time for a bycycle propelled by gas or electricity instead of foot power to make its advent in this section of the country.—Warren Register.

The rainfall this morning was the heaviest of the season, having rained 1.75 inches.

THE FOURTH.

As It Was Celebrated in Thief River Falls.

The celebration of the Fourth of July in Thief River Falls this year was not what had been anticipated. The day was fine, but owing to the heavy rains of Monday evening the roads leading into the city were placed in poor condition and few farmers were in town to celebrate.

The celebration was commenced in the morning by a parade, led by the Ogahmah band, and a very creditable showing was made. After the parade had traversed several of the streets, exercises were held on the grounds back of R. Oen's hardware store. The Declaration of Independence, was read by Wayne Richardson, and the Rev. Henry Logan was orator of the day.

In the afternoon the races, ball game, etc., were had. The following were the winners of the different events:

Horse race—Jarenson, 1st; La Bree, 2d.

In the evening a large display of fire works was had, and a large crowd attended the bowery dance given by Backe and Amundson.

Notes.

"Nigger" Boss did a big business.

The base ball game was quite interesting.

The attendance at the bowery dance was not very large in the afternoon, but it was different in the evening.

The young boy found plenty of places to spend his money. There were fourteen places where lemonade, candy, etc., were sold.

One of the unpleasant happenings of the day, which was generally regretted by most of the citizens, was the treatment accorded to an esteemed old fellow citizen, Capt. R. B. Vining, by the committee in charge. Mr. Vining had spent considerable time and money in fixing up his float, and it made a very creditable showing. There was nothing objectionable in its appearance. Had the committee informed Mr. Vining when he first commenced to build his float that he would not be allowed in the parade, it would have saved him considerable embarassment and trouble. To be publically dismissed from a parade in which a traveling fakir and quack doctor was allowed to take a prominent part, is something this white-haired old gentleman, who has lived in Thief River Falls since its formation, justly resents.

The Modern Woodmen have rented the old school building in the First ward and will hold their meetings there hereafter.

A BIG CONTRACT

For the Cutting of 20,000,000 Feet of Logs.

P. Moylan, the well known Red Lake settler, the first of the week closed a large logging contract with the Thief River Falls Lumber company. It is for the cutting of about 20,000,000 feet of logs. The timber to be logged is located on Shotley brook and it is on land owned by the Thief River Falls Lumber company. Work will be commenced in August and it is expected that about 3,000,000 feet will be delivered in this city by fall. Mr. Moylan will also build another dam on Shotley brook.

Easily Pleased.

Husband—Now that you've got that new gown I hope you're satisfied.

Wife—Well, you see, it isn't a walking costume, which was what I wanted. But it will be all right as soon as you get me the carriage to go with it.—La Caricature.

Didn't Signify.

"Look at this man," said the attorney, pointing to the prisoner. "Does he look like one who would commit a crime?"

"No," replied the witness. "But neither do you."—Philadelphia North American.

Why does the boy hate the beer?

He doesn't—he loves it because it is Hamm's delicious brew. It is the medicine his kind aunty has mixed in it that he dislikes. Never mind he is to have a drink of the pure article afterwards to take the bad taste away.

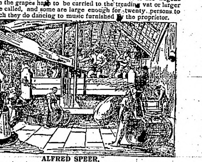
CARRYING THE PORT GRAPES TO THE WINERY, ON THE HEADS OF MEN AND WOMEN, NEAR THE VALLE DE MENETIZ WHERE THEY ARE DUMPED IN THE MASHING VATS TO BE TRODDEN FOR PORT WINE.

The rugged hills with projecting rocks of brown stone and shale containing a large quantity of iron, make it impossible to use wagons here hence the grapes have to be carried to the treading vat or larger as they are called, and some are large enough for twenty persons to tread, which they do dancing to music furnished by the proprietor.



ALFRED SPEER,
the Pioneer wine grower of New Jersey whose Port Grape wine and Burgandy rivals the world, imported the Port Grape vines many years ago, and planted vineyards in the Passaic Valley N. J. The soil in Passaic county, New Jersey, is identical to that of de Menetiz.

Speer's New Jersey Vineyards
are situated in the Passaic valley below the mountain range and the grapes are caried to the winery in the town of Passaic where they are mashed between rollers made of rubber, which do not break the seeds, and made into wine.

These grand wines of Speer's that have mellowed in flavor in the course of years of ripening, are the choicest wines in this country and can only be obtained by paying a price that is higher than new wines, from western vineyards. Mr. Speer deems it necessary for a healthy wine that it be allowed years to mature in wood to get rid of its coarse parts; with this object he keeps his wines several years in fumigated cellars and frequently racks before bottling or offering for sale. The reputation of Speer's wines as a valuable medicinal and family wine extends around the world.

I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

WANTED.—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. QUEER OLD LAWS.

Saxon Forefathers Valued Horses Higher Than Human Life.

Among our Saxon forefathers horses were so highly valued that while homicide might be compounded by payment of a fine in cattle, horse stealing was a capital offense, says the London Live Stock Journal. Later, when cattle ceased to be their only wealth and coinage came into use, pecuniary fines were inflicted for homicide. By the riparian laws the option of payment in coin or cattle was allowed. Under the salic and riparian laws homicide had different degrees of guilt, decided, not altogether according to malice, motive or intention, but also and apparently this was the chief consideration, according to the rank of the person killed. A similar regard for the dignity of the person robbed also entered into the estimate of the guilt of theft, in connection with the value of the property stolen. For stealing a sucking calf, restitution to the estimated value of the animal was first of all due to the owner, then cost of the owner's plaint must be paid by the thief, and, thirdly, a fine paid to the state as a penalty for breaking the law. For stealing a bull the fine as well as the compensation was heavier, but here came in the question from whom the bull was stolen and what were the owner's rank and dignity. To steal the king's bull was a very grave offense indeed, not quite capital, but punishable by a ruinously heavy fine, whereas the guilt of taking a poor man's bull was reckoned as proportionately small. Before the use of money was introduced, the fines for inferior offenses (including doubtless homicide) were sometimes paid in horses instead of cattle. This seems a curious inconsistency, that the law, which valued a horse more highly than a man's life, yet exacted payment for man killing to the extent of a plurality of horses (each horse worth more than a man, by the law's valuation) or an alternative equivalent in cattle.

Attend to the Rams.

It is too late to sow seed just about the time the harvest is expected, and the shepherd who neglects his rams at this time is doing this very thing, says The American Sheep Breeder. A ram in vigorous, active condition is not so made in a few days, nor in a few weeks. We should think how a little seed needs months to make its full growth and to gather in the plant sufficient nutrition and substance to form the new germ. A whole summer is needed thus to mature a plant of corn and prepare the seed for the next year's harvest. This applies with equal force, but more conspicuously, as the sheep excels the mere plant in worth to the conduct of the flock. Many shepherds wish to have all twin lambs. Two are better than one—sometimes, but not always. A strong, vigorous lamb is better than puny twins or even than fairly good twins, if the dam is only able to care fully for one of them, and if one will have strong double births he must attend to the ram first and begin now to put him in proper condition for the service expected from him by and by. He does not want to be fattened exactly, but he must be in prime condition, for we cannot get any animal in such condition without putting some fat on his carcass. The best of grain food in the summer for the ram is linseed oil meal, from which the oil has been separated, and the residue of protein is left in large excess. This part of the food is especially useful in sustaining all the vital organs, and thus gives that essentially needed animal vigor to the male animal, especially such a one as the father of a flock which has so large a number of females demanding attention. The time to begin re-enforcing the rams is now at hand. The twin breeding flock is greatly desired by every shepherd. But it is made only by years of work in building up the constitution of it by the highest possible feeding. For the scientific principle at the bottom of it is that animals become more prolific as their supply of food increases. This is one of the examples of the balance of nature, and the economical disposal of natural products for the best interests of the universe, in which naturally nothing shall go to waste.

Give Sheep Plenty of Room.

After some years' experience in raising sheep, I have concluded that it is not best to keep them confined too closely, writes Frank M. Beverly in Land and a Living. Their confinement in one place breeds disease and it may be said is a drawback generally. Sheep will not thrive alone on what you may feed them, but they require something that is indigenous to the woodlands. The farmers in Virginia 25 years ago raised large flocks of sheep, and they were allowed to run in the woods both winter and summer, except during deep and continued snows, when they were brought in to keep them from becoming poisoned by eating ivy. They had to be given salt, but required little in the way of feeding. They were thrifty, and always looked clean and healthful. Of course this plan is not now practicable, except in a few of the more isolated sections of the country, but the plan should be carried out so far as circumstances will permit. Your flocks may have to be kept within fenced inclosures, but they should be shifted from one place to another as often as possible. I knew a man a few years ago who bought up 100 or more sheep during the fall and winter, intending to go into the business of sheep raising on a rather large scale. He kept them in a field where there was a large barn, in which he housed them every night. He fed them all they would eat of corn, fodder, hay and oats, but when summer came about one-half of them died, and the other half looked as if they might as well die. He then sold the flock at less than half the price per head he had paid, and thus ended his dream of sheep raising.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION.

How to Prevent and Cure This Prevalent Affliction.

Heredity has much to do with nervous disorders. If one's ancestors have been a long lived race, phenomenal vitality is often inherited, and with this aid much can be prevented or cured. If the opposite is the case, however, no pains should be spared in endeavoring as far as possible to counteract any predisposition to disease. Of the methods by which nervous prostration can be prevented one of the most important is to have three good, varied and well cooked meals per day. Take plenty of time to eat them. No meal should be eaten in less than half an hour—or, better still, even an hour, especially for dinner. Good can be derived, too, from the surroundings and conditions under which the meal is taken. Food is worse than wasted which is taken into the system when laboring under great excitement, grief, anxiety or other disturbing conditions. Above all things avoid all highly seasoned foods—many of them are productive of far more harm than good.

A proper amount of sleep at nighttime is another preventive. Take eight hours' sound sleep. By this I do not mean merely eight hours in bed, but eight hours' restful sleep. If you do not fall asleep easily, or the sleep is broken or restless, or you lie awake for an hour or more after going to bed, you should remain in bed ten hours. To endeavor to get along with less than the natural amount of sleep is simply courting nervous disorder.

It has been found, too, that many people become broken down nervously because they are bored and worried by the vexation of a restless and purposeless life. Overwork is bad, but want of work is equally harmful. To worry and fret over trifles has undoubtedly a great deal to do with nervous depression.

Every woman should get a certain amount of moderate exercise in the open air. It makes no difference what kind is taken so long as it exercises all the muscles and is not followed by a sense of fatigue. The question is not what exercise you think you ought to have, but what you can endure. If you find you can only walk one hour each day without becoming fatigued, then that is enough. If you cannot take much exercise, then walk half an hour, but if half an hour's exercise exhausts you so that you do not quickly recover after a short rest then you are in need of a doctor.

How to Bake Shad.

Empty and wash the fish with care, but do not open it more than is necessary, and keep on the head and fins. Stuff it with forcemeat, sew it up and rub it all over with the yolk of an egg and a little of the stuffing. Put into the pan in which the fish is to be baked about a gill of vinegar, and in this bake the fish for about an hour and a half.

How to Wash Chamois Gloves.

The proper way is to wash them in tepid water, taking care to use plenty of white soap. They can either be washed on the hand or off, though it is easier to get at them by wearing them and using a nailbrush. They should be rinsed in strong tepid soapsuds and not in clear water, because that takes out the oil and makes the gloves hard. The more they are washed the softer and finer they become. They should never be wrung out, but rather pressed out, and then they should be rolled in a dry towel. Keep changing the towel until all of the water is absorbed, and before the gloves are thoroughly dry put them on the hands.

How to Prevent Spring Fever.

To prevent spring fever a large amount of exercise in the open air must be taken daily. If quinine, a blood purifier and a liver medicine are taken daily and if the alimentary canal is kept clear, spring fever will not bother any one. If the blood and the organs of the body are in a healthy condition, spring fever is impossible.

How to Make Maryland Chowder.

Half pound fat salt pork, chopped and browned in the frying pan, 25 clams; cut off the hard part and chop the clams fine; six chopped onions, one dozen potatoes chopped, one quart tomatoes, pinch of thyme, very little salt and pepper, one tablespoonful worcestershire sauce, one quart of oysters. Let the clams, onions, pork, tomatoes and seasoning boil three hours with one pint of water and the juice of the clams. Add the potatoes three-quarters of an hour before serving and the oysters ten minutes before.

How to Fry Celery.

Put the heads of celery into boiling water with a little salt; boil 15 minutes. Cut each head in two or three pieces; put in a dish; season with pepper, salt, chopped parsley and vinegar or lemon juice. Leave an hour, then dip in frying batter and fry in boiling fat. When a nice color, drain, sprinkle with salt and serve.

How to Cook Herring Roe.

Allow a plain milk biscuit to each guest. Have about eight soft roes of cooked fresh herrings, make very hot over a gentle fire and season with cayenne and salt. Melt two ounces of butter in a frying pan, lay in the biscuits and cook gently. Dust them well with pepper. Curl round the roes and lay one on each biscuit. Serve very hot. Put a little yolk of hard boiled egg that has been rubbed through a sieve alternately with some finely chopped parsley on the top of each.

How to Make Indian Toast.

Place about a tablespoonful of butter in a basin and stand it over a saucepan of boiling water. When melted, stir in two well beaten eggs, a teaspoonful of anchovy paste, a little cayenne pepper and a few chopped capers. Stir until the mixture begins to set, spread on croutons of fried bread, garnish and serve at once.

The score was 8 to 20, and the game was played on the chief's section north of town, M. E. Todd and Dan Shaw being umpires. FROM AN ASYLUM

Mrs. Worden Was Rescued by Her Son.

Fred Worden, a prosperous farmer living near Fisher, Minn., returned from California Sunday morning with his aged mother, who will in future make her home with Mr. and Mrs. Worden. The trip was the sequel to the one he made a year ago to the same place to visit his mother and a brother, with whom he supposed she was living. Instead of this he found that his brother had had his mother incarcerated in the insane asylum at Stockton, claiming that she was mentally unballanced. Mr. Worden immediately investigated the matter and concluded that his mother was as sane as anyone, and that the insanity talk by his brother was simply put up to escape the expense of her maintainance at his home. Believing this to be a fact, he a once took steps to secure his mother's release, which was only accomplished a short time ago.

Mrs. Worden is a healthy looking old lady and does not show the effects of her year's imprisonment at the asylum. She was naturally overjoyed at being released from the institution where she had been so unjustly confined, and the fact that a son, worthy the name, would provide a home for her in future, and give her the protection any son should be glad to offer the one who gave him birth.

Relative to the unnatural conduct of her other son, Mrs. Worden nothing to say, although she felt most keenly the lack of affection he displayed by getting rid of her in the manner he employed.

On account of the red tape necessary in connection with securing the release of a patient in an insane hospital it was nearly a year after the proceedings were started ere Mr. Worden received the news that he might start at once, as his mother could return with him. This he did about ten days ago and returned as stated on Sunday morning.—Grand Forks Herald.

ACQUITTED

A. P. Swanstrom Is Not Guilty of Embezzlement.

Andrew P. Swanstrom, a brother of J. W. Swanstrom, of this city, and a gentleman well known here, is not guilty of embezzlement of the funds of the Order of Minnehaha. Mention of his arrest was made by the NEWS some months ago, and the case was was tried before Judge Lewis in St. Paul last week. The evidence did not show that Swanstrom had been guilty of any of the charges made against him, and the judge ordered the jury to bring in a verdict of not guilty.

Cass Lakers Must Go.

Secretary Hitchcock announced finally last week that there will be neither a suspension nor a modification of the order of June 22 directing the removal of all trespassers or intruders on the lands of the Leech Lake Indian reservation in Minnesota within thirty days therefrom.

The Noxious Weed Law.

A law enacted by the last legislature is of particular interest just at this time to the street commissioner and road over-seers. It provides for the cutting of weeds along the public highways and upon the streets and alleys of our villages and cities, and requires that this work must be done not earlier than July 15, and not later than September 1 of each year. The road over-seers of the various districts of the several towns of the county and the street commissioners of the villages and cities are the parties named by the law to see that its provisions are carried out. By this act the above named officials are authorized to reserve a portion of the road work to do the job, and they should see to it that they do not call out all the road work earlier in the season and thus neglect the weed cutting when the proper time comes. The above named officials now have the authority to order out those parties who have mowing machines, scythes, etc., the same as they now order them out with wagons, shovels, plows or other tools used in road work. This law is one that should be carried out to the very letter, as it would, in addition to removing the unsightly forest of weeds along the public highway, prevent them from ripening and befouling adjoining fields with noxious weeds.—Red Wing Republican.

Poachers Beware.

There are large chunks of trouble ahead for the men who take their guns and go hunting the juicy prairie chickens before the time the law says they are ripe. This practice has been common of late years, and all true sportsmen will rejoice that the game commission has taken the necessary steps to curtail, if not suppress it. To this end Executive Agent Beutner paid a visit to Minneapolis a few days ago and appointed five deputy wardens, who will report to Warden Donoghue, who has charge of the work in Minneapolis. The names of these men will not be made public; the authorities believing better results will be obtained if the poachers are kept in ignorance of the indentity of the men who are delegated to protect the game.—St. Paul Globe.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

Speaking of the state treasurership the New Ulm Journal says: "Republican papers through the state, whenever they mention the matter at all, appear to be unanimous for the nomination of J. H. Block, of St. Peter, to succeed A. J. Koerner as state treasurer next year. Mr. Block was a strong candidate six years ago, and, although defeated in the convention, turned in and has since, as always before, done his utmost for the success of the ticket. He is a vote-getter, in every respect of the word, and would be a tower of strenth to the Republican ticket.

The conceded candidacy of Judge Collins for governor has been the cause of considerable newspaper comment of late throughout the state, and while some of our contemporaries are inclined to favor a candidate from their own district, they admit that the judge possesses all the elements necessary to insure a Republican victory. His eminent qualifications for the position and his ability as a successful campaigner are of course too well known to be questioned, and under the circumstances he is likely to be nominated without much difficulty.—St. Peter Free Press.

An opinion has been handed down by Chief Justice Buck, of the supreme court, in the case of the State of Minnesota vs. Alfred J. Barry, of Litchfield, which means that Mr. Barry will have to serve a term of five years in the penitentiary at Stillwater for shipping what is known to the trade as "stored" wheat, or wheat which has been deposited by farmers in his elevator, and for which they had not been paid. The decision is a sweeping one and will do much to discourage this particular form of traffic in the property of other people.—Market Record.

Dan Lawler, a former candidate for governor on the Democratic ticket, utters these loyal sentiments: "So long as a single American soldier is in the field striving to uphold the honor of his country's flag, I recognize one, and only one duty, and that is the duty of every American citizen, Democrat Republican or Populist, to hold up the hands of the president of this republic, commander-in-chief of the American army. On this issue parties cannot and will not divide. And he little knows the temper of the people of this land, who, for partisan gain, attempts to manufacture an issue out of a condition caused by a war for justice and humanity, approved by the enlightened sense of civilization and originating in the purest and holiest motives.

Getting Ready.

Capt. R. J. McDonald, of the government improvement boat, announces that the work of improving the navigation of the Red Lake river will be commenced in a few days. The water in the river has been so high thus far this spring that it has not been deemed advisable to start. Mr. McDonald is now receiving bids from the local merchants for the supplying of the boat with meat and groceries. About fifteen men will be employed, and eight hours is all the men are required to work each day.

A Pipe Story?

It is stated on good authority that the forces are silently at work for an extension of the Northern Pacific from Red Lake Falls through Thief River Falls to Roseau.—Roseau Times.

FOOD FOR CHILDREN.

How to Feed the Little Ones to Keep Them Healthy.

As soon as teeth begin to come, saliva begins to be secreted and food more concentrated, then simple milk, is not only permissible, but desirable. Go slowly with the new dietary and watch the movements. Allow such and as much as does not change markedly the color and consistency of these out of the normal. It is the identical rule that obtains in feeding young calves. If things go wrong, move back to or toward milk, or milk and long boiled strained gruels, or a tested baby food. But ordinarily it is safe to give meat juice, soft boiled egg, scraped ripe apple or peach, orange and grape juice, other fruits baked or stewed, potato sparingly, cream and butter moderately, bread, soups and very small portions of tender beef and chicken, chopped fine. Seedy fruits, hard or fibrous fruits, sweet dishes, jellies and the like, coffee, baked meats, pies, rich cake, preserves—these are the class of articles that will cause regret.

It is thoughtlessness in allowing, say, sausage or doughnuts to reach a baby's hands and mouth that leads to trouble, rather than misjudgment, where any mother sets out seriously to give her baby only what she finds (by the movements), day by day, it can do well on. Where milk (always to be continued, in some form, as a liberal constituent) is not relished it often will be by beating up an egg, taking half, filling the cup up with milk and salting and sugaring a little.—New Voice.

How to Make Sauce For Chops.

A hot sauce for chops is made as follows: Oil an ounce of butter, stir in gradually a dessertspoonful of made mustard and a good pinch of cayenne. Chop finely a few chillies and add to the above. Mix all together and pour over the meat. Another sauce: Fry some sliced onions in dripping till a rich brown, add some brown sauce and stew all together for a few minutes. Pass all through a hair sieve, add a squeeze of lemon and serve.

How to Detect Meningitis.

A severe headache is usually the first symptom, and especially in children, should then be observed. The headache may continue for a day and then apparently cease. On the second day violent sickness appears, and the patient vomits frequently. When this ceases the headache returns, and it is more severe than ever. A high fever accompanies the first headache. It disappears and with the second appearance of the fever returns with new force. The brain becomes congested. It is then the head begins to draw back. If a physician is not called before the disease reaches this stage his services are likely to prove of no avail. The parent should not neglect calling a physician promptly when delay might result so disastrously. The spots are only a symptom, and they may appear at any stage. In fact, they have been known to appear only after death.—St. Louis Dispatch.

How to Make Dried Apple Pies.

Pick and wash one quart of dried apples and put in a porcelain kettle with two quarts of water and two of cider. Let this stand overnight, and in the morning place on the fire and simmer three hours. Then lay in (but do not stir) two quarts of sugar and simmer two hours longer. Then turn into a stone pot and put away for use. Make the pies the same as green apple.

How to Make Lemon Drops.

Better lemon drops than any you buy at the store can be made at home by boiling a pound and a half of powdered sugar in a pint of water, with a teaspoonful of cream of tartar, and enough lemon juice to suit the taste. In half an hour pour into buttered dish, pull out into long sticks, and chop into convenient size. A good butterscotch candy is made by boiling two cupfuls of sugar in two tablespoonfuls of water. Add a piece of butter the size of an egg, and when the mixture hardens on the spoon pour out on buttered plates to cool.

How to Make Graham Pies.

Into a pint of graham flour stir one teaspoonful salt. Wet with boiling water enough to make a stiff paste. Roll this very thin and cut into cakes about three inches in diameter. Put into these a spoonful of apple sauce and fold them. Bake on tin sheets.

SAWING LUMBER

In the Thief River Falls Lumber Co.'s Mill.

Lumber is now being sawed in the Thief River Falls Lumber company's mill. One band saw and the band re-saw were started up Monday and have been running day and night since. The band saw on the north side of the mill starts sawing today.

The mill is a model one, and was constructed in a remarkably short time—a little over 60 days—after specifiications drawn by D. J. Murray, of Wausau, Wis. The foundations are as substantial as rock, and the mill is equipped with all of the latest improved machinery, thus insuring the manufacture of lumber at the lowest possible cost. The grade of lumber being turned out is far superior to that manufactured by any other mill in this section, and the company will be in a position to sell it at a lower price. It is an institution in which every citizen of Thief River Falls should take a pardonable pride. Giving employment to nearly 300 men, it will be the most prominent factor in the development of our city, and everyone should speak well of it when occasion requires.

The building of the mill has been under the direct supervision of George W. Lake, and to him is due much credit. Earl M. Rogers, one of the brightest young lumber manufacturers in the state, will have charge of the mill this season.

The valve rod on the carriage in the south side of the mill uncoupled yesterday afternoon and considerable damage was done. The sawyer lost control of the carriage, which took a few lively spurts before stopping, throwing the two riders, Louis Seidel and Chester Carter, off. The men were bruised up considerable, but their injuries will not necessitate their laying up. The damage has been repaired.

PRESERVE PINE.

A National Forestry Reserve Association to Be Formed.

A national park or reserve association for the government reservation of over 7,000,000 acres of land in Minnesota, containing over a thousand lakes, will be formed in Chicago this month. The organization starts with the cordial indorsement of Gov. Theodore Roosevelt, of New York; President Hill, of the Great Northern Railway; Col. John S. Cooper, of Chicago, and prominent congressmen and officials interested in the immediate creation of great national reserves for the preservation of native forests and streams and the perpetuation of the game of the land.

The project is made doubly important through the fact that the friends and promoters of the reserve have also in view the placing under governmental charge all of the lands surrounding the headwaters of the historic Mississippi river.

The tract includes the Leech Lake district and embraces the counties of Crow Wing Aitkin, Wadena, Hubbard, Beltrami and Itasca, containing over a thousand lakes.

Prairie Chickens Will Be Numerous This Fall.

Those who are in a position to know inform the News that the prairie chickens will be more numerous in this section this fall than ever before. It is reported that the conditions have all been very favorable for birds, and that large flocks of young chickens can be seen in every direction.

After Logs.

The steamer "Alice" went up to the Red lake Tuesday having on board about 20 men who will be empoyed during the summer picking up stray logs on the banks of the Red lake belonging to P. & J. Meehan. Both James and P. Meehan went up to the lake, but they will return in a few days.

Kicked in the Face.

Daniel Johnson, a farmer living in the town of Rocksbury, met with a painful misfortune Tuesday. While at work with a grader about two miles southeast of town he was kicked in the face by a horse, and his cheek bone was broken. Dr. Grundy dressed the wound, and he states that while the wound is not serious, it is quite painful.

CARMAN BIG STORE.

There is a harvest of bargains for our customers that means bargains for every lady and such low prices as this store is noted for. Well, our semi-annual cleaning sale of shoes is in full swing and offers an opportunity for money saving. When we advertise shoe bargains we mean to give them.

FOR PARASOLS.

We have just received a very large line of parasols but as the season is getting rather late we offer them at beggarly prices. You couldn't get them much cheaper if you were to find them. Truly we are losing money on everyone we sell to now, but our experience teaches us that it pays to lose money sometimes. This is one of the occasions on which we are willing to sell goods for less than we really payed for them. It's an opportunity for you to get a parasol dead cheap and you had better improve it.

FOR UMBRELLAS.

It rains just as easy in the summer as any other time. Therefore, one of our reliable umbrellas is a very good companion, and is likely to prove a friend in need if you don't want to pay more than 75 cents for an umbrella. We can sell you a good one for that price, and if you want a high grade one we can supply the need with equal satisfaction.

FOR NEGLIGEE SHIRTS.

There is no need of going around warm and uncomfortable when you can buy a negligee shirt here at a big discount. We have placed the whole line on sale at the lowest prices which will please customers. Then there is a big line of men's furnishings to choose from. Every item splendid value. The ties we sell are swell so they tell. Now you can tell they are swell for they sell.

Ladies, perhaps you need one or two more shirt waists to carry you through the season. Probably you can find just what you want if you look over our stock. Every shirt waist in the house is going at a cut price to close out the balance of the stock at very desirable prices.

FOR CORSETS.

Half the secret of keeping cool lies in correct dress for all women who seek comfort these hot days. We recommend an ice berg summer corset. They are made of strong summer net which allows good ventilation and at the same time gives all needed support. You can pay as much or as little as you want to and no matter what priced corset you select here you will get good value.

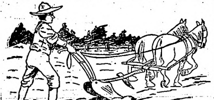
ST. PAUL, - MINN.



I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

WANTED.—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. R·I·P·A·N·S, 10 for 5 cents or twelve packets for 48 cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

BREEDING ON SHARES.

A Noted Breeder Believes the Plan Mutually Profitable.

T. F. B. Sotham, the noted Missouri Hereford breeder, in a letter to The Breeder's Gazette declares the share system to be profitable to the man lending the cattle. It is like taking sheep to double. The profits are largely in favor of the man owning the sheep. The experience of James A. Gibson, a Missouri Hereford breeder, should be of interest to every one desiring to start a herd by no investment of a moderate sum of money. In a recent letter Mr. Gibson says:

"I started with a bull and heifer in 1893 and have 16 females and four bulls at present, all from those two. I have bought four females since, but have paid for them with money I sold my bulls for. It seems a slow way to get a start, but I had not the money that I cared to spare for more. I now have a fair start to grow into a herd."

There are plenty of Herefords for sale in this country as low as $100, and among these low priced Herefords are some splendidly bred animals. The low price named need not scare any one, for many of the very best Herefords fell into the hands of parties who got them at a price that enables them to sell them at these low prices and realize handsomer profits than can be returned from any other investment on the farm. The strength of the Hereford breed today is in its numbers. We have cattle within the reach of every farmer and ranchman, and there are herds from which these low priced Herefords must draw blood for their maintenance and improvement. The high class herd must be maintained and improved, and as animals develop which can be used for the improvement of the breed in the hands of the most skilled breeders they will be sought for at higher prices than have ever yet been reached. My friends who desire to start a herd on shares are commended to the methods adopted by Mr. Gibson. The man who is able to furnish feed for a goodly sized herd on shares can certainly find the means to establish a foundation herd as large as the foundation of Mr. Gibson's and reap a splendid reward from the investment, while the larger start will bring proportionately larger results.

Treatment of Young Lambs.

The first thing in the way of attention a young lamb wants is to see that the ewe's teats are free from all obstruction, says The American Sheep Breeder. The wool about the udder should be clipped off and the flow of milk started by the fingers, so that the lamb can get its food without difficulty. Some ewes, especially the young ones with their first lambs, will be disinclined to permit the lambs to suck and by restlessness prevent them. This, of course, is equivalent to the loss of the lamb. Such ewes must be restrained in some way, the easiest being to inclose the refractory animal in a narrow pen of laths or in a small stanchion, while the lamb gets its meal. A few times will be sufficient to subdue the ewe and make the lamb safe. Another matter that needs immediate attention is the clearing of the anus, which is apt to be clogged up by adhesive excrement, by which the discharges are prevented, and, of course, this is fatal to the lamb in a short time. It is an easy thing to loosen the hard crust and separate the adhesion of it to the wool. In some cases when this has been neglected for two or three days the opening of the bowel will be attended by a copious discharge which by its volume will show how great a detriment and inconvenience it has been to the young lamb. To be successful, a shepherd must be well supplied with untiring vigilance ample knowledge of his business in even such small details as this and sufficient painstaking industry and promptitude to set everything right that is going wrong, as soon as it happens.

Breed Straight.

Whether breeding draft or road horses, breed the best you can of the class you decide upon. Avoid violent crosses. Don't imagine that you can, as a general rule, succeed in breeding a cross bred animal with the size and weight of a draft horse and the speed and activity of a race horse, nor that by cross breeding you can, ordinarily, get a happy combination of many of the good qualities of both. It may be acknowledged that, occasionally, an individual horse will be found that is an excellent animal, a good general purpose horse, and such a horse may have been the result of cross breeding. But such instances are rare. They are exceptions to the rule. Such crosses usually result in a "weedy," ill proportioned animal, that is fit for neither the one purpose nor the other. Such individuals are, when used for breeding purposes detrimental to breeders. They are not of a fixed type. They are composed of say 50 per cent of each of two incongruous elements, and their progeny in the next generation will generally be disappointing.—E. F. Richman, before Iowa Institute.

Amiable Hogs.

Different breeds of hogs vary in the degree of their amiability when it comes to handling them, so do different animals of the same breed, says A. N. Springer in Land and a Living. Much of their seeming fierceness is due to a fear that you will harm them or their brood. Once they have perfect confidence in you, all restiveness will vanish, as a rule, and you can do for them whatever necessity demands. So far as is possible, one should always select pigs to raise for brood sows from a gentle sow. Then their treatment should be of the kindest, no dogs should be allowed to worry them, and they should never be chased about with sticks or clods. They should really be made pets of, and with a little time and trouble it can be done. Begin by rubbing them when eating or drinking, keep this up at intervals until they seem to expect and enjoy it, and the task is about completed.

CARE OF THE SCALP.

How to Treat the Hair to Keep It in Healthy Condition.

In the care of the scalp the first consideration is cleanliness. The scalp should be kept scrupulously clean. The means to this end are frequent brushing and shampooing at least once a fortnight, says a correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"Natural oil" is unnatural soil. So do not defer this absolutely essential bath for any such consideration. Neither does cleansing the scalp give one cold. I have found frequently that a thorough shampoo would break up a cold.

When oil enough has accumulated on the scalp or hair to be noticeable, it is time to remove it. No one will contend that it weakens the skin to keep it clean, absolutely clean, and no logical reason exists for the contrary opinion to be held in regard to hair.

Where soil accumulates, bacteria find a lodgment and work destruction. In the case of the scalp their detritus is poisonous, acting on the hair by burrowing in the follicle, weakening the hair shaft and gradually stopping its growth altogether.

No alkali should be used in shampooing; only a good soap, such as green soap (the official name of a pure soap). Borax, soda, ammonia and the like absolutely destroy the shiny, gleaming surface of the hair tube and under no circumstances should be used, not even in infinitesimal quantities. Use plenty of soap: you cannot use too much, but you can use too little. I should like to shout this last injunction so every solitary individual who admits the necessity of shampooing might hear me.

Sufficient soap must be used that there may be sufficient free alkali to unite with the fat on the hair, forming more soap, which is very readily rinsed out with the hot water bath. This should be followed by thorough douching with cold water for the tonic effect

These two waters are sufficient for the rinsing provided there has been enough soap used. If the comb or brush becomes sticky you may be quite sure that you had too little soap and not that you did not rinse the soap out.

Unless there be some indication to the contrary, the hair should be brushed for a few minutes daily, preferably with a stiff brush, bristles set far apart

It is doubtless unnecessary in this day and age to say "Never use a fine comb."

How to Bake Tripe.

Procure a piece of tripe large enough to fold into a pasty Make a stuffing with onions, bread crumbs, a little sage, pepper and salt. Lay a thick layer on to one-half of the tripe and fold the other on to it. Sew the edges so as to keep the stuffing from falling out. Place the roll in a baking tin, with slices of bacon on the top. Bake for two hours, basting constantly, and serve with a good brown gravy.

How to Cure the Grip.

A level teaspoonful of common cooking soda dissolved in two-thirds of a glass of water, repeat every two hours until all soreness and headache are gone, then one extra dose for good measure.

It is not best to take a dose just before or just after eating.

It is seldom necessary to take more than three or four doses.

The above is the dose for grown patients. Lessen the dose for children according to age.

This treatment was first used in one of the best hospitals of Europe, the hospital in Edinburgh, and with the most satisfactory results.

How to Cook Minced Oysters.

One quart of oysters chopped, salt and pepper to taste, four eggs, two teaspoonfuls chopped onion, toasted bread crumbs enough to thicken. Put on fire in stewpan, stir until hot through, add a tablespoonful of butter and little mustard if liked. Fill the shells, sprinkle with toasted bread crumbs, bake until brown and serve hot.

How to Make Sardine Savory.

Lift the fish carefully out of the tin without breaking them and lay them side by side on a plate. Pour hot water over them, allowing water and oil to drain away Wipe with a cloth, removing the scales and supply a finger of dried bread for each fish. When the fish are laid on the bread, dust them with red pepper and salt and sprinkle with a few drops of fresh salad oil, capers and parsley, and place in the oven until thoroughly hot. Serve with an additional sprinkle of red pepper or grated cheese.

How to Make Ham Balls.

Ham balls for breakfast are made as follows. Take half an ounce of breadcrumbs and mix with three-quarters of a pound of lean ham chopped fine. Beat two eggs, add to the ham and form into balls with the help of a little flour. Fry in deep fat and dry on paper.

How to Make Aspic Jelly.

Dissolve a small amount of consomme or beef-extract according to directions given, then add half an ounce of leaf gelatin, a teaspoonful of vinegar, the juice of a lemon, a green onion or two, pepper and allspice, with the white and shell of an egg. Mix all together, bring to a boil and run through a warm jelly bag at once. This will make a pint of aspic jelly

How to Make Mustard Sauce.

Make a drawn butter sauce and add to it two tablespoonfuls of prepared mustard and a little cayenne pepper. This sauce is a nice addition to broiled smoked fish of any kind and boiled salt codfish.

How to Harden Tender Feet.

Try rubbing the soles two or three times a week with a little camphorated oil. This simple remedy often works wonders. If you are going for a long walk, rub a little in before you start.

MORE PAY.

Volunteers of This State are Entitled to It.

Notwithstanding the many complaints as to the inadequate pay accorded our volunteer soldiers, there seems little doubt but that the Minnesota volunteers will receive enough pay for the ten days they put in at Camp Ramsey before the formal muster in to the U. S. service. The sudden call to arms found this state with but a small amount of funds available for equipping and transporting the troops to the camp of mobilization and it required very close figuring to make both ends meet. In this emergency Gov. Clough and Adj. Gen. Muehlberg decided to pay the men for the ten days they were in the state service at regular army rates, $15.60 per month for privates and something more for non-coms. The last legislature decided that this was an injustice to the men and appropriated money to give them all the difference between what they actually received and state pay, which is $2.00 per day for all enlisted men when called into active service. The pay of officers is the same in both organizations, so they did not profit by this appropriation. Now comes the war department with the following ruling:

"By direction of the Secretary of War, paragraph I, General Orders No. 1, January 6, 1899, from this office, is revoked, the Comptroller of the Treasury having, on reconsideration, decided that no stoppage or deduction should be made by the Pay Department in the pay due a soldier on account of any payment that may have been made to him under the State militia law by the governor of the State or State authorities from the date of his enrollment or joining for duty to the date of his acceptance into the Volunteer Army of the United States."

It seems, therefore, that for the ten days at Camp Ramsey the boys are entitled to both state and government pay. The additional state pay is now available and is being distributed as fast as the adjutant general can get the addresses of the men entitled to it. For the government pay, however, the men must individually put in a claim of shortage. Undoubtedly some action will be taken by the regiments in a body, but it is well for those interested to keep their eyes open. Several men in this city are entitled to the extra pay.

Another New Town.

A new town is now being laid out and platted on the south shore of Turtle River lake at the terminus of the extension of the Brainerd & Northern railroad, northeast of Bemidji. The railroad company have a contract for hauling 300,000,000 feet of timber to be cut and banked on Turtle River lake for the Burlington lumber company, of Burlington, Ia. Prominent St. Paul and Minneapolis parties are interested in this new movement which will open to developement the finest section of agricultural country in Northern Minnesota. A great many claims have been taken in this vicinity by parties from the cities among them being C. L. Smith, of the Northwestern Agriculturist, who, together with his sons and daughters, has acquired 800 acres on the west shore of the lake. Mr. Smith says the Turtle River country is the best he has ever seen for agricultural and stock raising purposes. Good roads to this new country lead from Bemidji, a distance of 16 miles.—Brainerd Dispatch.

ARE FRIENDLY

And Want the Government to Know It.

Gus. Beaulieu has advised the Indian commissioner at Washington that he is making arrangements for a general council among the Chippewas for the purpose of considering various questions affecting their interests, but primarily to show the department that there is no disposition on the part of the Indians to create trouble. Reports have reached Washington recently that the Indians are becoming dissatisfied, and that trouble might be anticipated. The rumors have caused the officials no concern. Beaulieu is not satisfied, however, with the verbal assurances of the Indians, and it is for this purpose that he is proposing a grand council to prepare a memorial to be forwarded to the secretary of the interior and the Indian commissioner. The latter has informed Beaulieu that he is glad to note the good feeling among the Chippewas, and he expresses the hope that nothing will occur to disturb the gratifying condition.

Calls Him Down.

When two ball teams engage in a match game it is an axiom that one of them must loose. During the progress of the game a certain amount of kicking is necessary, for that is part of the game. Without a kicking crowd of rooters a ball game would be a melancholy affair to be sure. But when the game is over it is the part of the victors to wear their laurels modestly and of the vanquished to take defeat gracefully for that is the spirit of the true sportsman.

Last week the hitherto invincible "Selects" of Red Lake Falls went down before the work of the local aggregation of ball tossers because the latter put up the best article of ball. The Selects were surprised to say the least but with a spirit of true sport accepted the result and planned to do better next time. We have too good an opinion of the players from down the river to think that they would play baby and try to win with the long range mouth what their good right arms could not secure on the ground.

However, the Gazette of Red Lake Falls takes upon itself to print a column-long screed by some ignorant cub which would make it appear that the innocent lambs of R. L. F. were enticed into the wilderness and there beaten and robbed. The team should inform the little chump that they visited Thief River to play ball and not to chew the rag and if one of them would lead him off into the wood-shed and give him a good spanking possibly he might see the error of his ways. Only a cur howls when whipped. Come again, boys, and leave the squaler at home.—S.

Had No Effect.

Judge Watts on Monday handed down his decision in the case of M. O. Sortedahl vs. the county commissioners of Red Lake county, which he has had under consideration six months. At their January meeting the county commissioners appointed Swanson & Grady as official abstracters and Mr. Sortedahl, who owns a complete set of abstract books for the county, at once appealed from this action, Swanson & Grady coming in as intervenors. The Judge dismisses the appeal but finds that the county commissioners had no authority to appoint official abstracters, and thus the appointment is of no legal effect.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

STEALING PINE.

"Dead and Down" Timber Frauds at Cass Lake.

Gen. C. C. Andrews, chief fire warden of Minnesota, furnishes the following statement regarding some of the "dead and down" pine stealing on the Indian reservations:

"Last August I visited Cass Lake and found to my surprise and delight on its south shore such an ideal pine forest as with the remarkable clean and attractive sandy beach formed one of the most beautiful spots for a health and summer resort that could be imagined. I gave to the press some account of it at the time. Later a joint committee of the state medical societies made a visit there and through the influence of a committee of women's clubs the legislature memorialized the president to postpone for two years the sale of the land so that the state of Minnesota might, if it should then deem it expedient, buy the same for a park.

"Judge of my surprise and indignation then to find, as I did, on visiting the same spot again on Tuesday last, that a dozen or more acres of this beautiful forest were lumbered and cut over this last winter on the fraudulent pretense of its being 'dead and down timber.'

"The tops and branches of the trees—slashings as they are called—are now lying there endangering the rest of the forest in the event of dry weather. Notwithstanding this terrible injury and disfigurement, the forest is not ruined for a park. But last May fires were set on its eastern side, the traces of which cover quite an area, and were set for the purpose, as is generally believed, of making pretext for another contract the coming winter to lumber it as 'dead and down timber.'

"This sad and wicked despoilment of one of the most beautiful pieces of scenery Minnesota possesses is understood to have been committed by a white man living at Cass Lake who is connected by marriage with the Chippewas. It was perpetrated under the fraudulent system of lumbering 'dead and down timber,' a system which offers a premium of firing the forest and which was cunningly devised to enable rascals to obtain standing pine at a price far below its value. The government at Washington is directly responsible, and our people should hold their senators and representatives in congress accountable and responsible that nothing of the kind occurs again, for they are the officers elected to conduct the affairs of Minnesota with the executive department at Washington and with congress."

Weed Burner at Work.

The N. P. weed burner passed through the city Tuesday morning and is clearing the track between here and Wapheton today. The machine, if it may be called a machine, attracted considerable attention here. A tank of petroleum is placed on a car and from this tank pipes lead to the huge burner, which works somewhat on the principle of a combination of torches with the blazing ends turned downward. When in operation the burner is drawn along at the rate of about six miles an hour, and clears the weeds from between and about the rails very effectively.—Fergus Falls Journal.

LOTS OF LOGS.

Senator Buckman Sells 17,000,000 of Them.

Minneapolis Journal: Senator C. B. Buckman, of Little Falls, is a visitor among the Minneapolis lumbermen. He had just sold the last of the 17,000,000 feet of logs that he cut at Red lake and up on the boundry last winter, and is busily engaged in making new contracts for the coming year. He expects to close up some pretty snug contracts with the Minneapolis lumbermen before returning home, enough to insure a considerably larger cut than last year.

"Business is good in my line," said he. "Logs sold readily and there has been so much rain that any logs that are ever coming down at all will be on hand this summer. What with the generally prosperous condition of the trade and the heavy demand for lumber, it looks to me as though next year's lumber cut would be a big one. It would seem, therefore, that if there is anything in this talk of setting aside a big national forestry reservation in Minnesota, it couldn't be done any too quick. I am thoroughly in sympathy with the proposed movement. Only I apprehend that it will be a pretty difficult thing to bring about. There are many vital interests involved in the undertaking, and it is going to be a hard task to bring them all in line. The matter should have been taken up ten or twenty years ago."

SCHOOL MATTERS.

The Elections Held Last Saturday Evening.

Last Saturday evening the school elections for both of the independent districts in this city were held. Hans Nelson was reelected treasurer of the district on the West side, and the sum of $2,200 was voted for the hiring of teachers, together with $125 for incidental expenses. It was also voted to hire another teacher and the old school house will be used.

At the meeting on the East Side Joseph Jerome was elected clerk and Gilbert Gilbertson was reelected treasurer. It is voted to have the wages of teachers the same as last year, as the district is not in a very good financial standing. This probably means that the district cannot secure the services of a male teacher. Mr. Todd, who was the principal last year, announces that he will not accept the position, and it does not seem probable that any other man would take the school at $45 per month.

What should be done—and the sooner the better—is the uniting of the two districts into one independent district. This would be the means of securing better grades, and the results would be more satisfactory.

First and Last.

Assignee C. L. Dobner last week sent out checks to the various creditors of O. P. Johnson, insolvent, amounting to $1,500. This is the first and final payment, the creditors getting a little less than 12½ per cent of their claims.

THE NEWS,

By John W. Eastman.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

There are a number of men living in the northern part of the state who could defeat John Lind, among them being Gen. Clapp, Judge Collins, R. C. Dunn and Congressman Eddy.

The Republican state central committee held a meeting in St. Paul last week to consider plans for the campaign of 1900. A number of recommendations and suggestions were made, but no definite action was taken.

The Bemidji Pioneer says a newspaper man should be nominated for governor and suggests the names of Toms Bixby and G. S. Pease. What is the matter with C. A. Hendryx, of Sauk Center? He is by far the most popular man in the state.

In a recent speech Aguinaldo, the insurgent cut throat, impressed upon the followers that many of the American states were against President McKinley's policy in the Philippines and that as soon as a Democratic president is elected in 1900 the American troops will be withdrawn. Therefore the insurgents should be encouraged to continue the fight and kill our soldiers and resent our authority until after the next election. When Aguinaldo reads Gov. Lind's Vasa speech he will be still more encouraged.

The Little Falls Transcript says that the Dingley bill is certainly a disappointment. It is bringing in more revenue that either its friends or enemies expected. The free traders also had much to say about the law shutting this country out of foreign markets. Yet for the year ending June 33, 1899, the export of manufactured goods was larger than ever before, and amounted to over $1,000,000 for every working day of the year. No wonder the Popocrats are ducking about to find some side-issue to scare the people in 1900. Their free trade plans are too weak to make a campaign on.

MY COUNTRY.

In War or Peace May She Ever Be Right.

The following essay, on "In Peace and War," written by John T. Meehan, of the class of 1900, Marquette college, Milwaukee, and a son of John Meehan, will be of special interest to the people of Thief River Falls. Such manly and patriotic utterances are always to be applauded. The essay follows:

In Peace and War.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

As in a short time the people of the United States will welcome back the hero of Manila, Admiral Dewey, it may not be inopportune to say a few words about the war.

Peace, happy, glorious, prosperous peace, is the desire of every individual man, of every people. In time of peace, the hand of God rests lovingly on a people, and humanity as a broad, calm stream, reflects more clearly the beauty of its divine Creator. Where peace reigns, there the sunlight of God's providence shines in upon the heart and mind of man and the more violent passions of our fallen nature sink back into the dark recesses whence they rose. The true statesman, therefore, is ever a lover of peace. He realizes the misery and sorrows of war; he realizes its cares and anxieties, its ravages and mortality, its manifold evils. He knows that war is a storm of bitter passion, a burning fire of hate and prejudice, a giant, that > —"on the mountain stands,

> His blood-red tresses deepening in the sun,
> With death-shot glowing in his fiery hands,
> And eye that scorcheth all it glares upon.
> Restless it rolls, now fixed and now anon
> Flashing afar, at his iron-feet

And yet, my friends, even war is sometimes necessary. Who dare deny it?—Who will deny that war, war with its thousand evils, is better than base, ignoble peace? Freedom, liberty, justice, humanity are precious jewels, which must sometimes be purchased and held even at the cost of war. Without liberty, without justice, without charity peace would be shorn of all its beauty. And, therefore, when the bond binding nation to nation has been violated, when the rights of a nation and the rights of her sister nations have been trampled under foot, when mercy and justice cry out to heaven, and all other means have failed, the true statesman realizes that it is right and just and imperative to secure redress and preservation even by force of arms. Then every true patriot is, in heart at least, a warrior. His motto is: "Fiat justitia, ruat coelum (Let justice be done though the heavens fall).

I do not intend to discuss the justice or the injustice of the late war. I wish merely to impress upon your minds that this is not within my province. It is not within the province of each and every citizen to give a final decision regarding the conduct of the war. Through our soverign vote, through our ballot, we have chosen our rulers, our statesmen who are to stand at the helm and safely guide our ship of state. They have been vested with full authority by the people to act for the people. Because of their knowledge of the nation's affairs and their experience, they have been chosen; and they, surely, are fitted for the offices entrusted to them. it is not the spirit of true patriotism to be forever carping, forever criticizing, forever dictating to the government in time of danger and trial, Patriotism is zealous, obedient to authority, trustful, generous, faithful. The true patriot puts faith in the government and he will stand by it. When difficulties are pressing the government may make mistakes. No merely human government is infallible. But the true patriot does not consider that the individual citizen is invested with authority to sit in judgment upon the government.

Thank God, we have little reasod to complain in our country. The spirit of patriotism which animated our heroes, brave hearts and true, in olden times, the spirit which flashing from the sword of Washington, inspired his ragged, hungry continentals to deeds of glory, still breaths in our land, still lives in our citizens and our soldiers. The war has proven one thing. It has proven the patriotism of America.

And, my friends, because we are patriotic, because we do possess which true patriotism necessarily presupposes; because we do love liberty, home and country; because we have ever staunchly defended our own rights and shown a tender and loving regard for the rights of others, fighting when to fight was just, yielding when to yield was just, because, in a word, no foul blot has ever yet stained the fair escutcheon of the United States of America, I am sure that the outcome of this war will be glorious for us. I am sure that not we alone, but Cuba and the Philippines will one day bless that spirit of patriotism, that love of right and justice which has ever been the proud boast of the American citizen.

AN EXCURSION

And Two Games of Base Ball Sunday.

A large number of people from this city, Red Lake Falls and Crookston were at St. Hilaire Sunday, the attraction being two games of base ball A special train took a majority of the people there, although quite a number took advantage of the fine weather and drove down.

The first game of ball was played between St. Hilaire and Red Lake Falls, but it was so one sided that very little interest was taken in the sport. Red Lake Falls won, the score being 21 to 1.

The second game proved to be a little better, but Red Lake Falls was an easy winner, defeating the Crookston club by a score of 4 to 11.

STOLE HARNESS

From the Red Lake Falls Elevator Barn.

Some time during Tuesday night the barn connected with the Red Lake Falls Milling company's elevator, of which John Moylan is manager, was entered by burglars, and one set of double harness, one single harness and few other minor articles were taken. The set of double harness belonged to Anton Kotlin, a farmer living near Germantown, and the loss to him is quite heavy. He put his team up in the stable at about 8 o'clock Tuesday evening, and returned to the barn at 5 o'clock yesterday morning when he discovered the theft. There were tracks leading west of town and these Mr. Kotlin followed for about two miles. The authorities have been notified and it is not improbable that the thief will be caught. It must have been someone well acquainted with the elevator.

Group of Girls Carrying Weighty Baskets Full of Grapes to the Winery to be Crushed and Made into Wine.

The Speer Wine Company, Passaic N. J.,

have their vineyards stocked of the same grape, the only vineyard of the kind in this country, the vines were imported and planted here over forty years ago. The Speer Port wine and Burgundy are now regarded the finest in the world, their rich, full body and high character is unexcelled. Invalids, weakly persons, especially females, and the aged are made strong and vigorous by its use, as a medicinal wine it has no equal; as a family wine it has no superior. First class physicians all over the country, here and in Europe, who have tried them recommend them as the best.

A close study by physicians on the effect of different brands of wines on the system convinces them of the superiority of the Speer Passaic wines for their patients.

CARMAN BIG STORE.

There is a harvest of bargains for our customers that means bargains for every lady and such low prices as this store is noted for. Well, our semi-annual cleaning sale of shoes is in full swing and offers an opportunity for money saving. When we advertise shoe bargains we mean to give them.

FOR PARASOLS.

We have just received a very large line of parasols but as the season is getting rather late we offer them at beggarly prices. You couldn't get them much cheaper if you were to find them. Truly we are losing money on everyone we sell to now, but our experience teaches us that it pays to lose money sometimes. This is one of the occasions on which we are willing to sell goods for less than we really payed for them. It's an opportunity for you to get a parasol dead cheap and you had better improve it.

FOR UMBRELLAS.

It rains just as easy in the summer as any other time. Therefore, one of our reliable umbrellas is a very good companion, and is likely to prove a friend in need if you don't want to pay more than 75 cents for an umbrella. We can sell you a good one for that price, and if you want a high grade one we can supply the need with equal satisfaction.

FOR NEGLIGEE SHIRTS.

There is no need of going around warm and uncomfortable when you can buy a negligee shirt here at a big discount. We have placed the whole line on sale at the lowest prices which will please customers. Then there is a big line of men's furnishings to choose from. Every item splendid value. The ties we sell are swell so they tell. Now you can tell they are swell for they sell.

Ladies, perhaps you need one or two more shirt waists to carry you through the season. Probably you can find just what you want if you look over our stock. Every shirt waist in the house is going at a cut price to close out the balance of the stock at very desirable prices.

FOR CORSETS.

Half the secret of keeping cool lies in correct dress for all women who seek comfort these hot days. We recommend an ice berg summer corset. They are made of strong summer net which allows good ventilation and at the same time gives all needed support. You can pay as much or as little as you want to and no matter what priced corset you select here you will get good value.

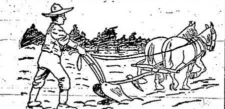
ST. PAUL, - MINN.



I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

A MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.

"Talking about mysterious and unaccountable disappearances," said a New York theatrical man, "I don't believe there was ever one more mysterious and unaccountable than that of Tom Maguire's kid. It happened about the time Joe Arthur brought out 'The Still Alarm' at the Fourteenth Street theater nine years ago. Tom Maguire was business manager there and was standing in the lobby of the theater one day when a wretched looking specimen of the street Arab pushed a door open and went in.

"'Say, mister,' he said, 'hain't yous got somethin for me to do? I don't want to beg nothin, mister. I want some money, but I want to earn it.'

"The eager and straightforward manner of the ragamuffin rather struck Maguire.

"'Well, what can you do?' he asked.

"'I kin do anything dat hain't bigger'n I am, mister,' was the confident reply.

"This pleased Tom Maguire still more, and as the theater was just then sending out boys to distribute dodgers he gave the kid a bundle and told him to distribute them in a certain district and come back and get a quarter. The boy hurried away with the dodgers, and, before the time was up, he was back to the theater.

"'I put 'em where you told me to, mister,' he said, 'an I've come back to get some more to carry, so's I kin fill out me time. See?'

"The fact of a street boy being willing to do more work in a given time than he was hired to do was something so new and strange that Manager Maguire was amazed. He said nothing, but gave the boy another supply of dodgers. In taking them the boy made some suggestions about the best places to distribute them that were so good that Maguire told him to follow them out. The little fellow was back on time. Maguire handed him the promised quarter, and the kid asked whether he could have another job. He was told to come around the next morning at 10 o'clock and they would see. At 10 o'clock the next morning, however, there came a sharp tap at the box office window, and, looking down, Manager Maguire saw the ragged little chap of the day before.

"'Here I am, mister,' he said. 'W'at a' yous goin to put me at dis time?'

"Maguire told him he could distribute some more dodgers and handed him some. The boy took the paper, stood in an undecided manner a moment and then boldly said:

"'Say, mister, kin yous do me a favor?'

"'I don't know. What is it?'

"'Well, I'll tell you, mister,' said the boy. 'I been sellin papers lately an stayin at de newsboys' lodging house. See? Well, tomorrow me week's up, an I owe de house 60 cents, an I want to pay it. De 25 cents you paid me hain't enough to do it with, an besides—well, a man's got to eat. See? Say, kin yous put up 50 cents on me sal'ry?'

"The cool audacity of this request almost carried Tom Maguire's breath away. He gazed at the wretched mite of humanity in mute astonishment. The boy met the gaze with a steady look of his own, and, before he knew what he was doing, Maguire had handed the boy 50 cents and told him to come again at the usual time next day and get some more work. The kid thanked the manager and went out with his dodgers.

"'That'll be the end of him, sure,' said Maguire. 'We won't see him again.'

"But at 10 the next morning the tap came at the box office again.

"'Here I am,' piped the voice of Tom's kid. 'Wat's de somethin yous has got for me to do dis time?'

"The boy had now aroused Maguire's unqualified interest. He began to ask the boy something about himself. All that the little fellow knew was that his father and mother were both dead and that he had been left with no home or relatives and had become a waif. His story became known about the theater, and Manager Rosenquest, Harry Lacy, Joe Arthur, Mrs. Rosenquest and Mrs. Colville also took an interest in him. When he was transformed from the ragged and dirty street arab into a clean and well dressed boy, he was found to be as handsome, bright eyed a lad as any one would wish to see. He didn't know exactly how old he was, but it was judged that he was 11 or 12. Joe Arthur wanted to take him at once as the messenger boy in 'The Still Alarm,' but Tom Maguire objected to his going on the stage. He took the kid to his own house and got him a place in a large furniture house on Fourteenth street.

"The boy continued to live with the Maguire family, but insisted on paying something out of his earnings for his board. He also handed money to Tom every week to keep for him. He became a great favorite with everybody at the store, as he was with all the theater people. One Friday, after he had been a few weeks at the furniture store, he was sent by some of the men at noon hour to fetch them their pail of dinner beer. He had $4.50 due him from the store for his week's salary, which would have been paid the next day. He had also $3 or $4 of savings in Tom Maguire's keeping. He took the pail and tripped merrily out of the store on his errand as he had done many times before. He never came back. Manager Rosenquest and Mrs. Colville made every effort to find some trace of the missing boy, but without success. Nothing has ever been seen or heard of him from that day to this. If that wasn't about as mysterious and unaccountable a disappearance as well could be, then I don't know what mysterious and unaccountable disappearances are."—Albany Telegraph.

Libraries as Fuel.

Mr. E. H. House, in "Bright Sides of History," in St. Nicholas, tells of the destruction of the great library at Alexandria by the fanatic caliph Omar. The great library of Paris is the largest now, but the collection once amassed at Alexandria would have made the French Bibliotheque look small—in bulk, at any rate. Omar, a fanatical caliph who overran Egypt about the middle of the seventh century, proclaimed that, since the Koran contained everything that human beings ought to read, no other books had any right to exist; so he condemned to destruction the immense library founded by the Ptolemies and constantly enlarged by their successors until the advent of the Saracens.

How enormous it was you can imagine from the fact that for six months the manuscripts supplied the fuel of 4,000 public baths. It was the most terrible blow ever inflicted upon literature, though a good many barbarities of the same kind have been perpetrated and not by Mohammedans alone.

TWO BIDDERS.

Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Franklyn had got tired of life in the country.

"Don't you think, dear," said Mrs. Franklyn, "it would be well enough for us to return to the city?"

"Yes, I do," said Mr. Franklyn.

Miss Julia Leslardi, Mrs. Franklyn's pretty 18-year-old sister, clapped her hands.

"Good, good!" cried she. "Now I shall have some sort of chance at morning concerts and the opera again."

And house hunting commenced in good earnest.

But it flagged after the first edge of enthusiastic enterprise was worn off. None of the houses suited exactly.

"I don't care," sobbed Mrs. Franklyn. "It was all Laurence's fault, taking this horrid, damp hole."

Miss Leslardi was just making up her mind to another season of frogs, damp kitchen and fresh eggs at 8 cents apiece, when Bee came exultingly back from the city one evening.

"Oh, Julia," she cried, "I've seen the sweetest little gem of a house!"

"Been house hunting, eh!" said Miss Leslardi, who had got the tea ready. The thirteenth "help" had gone off in a huff that morning.

"Well, no, not exactly house hunting, you know, but I saw the bill, and I went in. The neighborhood delightful, the park handy"—

"Only $1,800 a year."

"Oh!" said Julia. "But isn't that a great deal?"

"Not when you consider the price of houses in general. I'll go back tomorrow and secure it; but, mind, it's a secret. I don't want Laurence to know that I have taken any trouble."

Mrs. Franklyn had retired to bed when her husband came home. Miss Leslardi, however, was up to pour his tea.

"Well, Julia," said Mr. Franklyn triumphantly, "I've found the house we want."

"No, but I shall tomorrow."

"I wouldn't do anything without consulting Bee," pleaded Julia.

"I shall give her a pleasant surprise," said Mr. Franklyn, buttering a muffin. "Remember, Ju, this is between you and me."

Early next morning Mr. Franklyn went to New York. Bee followed in the next train, while Miss Leslardi breathlessly awaited the crisis.

Mrs. Franklyn returned rather earlier than her sister had expected her, with a bright, flushed face.

"Well?" said Julia breathlessly.

"I've agreed to pay $2,000 a year for it," said Mrs. Franklyn.

"Two thousand!" echoed Miss Leslardi. "I thought it was only $1,800."

"Well, so it was, but there's another party, it seems, anxious to secure the house, and"—

"Oh, nonsense!" exclaimed Julia. "That's only the professional landlady's ruse."

"Oh, but it's true," persisted Bee, "for I saw his hat on the sideboard, and I caught a glimpse of his legs walking about in the upper story to see if the paint was in good order on the second floor, so I said I'd give her $2,000."

"And suppose the other party—who, I dare say, was the plumber or gasfitter or perhaps the carpenter, come to see about repairs—should offer $2,500?"

"He won't," said Bee confidently. "The house isn't worth that."

"But I really think, Bee, darling, you'd better speak to Laurence."

"So I will," said Bee, "this evening. He will see that his wife is something more than a dead letter in the family, but I want you to go and see the house this afternoon, Julia."

The level rays of the soft April sunset were shining into the pretty little double drawing room of the house on Millard square as Bee led her sister exultantly into it.

"Just look at those marble mantels," she said, "and the pattern of the cornices, and the pierglasses and the gas fixtures go with the house, and"—

"Oh, I beg your pardon, ma'am, I'm sure!" said a falcon nosed, elderly lady, who advanced, bearing with her a smell of dyed bombazine. "I'm sorry to disappoint you, but"—

"You have not let the house?"

"Yes, ma'am, I have. A poor lone widow like me has her own interests to look to, and the gentleman offered $2,500 a year if I'd sign the papers at once, which," with a reflective look at her pocket handkerchief, "I did."

Mrs. Franklyn rose in great indignation, her voice rising accordingly.

"I really think," said she, "I should be justified in placing this matter in the hands of the lawyers, and"—

"Why, Bee, my darling!"

"Laurence!"

The folding doors slid back, and Mrs. Franklyn found herself vis-a-vis with her husband.

"Here's the gent himself," said the ancient female. "Which he can explain."

"You never have taken this house, Laurence!" almost shrieked Mrs. Franklyn.

"Yes, I have, my dear."

"But I offered $2,000 for it!"

"And I have signed a three years' lease at $2,500," said the husband, somewhat sheepishly.

Miss Leslardi burst out laughing.

"So," said she, "your profound secrecy has cost you just $500 per annum."

"Never mind, Bee," said Mr. Franklyn soothingly. "It's a gem of a house anyway, and we'll be as happy as the day is long in it. I only wish I had confided in you about it."

"And I wi-wi-wish I hadn't been so obstinate and hateful," whimpered Bee.

"Come," said Miss Leslardi, "let's make haste, or we shall lose the 7:50 way train."—New York News.

A Young Statesman.

A small boy who lives on the North Side is a model of obedience. He can get into as much unexpected mischief as any youngster, but he never willfully disobeys orders. The other day his mother was going out, and, as the weather was bad, she instructed him to stay in the house during her absence. It is not her habit to make threats, but this time she gravely informed him that she would be obliged to whip him when she returned if she found out that he had been outdoors. For some time he gazed longingly out the window at the other children playing in the snow, and then, just as his mother was about to go, he went to her and said:

"Say, mamma, if I let you whip me now, may I go out afterward?"—Chicago Chronicle.

BEMIDJI SCHEME.

Reservation Lands to Be Filled Up.

Bemidji, Minn., July 22.—The report from Washington that Senator Nelson has succeeded in delaying the eviction of settlers on Cass Lake reservation has brought to light an organized movement here and in Crookston to locate settlers upon all of the agricultural lands in the Leech, Cass and Winnibigoshish reservations. Over a hundred men in this vicinity are said to be in the deal. They would have employed L. H. Bailey, a local land attorney, and Nat Campbell, of Crookston, to look after their interests before the department. Attorney Bailey says that if the senator is right, and he thinks he is, there will be 5,000 settlers on the three reservations before the snow flies.

While the above telegram, which was printed in the St. Paul Dispatch, was probably inspired jealouey, there may be some truth in it. Not long ago a well informed person stated to the NEWS that it was his opinion that claims could be taken upon the Red Lake reservation, and that the government could not remove the trespassers. Several instances were cited to prove that the land belonged to the government and not to the Chippewas. Should the people of Bemidji settle upon the reservation there, many people in this vicinity would no doubt take up lands on this section of the reservation.

HEADS ARE SHORT

In Wheat Fields, According to Expert Reports.

Grain men and elevator agents who have made the rounds of the state claim that wheat will give only the ordinary yield in the Red River valley. T. C. Cousins, one of the best posted of the traveling elevator men, says the wheat in the Red River valley is heading out short, as well as in other parts of the state. The stand of straw is good, but the heads are not of the usual length. There is a wide difference also in many of the fields. Some are of good average growth of straw with the above condition as to heads; other fields are not nearly as good owing to poor cultivation.

Rollis News.

The people here are getting ready to commence haying and the village blacksmith has all he can do to fix up mowers and hay rakes.

The mail system has been somewhat out of order of late. It seems that the contractor between Thief River Falls and Ware has not been able to get a carrier.

Settlers are coming in almost every day and bringing lots of cattle, horses and farm machinery, and all here who wish to sell their improvements are getting a chance, as about all the vacant land has been taken.

L. K. Ranestran, town of East Valley, who lives on the bank of the Thief river, will build a small steamboat to supply this upper country the coming spring spring. It will run up Thief river to Thief lake and also up Mud river and across Mud lake to supply the country around Grygla. The boat will be 8x28 and will tow a small barge, and any one having for sale a second-hand engine, 4-horse power, coal or wood burner, will do well by writing to L. K. Ranestran, Holt P. O., Marshall Co., Minn.

ABOUT $6,000.

The Amount of Treasurer Beaudry's Shortage.

The examination of the books in the county treasurer's office of Polk county has been completed by W. P. Snow, who has made the following statement to the county commissioners:

In accordance with your instructions, I have the honor to submit herewith a detailed report of my examination of the books and records of the county treasurer's office during the official term of J. T. Beaudry as county treasurer.

The work assigned me has been long and tedious, and perplexing in the extreme because of the number of years in which items of shortage appear, the varied and in many instances extremely clever methods resorted to in order to appropriate moneys of the county and escape the detection of those having access to the books and records of the treasurer's office.

I have made conscientious and painstaking effort to ascertain and and locate all items constituting the total shortage, and am satisfied that the report as submitted can be relied upon as correct in all particulars.

The total shortage as charged against J. T. Beaudry as county treasurer upon the books of the county auditor amounts to $5,969.05, the items entering into same being distributed through a period of eight years as follows:

1892	884 03
1893	293 00
1894	545 00
1895	205 00
1896	386 00
1897	456 98
1898	3,512 39
Total	$6,037 40

The records proper, specified by law to be kept between the county treasurer and county auditor, have in every instance been found correct, all fraudulent transactions appearing as the result of false and altered entries made in day books used as a memoranda of receipts and disbursements during each day for the purpose of proving cash on hand each evening at the close of the day's business.

It is by the clever manupulation of entries in this book that the person appropriating the county funds to his own use has been able to deceive the treasurer, and by changing the stubs of checks to a less amount than the check itself called for, that he has been able to show the amount on deposit in banks greater than the true amount for the purpose of deceiving the public examiner and the board of audit at the times of their visitation.

All false entries and alterations with the evident purpose of concealment and deception, are made in the hand writing of one and the same person, evidently that of the person occupying the position of deputy treasurer. In my detailed report each fraudulent transaction is referred to with date of entry, number of books, page of entry and amount of shortage rendering verification easy.

No blame attaches to your honorable body or any of its members for the condition existing in the accounts of the former county treasurer. If the manipulation of the cash and bank accounts by the deputy treasurer was sufficiently shrewd to deceive the public examiner, it could hardly be expected that others would be more penetrating.

Permit me at this time to extend to your honorable body, and to each of you, and through you, to the several county officials, my sincere thanks for the many courtesies during the process of this examination.

WORK AT HOME.

The Wise Ones Don't Go to Dakota.

Just about this time each year there are usually a number of laboring men in Thief River Falls who go over to North Dakota and harvest—leaving good jobs for something uncertain. What they gain by making this change has never been determined, and it usually results in a loss of many dollars to the majority. True the wages paid to harvest hands are greater than saw mills and other institutions can afford to pay, but the work is harder and dirtyer, the accommodations are poorer and the hours are much longer. The loss of time—owing to rains and moving about—is so great that usually the men who remain at home have more money to their credit at the end of each man. The laborer who is wise will not leave a steady job for something uncertain in the harvest fields of Dakota.

ONCE LIVED HERE

And of Course He Could Talk Chippewa.

Mr. Morck, an attache of the office of County Treasurer Peterson, is considerable of a linguist, himself. He has no trouble in conversing fluently with Norwegians, Swedes, Danes, Germans, French and English speaking people who have business at the court house, and the officers there thought that that was limit until a couple of Indians showed up the other day, when he proved that he was equal to the emergency and opened up on them in the choicest Chippewa.—Crookston Times.

Suspended.

Secretary Hitchcock has suspended until Aug. 22 the removal of the white settlers—the so-called trespassors—on the agency lands. The order of suspension is to allow time for consideration of general information that has been filed at the interior department. A number of settlers have already removfrom Cass Lake, but it is now believed that those who remain will secure titles to their land.

THE NEWS,

By John W. Eastman.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

The settlers of Cass Lake should feel very grateful to Senator Nelson for the work he has done for them.

From the present temper of the Cass Lake Indians Chief Flatmouth is in danger of getting the rest of his physiognomy flattened out.

For the third time Capt. Van Sant will endeavor to secure the Republican nomination for governor. His persistency is to be admired.

Bob Ingersoll kept lots of people guessing while alive, and now that he is dead—well is he shoveling coal, pushing clouds or what? You guess.

Both the Altgeld and Harrison factions in Chicago are such good friends of Mr. Bryan that they are continually studying up ways to embarrass him.

With Prosperity starting us in the face, what is to become of the Populist party? Will Mr. Bryan or Coin's Financial Fool or somebody please explain?

Gen. Alger, secretary of war, last week tendered his resignation to President McKinley to take effect August 1st. His resignation fills a long-felt want.

Congressman Eddy has returned to Minnesota from his trip to Alaska and will spend the summer camping at one of the beautiful lakes near Glenwood.

Farmers of this vicinity report that prairie chickens are doing considerable damage to the crops. Several local philanthropists propose to protect the farmers' interests at all hazards.

A man named Gosowisich in St. Paul thinks he has been bitten by the "kissing bug." Perhaps the swollen lip was caused by an attempt to pronounce his own name rapidly. It looks suspicious.

An English scientist has discovered a way to prolong the life of mosquitoes. We would strongly advise the gentleman to remain in England. Rope is cheap and plentiful in Red Lake county.

Senator Nelson on Monday left New York on a steamer for Norway. Mr. Nelson has been a resident of the United States for fifty years, coming here when but six years of age, and this is his first visit to the land of his birth.

At last it has been explained in connection with the "dead and down" logging that dead timber is pine that has reached its maturity and will not grow to be any larger. A number of pine trees in the Leech lake country did not "grow to be any larger."

The Roseau Times declares positively that "the Republican party cannot exist upon wind and lies." The St. Cloud Journal-Press heartily concurs with this opinion and points out that therein lies the difference between the Republican and Populist parties. That the Populist party seems to grow fat on that sort of diet.

Young men of this locality who pine for the opportunity to wade through gore to glory in the Philippines will take notice that Lieut. S. M. Decker, of the 34th U. S. V. I., formerly captain in the 14th Minn., has been ordered to recruit for his regiment in Minnesota. Lieutenant Decker will be in Crookston Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. He is at present at the Twin Cities gathering recruits.

Ex-Governor Clough has returned from his western trip and states that he will continue to make Minnesota his home, whether or not he concludes to enter into business in the west. Whatever may be said of Gov. Clough, and in spite of the criticisms that have been made of his administration, he is one of the most popular men in Minnesota, and will be remembered by the people of this state as an executive whose judgment was usually good and whose backbone was invariably unbendable.—Princeton Union.

Clara Morris, the actress, has written a charmingly poetic story, "The Princess Porcelain," which is published in the August Ladies' Home Journal. It is Miss Morris' desire to become as well known as an authoress as she is an actress, and in the hope of such achievement she has entered the literary field. Two or three other stories from her pen have been published during recent years, and they have been received with the highest approval. Thus far Miss Morris' literary efforts have met with great success, and she finds a place for everything that comes from her pen.

We govern the Indians without their consent and down south they govern the niggers without their consent, says the Warren Register. Every state punishes its convicted criminals without asking said criminal's permission. Anarchists are compelled to obey laws, not one of which meet their approval. John Lind is governor of the state of Minnesota, without the consent of the editor of the Register, whose wishes were not consulted when he was given his certificate of election conferring power upon him to rule over us in common with the other Republicans of the state. The states lately in rebellion were brought back to their alligeance by force. Examples almost without end might be cited to prove the faculty of the Atkinsonians when they apply Jefferson's famous maxim to the Philippine question. We are going to govern Luzon, whether the Tagals of that island give or withold their consent—and don't anybody make any mistake about it.

Congressman McCleary is quoted by one of the daily papers as saying that he anticipates the Democratic party will adopt a rather novel program in the next presidential campaign. As he views the situation there is no one issue of transcending importance of which the Democratic party at large can avail itself. Therefore, he is inclined to the opinion that the leaders will consent to a localization of issues; that each section will be instructed to press to the front those questions which have a popular following in their respective neighborhoods. In the great west there will be an effort to revive the spirit of the free silver fight while the antis of the east will be fed anti-imperialism off a spoon by the disciples of Edward Atkinson. In the industrial districts of the middle west where organized labor commands a considerable strength a direct play will be made through the labor unions. Anti-trust will be the slogan and a dissolution of all great combinations of capital will be held out as the cure-all for all unsatisfactory economic questions.

SEVERELY HURT

Martin Peterson, a teamster employed by the Thief River Falls Lumber company, was quite severely injured yesterday morning. The reach of his dump-cart was broken while going over a rough piece of ground, throwing the loaded cart upon him and crushing him quite badly. He was taken to the Red Lake hotel and a medical examination developed the fact that no bones were broken although it cannot at present be ascertained whether or not the injuries to his intestines are of a serious nature.

CAN'T BUILD

No New Court House for Red Lake County.

The Red Lake Falls Gazette last week printed a statement to the effect that the county commissioners had decided to build a $5,000 court house at Red Lake Falls. This is untrue. The county has not the required amount on hand, and the commissioners found that they could not legally issue bonds for the amount. It is well.

Stole Money.

O. Retallick's store on Main street was broken into last Wednesday night and $27.50 in silver was taken. The matter has been kept very quiet in the hopes that the offender could be caught, and while suspicion rests upon several, no arrests have been made. Entrance was gained through the back door.

O. J. Knox is busy building a large granary on his farm north of town.

Mesdames Stebbins, Mullarky and Grady were out to Excel last week visiting Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bergeron.

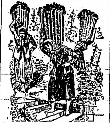
Group of Girls Carrying Weighty Baskets Full of Grapes to the Winery to be Crushed and Made into Wine.



The Speer Wine Company, Passaic N. J.,

have their vineyards stocked of the same grape, the only vineyard of the kind in this country, the vines were imported and planted here over forty years ago. The Speer Port wine and Burgundy are now regarded the finest in the world, their rich, full body and high character is unexcelled. Invalids, weakly persons, especially females, and the aged are made strong and vigorous by its use, as a medicinal wine it has no equal; as a family wine it has no superior. First class physicians all over the country, here and in Europe, who have tried them recommend them as the best.

A close study by physicians on the effect of different brands of wines on the system convinces them of the superiority of the Speer Passaic wines for their patients. Sold by Druggists and Grocers.

Capt. McDonald expects to start up river Monday with the government improvement boats and a crew of men, and will work upon the river until it freezes up this fall, Col. Davenport will arrive in the city Monday to start the work.

See the girls in another column carrying large baskets of grapes to a winery in Portugal for making wine. It is worth reading about. Speer, of New Jersey, makes wine from the same grape. His wines are unsurpassed by any in the world.

A clerk in M. Bothum's store has filed a claim against the city for damages to the amount of $200 for false imprisonment. The man refused to work out his poll tax and Street Commissioner Gilbertson had him arrested, locking him up in the city jail.

A sad accident occured in the Red Lake river near Gentilly Monday. A young man named Peter Lafavre, 18 years of age, was drowned near that place while attempting to swim across the river after a boat on the other side, and when in midstream suddenly went down.

Prof. J. B. O'Brien, principal of the St. Hilaire schools, will, it is said, early in August, take unto himself a wife, in the person of one of the popular school teachers in the St. Hilaire schools. The ceremony will take place in the central M. E. church of Minneapolis.

"Dr." Fountain was at Fosston last week and the license required of him was fixed at so large a figure that he regarded it prohibitory, and left the town without exhibiting his flowing mane. Regular dealers who pay taxes are the ones to supply the city's needs in all lines of trade.

Capt. William Astor Chanler, Congressman from New York, is the president of The New York Star, which is giving a FORTY DOLLAR BICYCLE daily, as offered by their advertisement in another column. Hon. Amos J. Cummings, M. C., Col. Asa Bird Gardner, District Attorney of New York, ex-Governor Hogg, of Texas, and Col. Fred Feigl, of New York, are among the well known names in their Board of Directors.

Will Sorselie informed us yesterday that he had a thirty acre field filled with grasshoppers that were just hatching out. As yet they are doing but little damage, but no telling what they will do in the next three or four weeks. The eggs were laid in an old field that had been cultivated for years.—St. Hilaire Spectator.

LIGHT UP

Or Fix Up the Roads That's the Question.

A gentleman was in the city the first of the week who wishes to secure a franchise for putting of an electric light plant in Thief River Falls. A rate of $120 per year for each arc light is asked—which is surely enough. The matter has been discussed by our business men quite thoroughly and it is believed that we had better wait a few years before putting in the lights and expend our surplus money in fixing up the roads leading into the city, which is a very wise thing.

Noted on Increase.

Capt. James Compton, of Fergus Falls, deputy bank examiner and an uncle of W. C. Smiley, of this city, was in Thief River Falls Monday examining the books of the First State Bank. Mr. Compton pronounced the institution to be in very excellent condition and stated that the deposits had increased from $20,000 to $53,000 since the bank had been under its present management. He left early Tuesday morning for Red Lake Falls where he examined the banks of that place.

CARMAN BIG STORE.

There is a harvest of bargains for our customers that means bargains for every lady and such low prices as this store is noted for. Well, our semi-annual cleaning sale of shoes is in full swing and offers an opportunity for money saving. When we advertise shoe bargains we mean to give them.

FOR PARASOLS.

We have just received a very large line of parasols but as the season is getting rather late we offer them at beggarly prices. You couldn't get them much cheaper if you were to find them. Truly we are losing money on everyone we sell to now, but our experience teaches us that it pays to lose money sometimes. This is one of the occasions on which we are willing to sell goods for less than we really payed for them. It's an opportunity for you to get a parasol dead cheap and you had better improve it.

FOR UMBRELLAS.

It rains just as easy in the summer as any other time. Therefore, one of our reliable umbrellas is a very good companion, and is likely to prove a friend in need if you don't want to pay more than 75 cents for an umbrella. We can sell you a good one for that price, and if you want a high grade one we can supply the need with equal satisfaction.

FOR NEGLIGEE SHIRTS.

There is no need of going around warm and uncomfortable when you can buy a negligee shirt here at a big discount. We have placed the whole line on sale at the lowest prices which will please customers. Then there is a big line of men's furnishings to choose from. Every item splendid value. The ties we sell are swell so they tell. Now you can tell they are swell for they sell.

Ladies, perhaps you need one or two more shirt waists to carry you through the season. Probably you can find just what you want if you look over our stock. Every shirt waist in the house is going at a cut price to close out the balance of the stock at very desirable prices.

FOR CORSETS.

Half the secret of keeping cool lies in correct dress for all women who seek comfort these hot days. We recommend an ice berg summer corset. They are made of strong summer net which allows good ventilation and at the same time gives all needed support. You can pay as much or as little as you want to and no matter what priced corset you select here you will get good value.

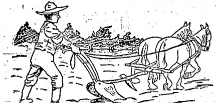
ST. PAUL, - MINN.



I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

WANTED.—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. R·I·P·A·N·S, 10 for 5 cents or twelve packets for 48 cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

The Anonymous Letter.

"By Jove! What a beauty! Who is this, old man?" The speaker stood in an admiring attitude before the picture of a young girl, while the one questioned answered briefly, "My sister."

"Oh, I say, Paul, that won't do! We don't put our sisters' pictures in frames like that."

"Don't we? Well, I do. Oh, hang it, Burt, don't you see that I'm busy? I can't work while your tongue is wagging. Get out of here now, and if you won't show your face here again today you shall spend the month of July with me at my home, and then you shall judge for yourself whether that frame is too good for my sister's picture." And Paul Reynolds gave his chum a good natured push toward the door.

"Do you mean that? Hurrah! Why, that would be worth a lifetime of banishment—no offense to you, old fellow!" and Burton Smith mildly expressed his delight by turning somersaults across the room, walking back on his hands, then, bringing his feet to the floor, he shot upward, and, catching hold of a bar above his head, he drew himself up and whirled around the bar with the proficiency of an acrobat, dropping to the floor with a shout of overflowing mirth.

"Get out of this, you rattlehead!" And, having him outside, Paul shut the door in his face and heard him go down stairs at a breakneck pace, which brought the good old landlady to the door in alarm, expecting to find somebody at the bottom with a broken neck.

"Sakes alive! That Mr. Smith again!" she exclaimed.

Burton's walk home had a tendency to quiet his hilarity, but that face was still before him, and, after sitting in deep thought for an hour, he sprang up with alacrity.

"I'll do it, by Jove! She can't feel deeply offended anyway, and I'll sign only a part of my name. Better for the future's sake to be on the safe side. There, that'll do, I think."

Belle Reynolds stood with an open letter in her hand, and her eyes flashed angrily as she spoke her thoughts aloud. "Soft headed idiot! Heard of me through a friend, indeed! This stranger"—

Then something like the truth swept through her mind, and her fun loving spirit reasserted itself, and, going to her desk, she wrote:

Mr. Charles Burt:

Your most extraordinary letter savors strongly of the wedding bells class, but you forgot to state whether your motive was for "pleasure, pastime or with a view to matrimony." Whatever your object may be, permit me to say that you are guilty of gross impertinence. My friend, Matilda Brindle, would call you "sassy."

Are you aware, sir, of the risk you incur by asking to correspond with a spinster of the tender age of 57? Let me enlighten you. I will honestly describe the picture which my mirror reflects, and then perhaps you will congratulate yourself on having found a person so frank as myself. My reddish yellow hair, already thin on top, hangs in ringlets about my full sized ears; my freckled nose is elevated by nature to a high degree, my teeth are conspicuous by the absence of not a few, and my greenish gray eyes would be my one redeeming feature if I were not cross eyed. I am tall and commanding—most emphatically commanding. My joints are too large to allow my wearing rings, so don't send any. I am a strong minded woman, sir, so think well before you further commit yourself. B. R.

When Burton Smith received this mocking epistle, he thrust both hands into his trousers pockets and stood gazing at his feet with a most dejected air. No acrobatic performances now. Oh, no! No occasion for them. But as the humor of the whole affair struck him he threw back his head and laughed—he roared.

"The little minx! Serves me right, though! But how foolish she could make a fellow feel. Smith, you're an ass!"

The June days passed, the eagerly anticipated vacation drew near, and at last Paul Reynolds and Burton Smith found themselves in the quaint old town of Castone, where they were happily welcomed.

At first Burton rather stood in awe of beautiful Belle Reynolds. Her lovely face and graceful figure won universal admiration, and her sweet disposition endeared her to all. Burton Smith proved to be no exception. Their mutual love for all kinds of outdoor sports threw them together constantly, and they became firm friends. Then as the time for his departure drew near he began to realize that in leaving Belle Reynolds behind he was leaving all that had made life so bright for him during the last few weeks. Yet he felt that there was no reason why he, a comparative stranger, should claim more than the friendship accorded him.

He would undoubtedly have gone back to business with his love untold had he not unexpectedly come upon Belle in the little vine covered summer house one morning with a woebegone expression and traces of tears upon her fair face. She hastily explained that she had been indulging in a fit of loneliness at the thought of her brother's return, but the look and blush which accompanied her words gave him new courage, and, taking both her hands in his, he asked:

"May I hope, Belle, that you will miss me a little, too, when I am gone? Forgive me for speaking so soon, but you have become dear to me, and I am conceited enough to believe that you like me. Tell me, darling, that you can in time care for me, and I will try to be worthy of your dear love."

Whatever her answer may have been, suffice it to say that when they emerged from their secluded nook an hour later their faces bore evidences of their new found happiness.

"By the way, Belle, I have not yet met your friend, Matilda Brindle. Does she not live in Castone?"

Belle stopped short in her walk and looked at him. "Then you are"—

"Charles Burton-Smith, at your service," and he made a profound bow just in time to receive a sound box on the ear, administered by the little beauty beside him. Then she fled precipitately.—Boston Post.

A Blowin Well.

The professor was the center of a group of interested townspeople. He was in the drug store and was smoking his after supper cigar, the while telling about the geological formation of the country, the coal strata and how they dipped here and there. The professor was a mighty interesting story teller, and when he opened up on paleontology, dynamics, geognosy, petrography and lithology you were just bound to lay down your parcels and listen, the professor made things so interesting. He had been telling about boring for oil and things, and at last a little old man in a patched yellow overcoat and a big red muffler stepped up and said:

"S'cuse me, mister, but I hear you all tellin about wells an things, did you ever hear of a blowin well? One that done nothin but blow air day an night?"

"Yes," answered the professor beamingly, his mind on gas wells, "I have."

"Well, I had one onct," said the old party with the red muffler. "It was over yere acrost the river, 'bout eight miles."

"You don't tell me," said the professor quickly. "I didn't know there was such a thing over the river. Tell me about it. What's your name?"

"My name," answered the red muffler man, "is Bill Bodine. 'Long 'bout two years befo' wahtime a feller come by my place one day with a hoss auger. A hoss auger's one that is bored into the ground by a hoss walkin round in a circle. He ast me do I want a well dug, an I answers I do. So I give him an ole Texas pony I had to dig the well. When he got down 'bout 60 feet, thar was a bust of wind f'om the well, an up comes the auger. The well began to blow, an as the feller didn't fetch nothin but wind of course he didn't get the pony.

"As I said," continued the old fellow as we all scrunched up to hear the story, "it was 'long 'bout two year befo' the wah. Folks come for miles to hear that well blow, an we was all pretty well skeered up, then 'long comes a comick, an that skeers us up some more"—

"Along comes what?" asked the professor.

"A comick in the sky, with a long tail of fire."

"Oh, yes, I see," said the professor.

"Well, everybody thought the worl' was comin to an eend," said the old man.

"An jist 'bout that time 'long comes a bresh fire preacher an starts a revival. Almost everybody j'ined meetin, they was that skeered. An in the co'se of time 'long comes the wah, an we all j'ined thet. Well, so long."

Five minutes after he had gone every one, and particularly the professor, remembered that the old man had not told us what had become of the blowing well.

The next morning the professor drove across the river and out to the farm on which the old man had said the blowing well had been bored. A big young farmer met him at the gate.

"Where's the blowing well on this farm?" asked the professor.

The farmer stared at him awhile and then said, "Ain't no blowing well on this yere farm."

"Don't Bill Bodine live here?" asked the professor.

"Ust to live here. Lives fo' miles fudder along on the old Steve'son place," answered the farmer.

The professor kept on, and when he came to the old Stevenson place he saw a small, hungry, alert looking woman in the yard feeding a large flock of chickens.

"Is this where Mr. Bodine lives?" asked the professor.

"He do," said the hungry little woman. "I'm Mrs. Bodine. Bill's down yon killing a hawg."

"Where's that blowing well I heerd him tell about?" asked the professor.

"Lan o' massy, you heerd of thet well. Why, that was long befo' wahtimes," she answered. "It was the firinest well I ever see. It jest blowed an hollered all the time. You could hear it holler over a half mile away, but we got ust to hearing it, an it didn't worry us none. Why, you could hol' a cornstalk over thet well, an the win' would blaw all the leaves off'n it quicker'n you could say 'scat.' An when a hen would und'take to fly crost it the hen jest natur'ly come out unfeathered, to say nothin of bein blown about 200 feet in the air. One night I lay in bed thinkin. I'd worked so hard all day, for it was hog killin time an I hed to take care of the chiddlins an things till I was wore out, so's I couldn't sleep none. Outside in the yard the well was blowin away, an it set me to thinkin. 'S'pose,' said I to myself, 'that blame ole blowin well should take a notion to back up an take to suckin in 'stead of blowing out.' And I jest lay an thought of thet till morning. An the more I thought the worse it got. S'pose it did take to suckin in? Then I thought of the young uns an the chickens, an I was plumb skeered to death. When mawnin came, I jest kep' the young uns indoors, an I said to Bill: 'You've got to fix thet blowin well 'fore I let the young uns out. S'pose it was to take to suckin in 'stead of blowin, whar'd we be at?' jest like thet. I said it to Bill, an he knowed I meant ev'ry word of it. Waal, Bill he went an cut down a young cottonwood tree, an he skun it off till it was slick an white, 'nen he ups an jams it right down into the blowin well little end-fust, an it stuck thar good an tight. Then he built a staging an got up with a maul an driv' it in till it wouldn't go no fudder. After that he cut it off clost to the ground, 'nen he covered it with dirt an tromped it down. That's the last of the blowin well. Inside of a hour all the neighbors was over to see what made the well stop blowin an what'd become of it. 'It jest natur'ly closed up tight,' said Bill, 'an 'twon't blow no mo'. Reckon it's taken to blowin down.' An the folks went away, an that's the last we heerd of the blowin well. I almos' done forgit all 'bout it till you mentioned it. Reckon we none of us could fin' it now."

And Bill Bodine never knew that he had a gas well on his farm. There is no doubt he would have found it out, however, had he gone about it smoking and lighting matches. But Bill didn't smoke.—Albany Telegram.

Tattooing and Snake Bites.

It really begins to look as if there were nothing new under the sun. While scientific minds are discussing the antitoxin serum treatment of disease as if it were a new thing, the people of ancient Burma are calling attention to the fact that for centuries the material they have used in the common custom of tattooing has been an efficient antitoxin for snake bites. The tattooed Burmese regard the bites of poisonous snakes as harmless. This, at least, is the statement of a gentleman from Burma, who brings testimony to bear in corroboration of his singular statement. Scientists might well give this matter their attention.—Leslie's Weekly.

Recruiting for Uncle Sam's Volunteers.

Since reruiting for the new volunteer regiments has begun in St. Paul, Minneapolis and Fargo, there has been an unusual rush of applicants, largely on account of the advantages offered to the men to go to the Philippines now, to serve in the army until June 30, 1901. It is asserted, on information based upon war department investigation, that the men who are on the field at that time will have an opportunity for investment that will not again be offered in the history of the islands. Some of the men who are now being enrolled are going largely for the purpose of getting in on the ground floor when the business revival comes with American rule.

Many who are unfamiliar with army conditions have scoffed at the idea that a soldier could save money out of his pay, yet the majority of the men who are in the regular army have managed to accumulate a bank account in time of peace when their pay was $2.00 less per month than it is now. The pay of a soldier is better than that of a farm hand. He not only gets his board and $15.60 per month, but he gets his clothes, and the allowance for that is so generous that few ever use it up, getting the difference in cash when they are mustered out of the service. The opportunity for spending money in the Philippines is not so plentiful as in this country and many of the men now there are keeping their pay intact. He can deposit money with the paymaster in sums not less than $5.00 per month and draw interest at the rate of 4 per cent. until date of discharge.

The pay of a private soldier for two years amounts to $374.40 and when mustered out he gets land travel pay from the place of enlistment and free transportation by water to American shores any time within a year after honorable discharge. Some of those who have figured the thing out have decided that they can thus come out of the service with about $500.00, and this they propose to invest in the Orient. This sum would furnish a fair start in business in this country where competition is sharp, but it is believed that it can be much more advantageously invested in the Philippines where the field is still open. At any rate there are a great many men who propose to try it and should they fail, they still have an opportunity to get back home at the expense of the government, any time within a year.

The new regiments will be different from the volunteer regiments that were organized during the war with Spain in that they will have at their head competent regular army officers who know and supply the wants of the men. The government has completed a most satisfactory arrangement for securing rations and fresh meat, and army fare has greatly improved. The physical qualifications for applicants for admission to the volunteer regiments allow a little more leeway than in the regular army, although those who are accepted must be in robust health. A man is not required to be a citizen, and although it is not necessary that he can read and write, he must be able to speak the English language.

Arrangements have been made by Capt. E. P. Andrus, who has charge of recruiting in the Northwest, to visit towns where half a dozen or more men are willing to enlist, and if upon examination they are found to be fit for the army, he sends them to one of the recruiting station at government expense; otherwise they must pay their own way to the nearest recruiting station.

As the comanding officers of these volunteer regiments have authority to organize the men into companies, in order to form Minnesota companies in the 34th U. S. Vol. Infantry, the men of this state should come forward promptly and enlist at once. Offices have been established at Phoenix Building, St. Paul, 324 1st Ave. S., Minneapolis, and Fargo, N. D.

A SURPRISE.

Appeal Filed from Bills Allowed by Commissioners.

Tuesday morning County Attorney Van R. Brown served County Auditor Zeh with notice of appeal from bills allowed by the county commissioners defraying expenses of the committee appointed by the commissioners to go to St. Paul during the session of the legislature this spring in the interests of the bill providing for a settlement between Polk and Red Lake counties.

The bills are: Theo. Garceau, $78.95; K. M. Hausen, $152.85; C. E. Boughton, $15 and $130.48; Dr. N. M. Watson, $126.

Mr. Brown gives as his reason for this action that the expenses incurred under this matter are not legally a county charge, and that he proposes to put a stop to this kind of thing. It is a well known fact that certain members of the board and the ex-county attorney are at swords points with Mr. Brown, and this is regarded as another turn in a game of tit-for-tat. It seems, too, that the matter is being pushed by a number of citizens in the northern part of the county, namely Ira C. Richardson, H. E. Mussey, O. P. Johnson, E. M. Evenson, R. Swanson and others, and the county attorney was petitioned by them to proceed.

—The affair has occasioned considerable of a stir. Of course the county auditor can not issue the orders now, and unless the appeal is withdrawn the courts will have to decide.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

A Singular Accident.

A peculiar accident, happened on the farm of Harry Hurl, about five miles east of Stephen, last week. While two of his hired men were digging a well on his farm, and had got down to the depth of 44 feet, the bottom suddenly fell in, one of the men was thrown into a whirl of water disappeared, and has not been seen or heard of since. The other man when he felt that the ground was giving away under him caught on to the rope that was used in hoisting the dirt up, and was drawn to the top. Mr. Hurl then got a rope and chain about 100 feet long, and attached a weight to it and dropped it in this well, but it did not touch bottom but was washed rapidly west, showing that a large body of water was underneath.

Trouble at Excel.

August Kehna and another party were over from Excel Tuesday and swore out a warrant against Richard Decker, of said town, for assault and battery, said to have been committed on Sunday last. Justice Keenan, of this city, issued the warrant and Constable Dady started for Excel early Wednesday morning to arrest the party accused, returning with him in the afternoon.—Warren Sheaf.

Well Known Here.

Last Wednesday evening, at St. Ann's church, Crookston, occured the marriage of David Collins, the St. Hilaire photographer, and Miss Catherine Powers, of Red Lake Falls. Both the bride and groom are well known in this city; the former being a sister of Mrs. M. J. Burns. The NEWS extends congratulations.

Red Men are Learning the Ways of Civilization.

White Earth, Minn.—A strange accident happened here that shows the advancement of the Chippawas on the White Earth reservation. Owen & Hillie have the contract for building the $50,000 Indian school now in process of erection near this agency. Some Indians have been employed by this firm, but a number of white men have been recently imported. This morning about fifty Indians appeared and complained to Agent Sutherland that their places were taken by white men and insisted that the white men be discharged and they employed. The agent explained that the contractors could not be interfered with, and the Indians departed not just satisfied, but it is not probable that they will make trouble, though they don't feel just right or satisfied. The very idea of Indians forming a kind of labor union and fighting for work is new, and the question is, does it mark a date of improvement or degeneration? Time will tell. Since the Indian court has been established, Judge T. H. Beadlieu is more than a busy man. Verily, civilization strikes boldly abroad upon the White Earth reservation.

Her Claim Gone.

Word comes from Warroad that during a recent gale there, which continued three days and which lashed the waters into a fury, the land known as Sand Island entirely disappeared. The tract comprised 20 acres of sandy soil upon which small brush and a few trees grew and lay near the shore a mile north of the mouth of Warroad river. It was but a few feet higher than the level of the lake, and the waves broke over it in such volume as to wash the sand entirely away, loosening the roots of all vegetation, and obliterating the island so that where it once showed itself there is now a clean sweep of water. Miss Florence Dousland, of Crookston, had filed upon the land as a homestead.

Will Likely Purchase a Poor Farm.

At the last meeting of the county commissioners the proposition of purchasing a county poor farm was discussed at some length. Although no definite action was taken, it is quite probable that a farm in a desirable location will be bought and buildings erected thereon in which to house the county poor.

This would no doubt be cheaper than supporting the paupers under the present system, many of whom would be able to raise their own living if placed upon a farm. Besides it would prevent a great many from asking county aid, if they thought it would be necessary to go upon the poor farm and be classed as paupers to receive it. Red Lake County Courier.

FOUL TACTICS.

The Way Red Lake Won the Base Ball Game.

The ball game Sunday between the Thief River Falls nine and the Red Lake Falls Selects on the grounds of the latter was considerable of a farce. The decisions of the umpire were rotten and our boys complain bitterly of the treatment accorded them. Several fights were narrowly averted and when a prominent citizen of St. Hilaire objected to some of the decisions, an attempt was made to arrest him. The score was 7 to 8 in favor of the Red Lake Falls nine, but had our boys been given a fair chance they would have undoubtedly won.

The special train carried a large number of citizens from this place to Red Lake Falls and a number took advantage of the fine day and good roads by riding on bicycles or driving down. A return game will probably be played in Thief River Falls on Sunday, August 13.

By John W. Eastman.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

The Kentucky Populists have found the middle of the road.

The Warren Register has been enlarged to a six column folio. It is one of the best papers published in the Red River valley.

Senator Ryder is being mentioned as a congressional possibility in the event of Congressman Eddy not seeking a re-nomination. Mr. Ryder is one of the strongest Republicans residing in the northern part of the district.

The friends of R. G. Evans, of Minneapolis, are now booming him for the Republican nomination for governor. The fact that Hennepin county has always knifed the local candidate would make his nomination impossible.

Strikes that are likely to occur during the next few years will not be against the reductions of wages made necessary by a falling market, but will be for increased wages, marking a return of prosperity. In other words, the strikes will not be manifestations of discouragement, but expressions of hope.

General Weyler is making inflammitory speeches and generally raising Ned over in Spain trying to show the authorities how the government should be run. After his experience in trying to govern Cuba one would think that the general might keep quiet but Weyler seems to be a sort of Spanish Populist.

The Union is going to support whoever the Republicans nominate for governor. It has taken a contract to beat "jacklind" and is going to do it.—Anoka County Union.

That's all right, Uncle Granville—bless your gilded dome—but won't you let some of the rest of the boys carry a torch in the procession?

Judge Watts, of Crookston, last week rendered a decision which is worthy of much praise. It seems that a man 81 years of age was persuaded to deed his farm to a son upon the understanding that he was to be cared for as long as he lived. The county has of late been compelled to care for the old man and he commenced an action to have the deed set aside as fraudulently obtained, and Judge Watts so decided.

As will be noticed by an article in another column taken from the Red Lake Falls Gazette, an appeal has been taken from the bills allowed by the county commissioners to re-imburse the citizens of this county who spent their time and money last winter in the hope of securing a law which would give to this county an equal division of the assets of Polk county. These gentlemen worked hard for interests of the taxpayers of this county and it is only just that they should have their expenses paid.

The complete statements of this nation's foreign trade for the fiscal year ended June 30 last have been made public by the bureau of statistics of the treasury department. The total exports for the fiscal year amounted in value to $1,227,205,410, as against $1,231,482,330 for the previous fiscal year, when our exports reached the high-water mark. The falling off is inconsiderable in amount, which is evidence that the increase in our foreign trade is permanent and not spasmodic. The imports for the year ended June 30, 1899, were $697,116,854, as against $616,049,654 the preceding fiscal year.

The disloyal anti-expansionists, who so confidently predicted that the government could not raise a volunteer army for the Philippines and went into spasms of joy because the youth of the country did not respond in mobs to the announcement that recruiting had commenced, have suddenly become quiet as the returns begin to come in. With the new volunteer army not two weeks old, numbering nine thousand and recruits pouring in at the rate of six hundred a day, you can figure for yourself how long it will take to fill it up to the required thirteen thousand.

San Domingo is an interesting little state which divides, with Hayti, the territory of the island of the same name lying between Porto Rico and Cuba. San Domingo is a republic of the Spanish persuation and popular elections are decided by bullets, not ballots, and the defeated candidate immediately goes upon a foreign tour—for his health. President Heureaux of, San Domingo, has shuffled off the mortal coil and the citizens of the republic are busy collecting arms and ammunition for the coming campaign. Gen. Abelarde A. Moscoso, the Wm. Jennings Bryan of the island, is at present in New York—for his health also—urging the free lead doctrine for all it is worth, and wants the United States to cut in "in the interest of humanity," just as in Cuba. Will Mr. Atkinson please speak up quick?

For almost a year the Democratic papers of the United States have been engaged in viciously roasting Secretary Alger and frantically demanding his release from the cabinet. President McKinley has come in for about as severe condemnation as Alger has because of his delay in retiring the obnoxious secretary of war. When, however, the president does exactly what the Democratic papers have been abusing him for not doing, they turn around with customary Democratic consistency and begin to abuse him for doing that which they have advised him to do. An exchange remarks as a prediction, that within six months the Democratic press will be pointing Alger out as a martyr to McKinley's vindictiveness and political ambitions. It is not necessary to wait six months; they have already begun it, and long before six months, or even six weeks, are past, Alger will be placed upon a pedestal along with John Sherman, and other discredited Republicans who have become deified at the hands of Democrats because of their recalcitrancy. All that is necessary to make a saint, in the estimation of a Democrat, is to take an ordinary Republican sinner and let him foreswear his politics, deny his convictions and make trouble for the Republican party.—Princeton Union.

AN OUTSIDE OPINION.

"Red Lake county is having its troubles now. The board of commissioners has allowed the bills of those who sought to induce the last legislature to pass a bill to get $50,000 out of Polk county, and their action has been appealed from by certain citizens of that bailiwick. * * * Had these men won, they would have been commended for their good work, and there would have been no question of their being paid the amount of their expenses. The people up that way would have probably insisted upon each being given a medal in recognition of his services. But, as before stated, they didn't win. * * * Now that it is a matter of history, however, the bills of those who engaged in the strugle for Red Lake county, should in justice be paid. The men, who worked to secure the passage of the bill, did so with the full understanding had with the board of commissioners, that their expenses would be paid. A resolution to this effect was passed by the board, and the amounts were listed, a member appointed to secure a warrant from the auditor and disburse the amounts, but the auditor declined to issue a warrant to cover the amount. The board then asked that the bills be presented, allowed them, and then came the appeal. This latter action is in no wise commendable to either the petitioners upon whose request the appeal was taken, nor to the county attorney who formulated it. The idea and intention of the men, who spent their money to pass the bill, was justifiable from their standpoint, and for the good of the county, as they saw it, and the temper of the people of Red Lake county is different from that of the mass of humanity if they do not frown down the effort being made by the appellants."

Seeks Justice.

Joseph M. Markham, the well known St. Hilaire hotel keeper, was in the city Tuesday and secured the services of H. W. Lee. Mr. Markham proposes to have the Red Lake Falls policeman, who attempted to arrest him Sunday, brought before a justice of the peace and answer to the charge of assault and battery. A warrant has been issued for the arrest of the policeman by a St. Hilaire justice and the trial will probably be had today.

Gone to War.

Sam Bardelson, a former lieutenant in the Fourteenth Minnesota volunteers, left Tuesday for Crookston, when he went to enlist in the regular army with Lieut. Decker. Mr. Bardelson will be given the rank of sergeant in the company. He will probably leave for Manila in October and he will carry with him the best wishes of a large number of Thief River Falls people.

Going to Sue Us.

Pursuant to the action of the board of county commissioners taken in April, Auditor Gleason demanded of the proper officers of Red Lake county that they take steps to complete the settlement between Red Lake and the parent county of Polk, which has been pending since the division two years ago. The notice came up before the Red Lake county commissioners at a recent meeting and was laid on the table.

This is proof that the Red Lakers do not propose to settle under the laws without placing all possible obstructions in the way, and as the resolution directs Auditor Gleason in case of a refusal to take such further steps as may be deemed most effective under the authority conveyed by the law mentioned, the courts will be invoked to compel a settlement.—Crookston Times.

have their vineyards stocked of the same grape, the only vineyard of the kind in this country, the vines were imported and planted here over forty years ago. The Speer Port wine and Burgundy are now regarded the finest in the world, their rich, full body and high character is unexcelled. Invalids, weakly persons, especially females, and the aged are made strong and vigorous by its use, as a medicinal wine it has no equal; as a family wine it has no superior. First class physicians all over the country, here and in Europe, who have tried them recommend them as the best.

A close study by physicians on the effect of different brands of wines on the system convinces them of the superiority of the Speer Passaic wines for their patients.

Since yesterday the sun has not been quite so brilliant nor the town so hot as formerly. On that day the relentless paddle wheels of the steamer "Viking" bore away from us Leo Kulklinska, the philosopher of Shotley Brook, and "the boys" are plunged in deepest gloom. Our loss is Shotley Brook's gain, but that didn't help us any. Just two months ago "Shotley Brook Leo" struck town in a blaze of glory, and on a lumber raft. Leo is a lumber-jack of the old school, relic of a type, fast passing away. Born in Wisconsin when lumber was in its glory, he has followed the pine, as riverman or woodsmen to its outer edge, and now is settled upon his own homestead, on the banks of Red Lake, to enjoy a well earned rest. Two months since he felt a longing for old times and becoming captain of a raft, he skillfully navigated his craft from Shotley brook across the lake, down the winding stream, struck Thief River Falls—and the stuff was all off. Now Leo is an artist, a painter. His startling effects in vermillion tints put the crimson sunset to the blush and would drive the most daring poster artist to despair. In the words of the old song, "It was warm in the ancient city that evening"—and the next evening—and the next. In fact, there has been no use for overcoats in town any evening for the last two months. Three weeks since Herman Gruel, whose homestead lies in the beautiful Black Duck country, also arrived in the city and the thermometer rose a few degrees higher. Herman is also an artist, and the two virtuosos in crimson jointly produced several hand painted master peices which astonished the natives. Tuesday Herman departed per steamer "Ethel" and the town became too lonesome for Leo. Hence his exodus. Leo took with him a large supply of artist's materials and expects to continue painting in the wilds of Beltrami county. Some original productions can be confidently expected. Leo informs his sorrowing friends that he will return before snow flies.

Challenges Brown.

Al Paranto, the local foot racer, who has succeeded in defeating every one in this city, is now desirous of going after bigger game. Accordingly he called at the News office yesterday and asked us to challenge Van R. Brown, of Red Lake Falls, for a foot race to be either for a bet of $50 a side or fun. A race between these two would be very interesting as both are very fleet.

Married.

Excel, Minn., July 28.—In the the town of Excel, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Swanson, by the Rev. Bradoson, of Thief River Falls, Mr. Hans C. Sorenson and Miss Anna M. Swanson were joined in holy wedlock.

The ceremony was performed at 3 P. M. Wednesday, the 26th, in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives. The bride wore a wreath and her dress was of pale blue albatross trimmed with white silk. She was attended by Miss Emily Swanson and Misses Louise and Mary Sorenson, as bride's maids. The groom was dressed in the conventional black and was attended by Messrs. Edward Larson, Edwin Sorenson and Victor Swanson as groomsmen. After the ceremony lunch was served, and at six o'clock a sumptuous repast was spread; and it is needless to say that ample justice was done the many delicacies which had been provided. And as night began to cast her dusky mantle o'er the earth, two violinists chanced (?) along and soon sweet strains of music mingled with the merry laughter of the dancers, who tripped the "light fantastic" until the "wee sma" hours of morn.

The bride and groom received many useful and costly presents, as follows: Half dozen silver knives and forks—Miss Mary Sorenson; half dozen silver table spoons, C. G. Rapp; half dozen silver teaspoons and sugar shell, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Muzzey; parlor lamp, Mrs. O. G. Larson; cake and cake dish, Mrs. Erickson; half dozen fruit dishes, Mrs. M. Johnson; cake plate and pair of linen towels, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Borgoron; half dozen cups, saucers and plates, Mr. and Mrs. Smith; parlor lamp, Mrs. R. Sorenson; oak rocking chair, Mr. and Mrs. John Johnson; silver syrup pitcher and hand-painted table spread, Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Malberg; bed spread, Mrs. R. Finke; two china cups and saucers, Mrs. Thos. Steenerson; nickeled coffee pot, syrup pitcher, sugar bowl, spoon holder, cake plate and pudding dish, Louise Sorenson; set sad irons, Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Solem; two chairs, Mr. and Mrs. Engen; vase, Ella Smith; fancy table spread, Albert Lonson; linen table cloth, Miss Johnson; set glass ware, Anton Langseth; fancy vase, Amelia Schenky.

Mr. and Mrs. Sorenson will reside in the town of Excel on the farm of Chas. Swanson, uncle of the bride. They take with them the best wishes of their many friends.

Lost His Pile.

A drunk giving his name W. A. Howard has found lodging at the police station today. He says he came into town yesterday from Red Lake where he had been work and that he had a ten dollar bill, a twenty dollar bill and a five dollar gold piece when he went to bed last night at the Sherman hotel. When he awoke this morning he could not find the money and declares that the entire amount has been stolen from him. Howard was on his way to Ada, where he intended to secure work during harvest.—Crookston Tribune.

Hailed Out.

An area of about fifty square miles in Southern Polk county suffered from a severe hail storm Monday afternoon. The storm was very severe in places and some farmers had their entire crops destroyed. Considerable damage was also done near Red Lake Falls, but the farmers who suffered the greatest losses live in the western part of Polk county.

I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

WANTED.—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. R·I·P·A·N·S, 10 for 5 cents or twelve packets for 48 cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

First Love.

I had decided to marry the doctor's cook, Mollie. I was 15, while Mollie was 6 or 7 years my senior. Again, I was not in a position to support a wife, and, as I see now, my actions were inspired rather by Mollie's excellent cheese cakes and succulent jam rolls than by her buxom figure and applelike cheeks.

When I informed my "chum," Butters, of my resolve, he looked at me queerly, thrust his hands into his pockets and said: "Oh, Lor'! Have you thought of this seriously? Have you thought what a heap of things people want who get married?"

"What sort of things?"

"Oh, chairs and tables and—and frying pans. Where do you expect to get 'em from? They cost an awful lot."

I was silent. To tell the truth, I had not considered the practical side of the question.

My action was above all sordid details.

"There's a house, too," Butters pursued. "Where are you going to live?"

"Oh—er—we shall go on as we are for a bit."

Butters stared.

"Yes."

"Oh, but that's 'rot,' you know! We can't have a married man in the school. The doctor won't stand it."

"He'll never know, fat head. It's going to be a secret marriage."

"Oh, crikey! At the registry office?"

I nodded.

"I wonder how much it costs. I shall have to ask."

"You'd better ask Mollie first," Butters returned. "She may object to a secret marriage. There'll be no calling her name out before the congregation, or cake, or presents. I say, old chap, fancy a wedding without cake or presents. Why, people get heaps of nobby things when they're married—silver cigarette cases and walking sticks."

I kicked the gravel ruefully.

"It can't be helped," I answered regretfully. "After all, it'll be more romantic."

"Why, yes; there is that about it. You might elope with her, you know; get her through the window and have a rope ladder and a coach and four waiting in the lane. Only she's rather a lump to pull through a window. I say, what a lark it would be if she stuck and the doctor nabbed you. My, what a wopping you'd get!"

I am afraid I betrayed some symptoms of uneasiness here.

"You'll tell me how you do it?" Butters added.

"How I do what?"

"Why, propose, you know."

"Oh—er—yes."

"Shall you kiss her?"

"Shall I?"

"They generally do, only you'll have to stand on a stool to do it, for she's a good head taller than you, and, mind, when you propose, you'll have to go down on your knees."

"On my knees?"

"It's the proper thing, I know, because I saw young Evergreen propose to my sister Flo. She refused him, though. By the bye, you'll want a ring. I'll give you that one I got out of the prize pocket for your white rat."

"Let's have a look at it."

He pulled it out. It looked very like gold, and in a few minutes I had parted with my white rat, and the ring was transferred to my waistcoat pocket.

That evening I had a quiet stroll in the doctor's grounds to think matters over. While I was thus engaged James, the gardener, came along with the watering can. As a rule we fellows were seldom on good terms with James, for he always suspected us of having designs on his fruit, but this evening he was quite pleasant and asked me, if I'd like a pear, to come with him. Of course I did, for James' pears are just prime. It was a real juicy one he picked, and it melted in my mouth like butter.

"Good, ain't it, Master Carraway?" he said.

I nodded. My mouth was too full to speak.

"Now, I wonder if I might be so bold as to ask you to do me a favor, Master Carraway?" he went on, eying me a bit doubtfully.

"Why, of course you may, James. I'll do anything for you I can."

"Thank you, sir, thank you kindly. It ain't much—only just to give this letter to Mollie, the cook. You see, Master Carraway, I don't like goin to the house over often, for the other servants they plague Mollie about it, an she don't like it, so if you'd kindly give it to her you'd be doin me a great favor. I know you're a sensible young gent, Master Carraway. I've often said so to Mollie, so I don't mind tellin you that it's about gettin married."

"About"—

"Yes, sir. I've been thinkin of it for some time, an now the doctor's give me a rise an I've got Joe Barnes' cottage I don't see any reason why we should wait any longer. It's most as cheap to keep two as one, Master Carraway, an she's a capital manager. I don't see as 'ow I can do better."

"Who is she, James?" I asked, not, it must be confessed, without a touch of misgiving.

He looked at me in surprise.

"Who? Why, Mollie."

"You're—you're going to marry her?"

"Yes, sir. The banns'll be put up on Sunday, an I've brought the ring. A guinea I give for it. But 'ave another pear, Master Carraway."

But I had no heart for pears at that moment, and I made my way back to the house, scarcely heeding James' reminder about the letter.

Perhaps I had some thoughts of destroying that missive, but then I reflected that such an act could do no good. Everything was practically settled. Mollie was lost to me forever.

I told Butters and asked him to take back the ring, as I had no further use for it, but he refused to do this, and we fought it out at the end of the cricket ground behind the trees. I got a black eye and also 50 lines for fighting. Mollie did her best to console me by giving me some of her best cheese cakes. If I could always be sure of such cheese cakes, I wouldn't mind impositions every day—I wouldn't mind losing Mollie herself.—Cleveland Herald.

Friendly Assistance.

"Can I help you to anything?" asked boarder No. 6.

"Yes," replied the newcomer at the foot of the table. "You might give me a clew to this hash."—Philadelphia North American.

"BECAUSE."

"You are too provoking for anything, Jennie Norton. The very idea of your giving up Mrs. Preston's reception for an old, tiresome prayer meeting. Why, you can go to a meeting every week, but it isn't very often one has the streak of good luck to be invited to a brilliant reception."

"I don't blame you, Alice, for being surprised at the turn of affairs. It seems that Miss Rice had to go away suddenly and was unable to engage a substitute to play at the Friday prayer meeting. Mr. Allen asked me as a last resort, and after a great deal of teasing I consented to give up the reception for a plaguy old prayer meeting. Now, Allie, dear, if you tease me any more about it I'll give in the very last minute and disappoint the Rev. Sydney Allen. And you'll admit that would be rather hard on a new minister.

"I suppose all the girls will think I've turned goody goody when they hear of it, but it's no such thing. I never felt so rebellious and wicked in all my life as I did yesterday, when I promised to play on Friday evening.

"I don't think I would have given in if grandpa hadn't come in and said to Mr. Allen, 'Of course Jennie will gladly accommodate you.' I knew then it would be useless to refuse, so I said yes in my snappiest tone. What can't be helped must be endured. I do hope that you will have a lovely time at Mrs. Preston's, and when you are enjoying yourself do not forget poor little me listening to hallelujahs and loud amens."

It was Friday night, and the vestry of the Methodist church on Shirley avenue was pretty well filled with worshipers. They were just singing "How Firm a Foundation" when a finely built young man entered the room and took a seat in the rear. His magnificent baritone joined in the hymn. Somehow it must have reached the ears of the player, for she glanced up quickly. As if by magic, eye met eye. A clashing discord made Jennie Norton realize that she must attend strictly to her business, so with heightened color and somewhat unsteady fingers the hymn was finished.

At the close of the meeting Jennie Norton chatted with several, but kept out of the way of Mr. Gordon. She spent fully five minutes talking pleasantly with the pastor. Gerald could hardly keep his patience under control as he noticed the look of honest admiration in the eyes of Mr. Allen.

Old Deacon Norton was much amused at the actions of the young people. He well knew that his granddaughter Jennie was simply using her coquetry on the young minister to arouse Gerald Gordon's jealousy.

Two years ago young Gordon had proposed to Jennie, but just for the fun of it, as she afterward told her most intimate friend, she gave him "no" for an answer.

"Love is blind," or else the young man would certainly have seen the love in Jennie's sparkling eyes. Men in love will always have the sad lesson to learn that, as a rule, a woman's "no" means "yes." Swallowing his disappointment as best he could, Mr. Gordon went abroad, and for two years Jennie had heard from him only through his sister Alice.

Poor Jennie often regretted her foolishness, but was too stubborn to let Gerald know. On the day of the reception the Gordon family were surprised at the arrival of Gerald. At the dinner table Alice was telling the family how poor Jennie was obliged to give up the reception. The result was that Gerald found his way to the prayer meeting that night.

No wonder the young man could hardly restrain himself when he noticed how Jennie avoided him and yet lavished her smiles and honeyed words on others.

"Gerald, my boy, where have you been keeping yourself all this time? I am glad to see you in Boston again. It has been very lonesome at the house since you went to Europe. Jennie hasn't seemed like the same girl, and I almost think that you managed to take the sunshine with you. I am sure I don't know what's keeping the naughty puss tonight. She is usually only too anxious to get away from the meeting, but this evening she is bold enough to flirt even with the new parson. Young man, you'd better put in an oar, or some one else will win the prize. I'm going. Tell Jennie that I asked you to see her home. Remember, Gerald, 'faint heart never won fair lady.'"

With this particular advice Jennie's grandfather left the encouraged suitor.

With a determined look on his handsome face Gerald Gordon strode up to the pair and delivered to the now trembling girl Deacon Norton's message. Miss Norton welcomed him home and accepted his escort. She then introduced the somewhat embarrassed minister. He, seeing how things stood, said a few words of welcome to Gerald and, thanking Jennie for her assistance, quietly left them.

On the walk home Jennie asks her companion about his trip. Not a word of love is spoken between them. Gerald realizes that the golden moments are speeding away, but somehow he does not have the courage to tell of his love. To again hear "No" would be terrible, but Deacon Norton's words still ring in his ears, "Faint heart never won"—

"Jennie, two years ago today I asked you to be my wife. You refused, and I went away to try and forget you. Distance only made me realize how dearly I loved you. My darling, I loved you then, I love you now. Again I ask you, will you be my wife?"

With white, anxious face the young man bent to get his answer. Was he dreaming? Surely his ears did not deceive him, for he most certainly heard a faint, but a "yes," nevertheless.

Straining the young girl to himself, Gerald showered kisses upon the yielding lips of the lovely girl, who nestled so lovingly on his breast.

After a few minutes of lovemaking the man puts his hand under Jennie's chin and, looking straight into her eyes, asks this question: "Jennie, my dear one, two years ago why did you say no? Answer me honestly; did you love me then?"

"Gerald, I loved you then with all my heart, but I said 'no,' well, 'because'"—

And with that woman's reason Gerald Gordon had to be satisfied.—Boston Post.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

THE THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS.

VOL. XVI. NO. 31. THIEF RIVER FALLS, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA THURSDAY, AUGUST 10, 1899. TERMS $1.50 IN ADVANCE.

LOTS OF WHEAT

Will Be Marketed in Thief River Falls This Year.

Harvesting was commenced the first of the week on the ridges west of the city, but not much grain will be cut until the latter part of this month. The crops are looking fine and the wheat yield will be larger than for many previous years, in fact some predict that it will be better than the crop of '95. It is estimated that over 400,000 bushels of wheat will be marketed in Thief River Falls this fall and, if the prices are good, the farmers will have plenty of money.

LOTS OF BERRIES

Are Being Shipped in from the Red Lake.

The crop of blue berries up at the Red lake was very large this year and the steamboats have been bringing down large quantities each trip. The Ethel on Sunday brought down nearly 200 crates. Most of the berries are being purchased by the wholesale houses of Crookston and Grand Forks.

An Excursion Party.

An excursion party from Red Lake Falls, among whom were Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Moore, Messrs. and Mesdames O. D. McDaniels, W. A. Schreiter, J. B. Armstrong; Misses Rhoda Casterlin and Lydia Fletcher; Dr. J. O. Arghe; Messrs. Jos. Pouliot and F. E. Hunt; Mrs. H. B. Houston and Miss Sadie Hemple, of Philadelphia, Pa., went up to the Red lake last Thursday afternoon on the steamer Marguerite, returning Monday. The party was joined here by Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Jackson, Mrs. James Meehan, E. E. Sirrine, Mrs. Carl Kretzschmar and Miss Jennie Johnston. A very pleasant trip is reported.

Home Seekers' Figures.

The business for the month of July, which was done by the U. S. land office at Crookston, is very satisfactory and does not indicate any appreciable falling off when compared to that of former months. There was a total of 127 entries made, only 26 of which were on the reservation lands. 26 final proofs were made on homesteads and four on final timber cultures. Nineteen cash entries were made and the total cash receipts for the month aggregate $7,829.55.

Wheat Houses Sold.

The Minnesota and Dakota line of fifty elevators has been sold to F. H. Peavey and Co. for a consideration of $2,000,000. The property will be at once turned over. The elevators are situated along the Northern Pacific, Great Northern and Milwaukee roads and have an aggregate capacity of 500,000 bushels. This makes the Peavey company's total capacity over 25,000,000 bushels, exclusive of the new line of houses now building in Kansas.

Combo Dead.

Combo, the well known Indian, who for the last half century has lived at the mouth of the Thief river, died last Thursday morning. His age is supposed to be about 80, and he had always enjoyed the best of health. Last winter he froze his toe and it was cut off by a squaw, who did not do a very good job. Blood poison set in and he died from the effects.

EDDY WILL RUN

For Congress Again in the Seventh District.

Congressman Eddy announces emphatically that he is not a candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, and says he will be a candidate for re-election in the Seventh district. In the Minneapolis Tribune he is quoted as saying:

"It is my belief that the Republicans should hold a very early state convention next year. If I had my way, the state convention would be fixed for the day upon which the convention is to be held for the purpose of electing delegates to the national convention. That will probably be some time about May 1. As to the convention in the Seventh district, I feel that if no opposition develops and I am alone in the field, the same course will be pursued. However, I do not care to be accused of taking snap judgment, and if a candidate should spring up against me, the time will be fixed for a later date."

Shot off His Hand.

Early Sunday morning Dr. I. Lemieux was called to the scene of a serious accident which happened to John Scott and Henry Lizotte at Plummer crossing Saturday evening. The men were engaged in blasting some stone to be used in the foundation of a building. The fuse had been lighted and burned out, as they thought, without igniting the mine. Mr. Scott took a drill to remove the covering of the charge to ascertain the cause, when it exploded with terrific force, mutilating his left hand to such an extent that amputation of three fingers and the thumb was necessary, also inflicting several serious injuries. Mr. Lizotte was struck upon the knee by a flying fragmant of stone, but otherwise was unhurt as he was some distance from the blast when it went off.—Red Lake Falls Courier.

Didn't Sign It.

O. P. Johnson says that the Red Lake Falls Gazette was in error when it stated that he signed the appeal from the bill allowed by the county commissioners to reimburse the citizens who were at St. Paul last winter endeavoring to secure the passage of a bill which would give Red Lake county an equal division of the assets of Polk county. Mr. Johnson says that while he had been asked to sign it, he refused to do so.

Married.

At the residence of the groom, in the town of Norden, Sunday, August 6, John Schlosar and Miss Mary Safraneck, of Willman, Iowa, were married by Justice John L. Finko. The groom is a well known and respected farmer of the town of Norden. The ceremony was preformed in the presence of a few friends.

Will Build a Home.

U. G. Richards, of the Thief River Falls Lumber company, last week purchased of C. J. Knox the lots on the corner east of the Methodist church on the East Side. Mr. Richards will erect a house upon the same and remove his family to this city. This is one of the finest building spots in the city.

About Advertising.

From Printer's Ink.

No man knows how successful he will be in advertising until he tries.

We hear a good deal lately of the man behind the gun. There is just as much in another way of the man behind the advertisement.

Success in advertising does not depend so much on a large expenditure of money as it does on knowing how to expend a little judiciously.

The secret of advertising is so simple that many persons miss it. It is merely telling what you have to offer, and making plain how you can benefit the buyer.

The sort of people you want to attract by your advertising are people that you can probably sell goods to. You don't want to attract more idle curiosity seekers. You don't want advertisements or head lines that will merely catch the idle fancy. That isn't business; and advertising is business.

A Beautiful Rocky Mountain Gem

THE NEWS,
By John W. Eastman.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

The Dreyfus trial is on again. Will this be the final chapter or are we to have a perpetual Dreyfus serial?

Aguinaldo and Willy Wally Astor can exchange condolences. They are both vainly striving for recognition.

And, now that they have the automobile craze in the twin cities, the poor, useless horse can see his finish in an embalmed beef can.

The conduct of the offices of public examiner and of grain inspector under the Republican regime was the principal howl of the Pops at the last election. Lind appointed a new public examiner and the only change noted was for the worse. Let us see if he will be equally successful with the grain inspection department.

The St. Cloud Journal-Press announces positively that the story set in circulation by the Minneapolis Journal to the effect that Judge Collins will withdraw from the gubernatorial race is without foundation in fact. The Journal-Press is in a position to speak with authority of Judge Collins' intentions and its statement should settle the matter.

Several papers are throwing fits at the spectacle of Dewey and Sampson filing claims for the prize money legally due them for destroying the Spanish fleets. If the admirals neglected this matter it would be doing a great injustice to every man of their respective commands, all of whom are entitled to a share of the prizes and can obtain it through the claim of their superior officer. Let them have all they have coming. They are worth it and more.

It will be the part of wisdom to reserve a decision as to the charges of cowardise now brought against Col. Ames, of the 13th Minnesota, until the facts can be more fully sifted. There has always been entirely too much politics mixed up in the affairs of this regiment, and it is a pity but true that its almost incessant internal quarels coupled with the fussing of the hysterical "auxiliary" in the twin cities has done much to dim the glory of its undoubtedly brave deeds.

Senator Myran, interviewed by a Minneapolis Journal reporter, has the following to say regarding what the Seventh district will do:

"You can safely say that the Seventh district is solid for Jorgen J. Lomen as secretary of state in preference to Sam Langum, and that the Seventh, while it prefers to get its candidate for secretary of state nominated first and to talk about other things afterwards, will back Judge Collins for the governorship until his candidacy is shown to be out of the question."

It is clear that the volunteers returning from active service in the Philippines, as a rule, do not think Maj.-Gen. E. S. Otis the man for the position of great power and responsibility which he holds. While the thoughtful citizen will be slow to accept the judgment of the individual private in criticism of officers holding positions of responsibility, he cannot be influenced by the well-nigh unanimous sentiment of whole companies and even regiments. The prevailing sentiment and opinion of large bodies of troops is significant and indicates that something must be wrong.

The pension act passed by congress last March became a law so quietly that most people know nothing of its provisions. It is intended to prevent neglect of his family by a pensioner. Briefly stated, it provides that where a pensioner willfully neglects his wife and children the commissioner of pensions being satisfied of such neglect, shall pay one-half of such pensions due and devote it to their maintainance. The number of instances where the desertion of wife and children and failure to provide for their support on record in the pension office caused the enactment of the new law. This is a good law, and there are instances in almost every community where the wife and children are entitled to its benefits.

GOOD SENSE BY THE TON.

William E. Curtis, the Chicago Record's Washington correspondent, in speaking of the late Roswell P. Flower, tells the following: "A pessimist came into his office one morning and began to croak about the trusts. Mr. Flower listened a while good-naturedly; then he walked over to him and said:

"'Stop making faces at the trusts and get into one. If there is any good monopoly around, buy some stock in it and quit growling. I never saw a man yet who was against a good thing when he had a share in it. As for prosperity, you can't put a limit on it, and these fellows who are worrying about expansion and imperialism have got the dyspepsia. McKinley's all right. I know him. He is as square a man as ever lived. He's got a hard job, but he's doing the best he can, and when a boat is going through dangerous rapids it doesn't do any good for a lot of blamed fools to keep yelling at the man at the wheel. The Lord is running this country, and he runs things right. McKinley and Dewey and Otis and that fellow Aguinaldo are his instruments, and they are simply doing what he tells them to do. That's the kind of a statesman I am. I believe in the Lord, and I believe he's stuck on this country. We haven't had a thing happen here yet but what he ordered it for our good, and, while I can't quite figure out his reasons for letting that fellow Aguinaldo raise h—l in the Philippines, you keep your eye open and you'll see 'em some day. People wonder why our liberties had to be bought with blood. I'll tell you why. The more a thing costs you the more you value it; the more it's worth; and while George Washington and the Continental army were freezing to death at Valley Forge God Almighty was teaching them that lesson. Look at France. They don't value civil liberty over there because they didn't have to work for it. If those Frenchmen had to sweat and starve and freeze like our revolutionary fathers they would estimate their blessings a good deal higher than they do now.

"'The Lord was on our side during the war, and he led us into it, and he ain't going to desert us now that the fighting is over. I believe in God Almighty, not because it is written in the prayer book and the Bible, but because I see his hand every day of my life. I believe in this country, and I believe this country can take care of anything it gets in any war; and I believe in prosperity, and men can make prosperity whenever they are a mind to if they'll all join together. It is just such blamed fools as you, he exclaimed pointing to his visitor, that makes panics. It is every man's duty to be good-natured and hopeful, and encourage others to be so, too.'"

How to Preserve Plants.

When the plants are first plucked they should be dipped in boiling water and left there for a few seconds. This instantly checks growth and kills all life. Then let them dry a few moments, and they are ready for pressing and mounting. Plants treated in this way will retain their shape and colors for years. All botanical specimens for museums are dipped in boiling water before mounting.

How to Make Whey.

To a pint of warm new milk add a teaspoonful of prepared rennet. Let it stand and then strain through a piece of muslin. This can often be taken when milk cannot and is a useful drink in feverish complaints.

How to Make Lint.

Save all pieces of old linen that are not too torn or small. Nail each piece separately upon a board and scratch up the surface gently with a blunt knife until a soft fluff is formed of the detached filaments. Then remove the linen from the board and roll each portion separately, keeping the soft side inward. These will be found useful when an injured member requires to be dressed.

How to Make Cheese Custard.

Beat up two large or three small eggs and pour in a basin containing a pint of milk. Grate four ounces of cheese and mix well together. Add one ounce of butter and bake for one hour in a moderately hot oven.

Joseph Dutch and John Anderson, two farmers living north of here, engaged in an altercation in Phil Zeh's saloon Monday evening, and the latter had the former arrested. Dutch was fined $17.50.

Jas. E. Cooney, shipping agent for the Thief River Falls Lumber company, has rented the house recently built by John Moylan in Porter's addition. Mr. Cooney's family will arrive in the city from Minneapolis in a few days.

O. H. Nelson, of Red Lake Falls, was in the city the first of the week. Mr. Nelson states that he has rented his building on La Bree avenue to D. M. Grozier, of Toris, Minn., who will remove here in a few days and open up a grocery store.

Louis Hanson, C. C. Jackson and B. A. Walker went to St. Hilaire yesterday afternoon as witnesses in the case of the state vs. the policeman of Red Lake Falls. The policeman assaulted J. M. Markham at the ball game played in that city two weeks ago Sunday.

P. O. Hagglund was down from St. Hilaire Monday. Mr. Hagglund is advocating the building of a drainage ditch through River Falls into the Red Lake river, and proposes to place the matter before the county commissioners at their next meeting. He finds that a properly constructed ditch will drain seven townships.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

W. S. Stockdale, of Crookston, was in the city yesterday.

Mrs. M. E. Todd, who has been dangerously ill, is improving rapidly.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Knox drove down to Crookston the first of the week.

R. H. Bourdon, of Red Lake Falls, was in the city the first of the week.

James Meehan, Jr., was down to Crookston the first of the week on business.

Joseph Smith, of Crookston, was in the city the first of the week talking life insurance.

H. L. Hanson is in the city from St. Hilaire. He will work on the government boat this fall.

Dr. J. C. Argue, a dentist, has decided to locate here and has up an office in the Cleveland hotel. He is said to be an excellent dentist.

Mrs. Minnie Caldwell very pleasantly entertained a company of friends yesterday afternoon at the residence of F. H. Kratka, in honor of her guest, Mrs. Pauly, of Minneapolis. Card playing was the amusement and a very pleasant time is reported.

Miss Florence Wallin, of Thief River Falls, is in the city selling a most valuable book, "Heroes of the Nation." It would hardly be necessary to comment upon this work, for one will readily recognize its value by a glance. Miss Wallin is taking a great many orders.—Crookston Tribune.

A BIG DRIVE.

Contained About 10,000,000 Feet of Logs.

A drive containing about 10,000,000 feet of logs belonging to the St. Hilaire Lumber company and the McClure saw mill at East Grand Forks is being taken through the city. The logs have occasioned the steamboat men some trouble in that they are unable to get down to the city, the logs being jamed up the river for nearly three miles.

W. W. GIBBS

Died at Santa Fe on the 4th Day of August.

F. H. Kratka Tuesday received a copy of the New Mexican, a paper printed at Santa Fe, New Mexico, which contained an account of the death of W. W. Gibbs, a former well known and esteemed resident of this city. The paper was dated August 4, and the article follows:

"William W. Gibbs, a well known resident of the south side, passed away in death this morning at 7 o'clock, after several months of acute suffering from an abscess of the lungs. Mr. Gibbs was born November 30, 1853, in Ontario province, Canada. Sixteen years ago he moved to Dakota, and soon thereafter to Warren, Minn., where he was joined in wedlock to Miss Bettie Larson, July 2, 1887. Later he settled in Thief River Falls, Minn., and established himself in the harness business. Three years ago he came to New Mexico, suffering from lung trouble. He found considerable relief while here, but the disease had advanced too far to be checked. He had traveled considerably in California and elsewhere for health, but found that the climate of this city gave him the most relief, and he bought a pretty home on the south side. Deceased was and Odd Fellow and a member of the M. E. church. Besides his wife, his father, a brother, two sisters, in Canada and a sister in St. Louis survive him. The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock from his late residence, in charge of the Odd Fellows. Interment will be in the Odd Fellows' cemetery."

EIGHTY DEPUTIES.

State Game Agent to Protect Prairie Chickens.

Executive Agent Beutner has appointed eighty additional deputy game wardens to serve during the month of August to protect the prairie chickens. The chicken season opens the first of September, but every year many hunters start out before the season opens and get some fine shooting. Mr. Beutner stated yesterday that he was determined to break up this custom, and to this end the new wardens have been appointed.

The new wardens will receive salary for their services during August, and after that will be deputized to serve the year around. During the deer and moose season they will again be put on the pay roll, as the commission intends to see the game law enforced to the letter.

In addition to these, fully a score of wardens draw a regular salary from the commission and put in all their time looking after the game of their locality.—Minneapolis Times.

A Big Cut.

The firm of Lammers & Co. will employ a force of 400 men nine months during the coming logging year, as its operations will be much more extensive than ever before. It is the intention to cut 60,000,000 feet in the Clearwater district. Construction of three dams is now in progress, which are necessary to insure a successful drive of the logs to the mills here and at Grand Forks. This firm controls pine in the regions north of Solway that will keep it lumbering ten years.—Crookston Times.

Afraid to Play Any More.

The Red Lake Falls base ball club will not play a return game in this city, saying that the season has ended. The tin players of that town evidently know when they have enough.

R. H. Kittleson, a Red lake settler, is in the city.

SETTLERS KICK

When New Claimants Want Their Land.

The Roseau Times prints the following: "It has developed that during the administration of the land office at Crookston under Receiver Anglim, that someone in the office was crooked, and that Mr. Anglim was made to receipt for a great many dollars which he never received, and a large number of homestead entries were never entered on record. It would appear that some clerk in the office made it his business to pocket a lot of money sent in by applicants for homesteads, send the homesteaders receipts and cover his theft by not entering the same of record. In Roseau county it has been discovered that many have been cheated out of their entries and money, the parties having all made proper entries, paid the usual fees and received in return proper receipts, signed by Mr. Anglim. It would be well for every one holding homesteads to write to the land office and ascertain if their entries are on the records."

The Crookston Times states that the above has been known in Crookston for some time, but that the aggrived parties haven't until recently moved in the matter of making complaint.

UP IN SMOKE.

The Blacksmith Shop of J. F. Mays Is no More.

At about 2 o'clock Tuesday morning fire was discovered in the the blacksmith shop of J. F. Mays, and before the fire could be extinguished, the building and contents were nearly entirely destroyed. The origin of the fire is a mystery. It started in the second story of the shop and the building burned very rapidly.

Mr. Mays estimates his loss at between $700 and $800, and he had insurance to the amount of $400 on his building and contents. He will at once start to re-build the shop.

Henry Bye, who was employed in the shop, is also a loser to the extent of about $100 on tools, etc., which he had in the shop. Mr. Bye had no insurance and the loss to him is total.

The fire was discovered by employees of the Thief River Falls Lumber company, and the big whistle of the mill brought out a large number of people.

Mrs. M. W. Tarrant, of Fox Lake, Wis., mother of N. W. Tarrant, is expected to arrive in the city today.

ANOTHER FIRE.

Red Lake Falls Seems to Be Hoodooed.

Fire again destroyed a portion of Red Lake Falls Monday night.

At one o'clock the watchman in charge of the Great Northern work train discovered fire issuing from a barn, a portion of which was used as an ice house, in the rear of Schreiter's drug store, and hastened to spread the alarm.

The structure burned rapidly and the flames soon communicated to the drug store. The new fire engine was soon brought to the scene, but the city has not yet provided water facilities, and for a time little could be done to check the flames which were now fed by the highly inflammable contents of the drug store.

The water supply tanks used by the Great Northern work train were run to a point as near as possible to the fire, and hose connections made, but this took a good deal of time. The new fire engine worked well, and as fast as the tank was emptied the engine drew it down to the river where it was refilled, the G. N. pump being kept busy continuously.

The fire fanned by a strong breeze spread to the clothing store of Horwitz Bros., the flying embers being driven far over the city. For a time it looked as though the entire business portion would be destroyed. People stood ready with pails of water and quenched these as fast as they fell.

After four hours of steady work the fire was gotten under control. During this time, besides those mentioned above, the general store of M. Shagnon, the jewelry store of J. Q. Adams, a building belonging to L. Akaufer, and the saloon of Latandresse Bros., were burned, the flames being finally checked at the latter place.

The intense heat destroyed several hundred dollars worth of plate glass in the new buildings owned by Messrs. Hunt, Steinert and Paradis, across the street from the fire, and destroyed considerable of the woodwork in the three new buildings which are being constructed by Messrs. Bray, Riechel and Scheldrup.

The walls of these buildings were also so badly warped by the excessive heat that it is likely they will have to be taken down and rebuilt.

The citizens here give the credit of preventing the further spread of the flames, and of probably saving the entire business portion of the city, to the crew of the Great Northern work train, the members of which worked heriocally.

The origin of the fire is believed to have been incendiary, as there is nothing in the building in which it originated, in the way of stove, or other cause which accounts for it.

The list of losses and insurance is as follows:

Horovitz Bros.	$11,000	$8,000
W. A. Schreiter	14,000	7,000
L. A. Kaufer	1,400	1,000

M. Shagnon	1,400	1,200
Lattendresse Bros.	500	500

I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

WANTED.—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. R·I·P·A·N·S, 10 for 5 cents or twelve packets for 48 cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

A Skeleton In The Closet.

It was early morning, and Thomas, Lord ——'s valet, had waited on his master's American guest to see what he desired him to do for him.

There certainly was something odd in the gentleman's manner, and he had not the look of one who had enjoyed refreshing slumbers. At last, just as the man turned to leave the room, he spoke:

"Thomas, I have been awake all night."

"My lord will regret to hear it," said Thomas.

"Something odd disturbed me," continued the gentleman. "One of the maids kept me awake all last night."

"One of the maids, sir?" cried Thomas.

"Yes, Thomas. She kept running into my room at least every half hour to look in the glass and admire herself. She came out of that door"—he pointed to one in a corner—"and walked straight up to the mirror. The light from the night lamp fell upon her face. She seemed to catch my eye in the glass each time and smiled at me as she did so. She wore a short, quilted skirt, a little black bodice and full white sleeves. She had a gold cross tied about her neck by a black ribbon and wore a little cap on her black braids—a young girl with a French face, Thomas. Do you know her?"

Thomas made no answer. He looked at the gentleman steadily and grew pale. At last he spoke:

"If I have the honor of understanding you, sir, the young person came through the door?"

"Yes," said the American.

"More than once, sir?"

"About once an hour from midnight until dawn."

"And smiled at you in the glass where you saw her face? I understand she did not look toward you as she passed, sir?"

"Right, Thomas."

"May I beg you to do me the favor of looking into this room, sir?"

The gentleman followed Thomas to the door through which he asserted that the young person passed and saw nothing but a closet about 12 feet square, with no door save the one that opened into the large room, and high in the ceiling a little window through which a bird could scarcely have flown. It contained no furniture whatever.

"There must be a secret door—or—or—something," cried the American. "I am not mad, and I was wide awake."

"Yes, sir," said Thomas still more solemnly. "An ordinary young person could not have contrived to disappear, but the young person you have seen has been an apparition, sir, for more than 200 years."

"An apparition!" cried the American gentleman.

"Yes, sir," replied Thomas, "an apparition, sir. I think you have seen Lady ——'s gentlewoman Rosette, sir. It is ten years since she was seen before to my knowledge, but she has been seen often."

"I should like to hear more about Rosette," said the gentleman.

"Yes, sir," said the valet. "This is an old family, and about 200 years ago there was a Lord Herbert, who was a gay, wild young nobleman and was a great admirer of the ladies, sir. However, by the time he was 30 he was married and settled down and began to be much thought of and respected. So was his lady, too, sir, though she was not handsome and was haughty.

"One thing, however, the English servants did not like—she brought a foreign maid with her from France—a girl named Rosette and as pretty as a picture.

"One day, sitting before her glass, Rosette combing her hair for her, she heard her husband come into the room. Her back was toward him, and Rosette was behind her, and they forgot the mirror, and, so, sir, she saw in it, without stirring, both their faces, and she saw the girl smile at her husband, and she saw him smile back at her. She understood everything, but she never stirred, and she never said anything to him, no, nor to the maid, sir.

"This was her room, sir. In that little closet Rosette had her bed, to be ready if she called her, but one morning my lady's bell rang furiously, and the maid who answered it was told to do my lady's hair, for Rosette had gone back to her native country.

"All the time she was doing it the girl thought she heard a faint, moaning sound and was frightened and went back to the rest pale and trembling, and before night it was well known in the house that that little closet there was not only locked, but nailed up.

"After that my lord seemed to take to his wild ways again in a measure, and drank a great deal, and my lady lived much alone. There never were any children, but they both lived to be old indeed, and at last my lady died in this room and was buried in the church yonder.

"My lord was as old as she by that time, but as soon as the funeral was over he went into my lady's room and stood a long while before the locked and nailed closet door.

"Then he said to himself, 'I cannot die until I know,' and ordered it to be opened. There were hundreds of nails in it, but they were all out at last, and the lock was forced, and my lord arose and tottered into the closet.

"It wasn't much they found, only a few bones and an ornament or two, but it was plain that the girl had been tied hand and foot and bound to the bed and left there to die—if she was not murdered outright by the jealous lady.

"But ever since, sir, whenever there is going to be misfortune in the family, whoever sleeps here in this room sees Rosette come out of her closet and smile in the glass. No one ever sees her face, only her reflection. I hope no trouble will follow now, sir."

As for the American, he slept elsewhere the next night. He had no admiration for ghosts, even the family ghosts of noblemen, and he had no desire to see Rosette smile at him in the glass again.—Exchange.

He Got His Hair Cut.

Rumors fly fast in Corry. One Sunday recently a man who had arrived in town the night before incidentally asked of a citizen if the barber shops were open on Sunday, as he had neglected to have his hair cut the evening previous and would like to be trimmed up a little. He was informed that the shops were closed on the Sabbath. An hour later there was a knock at his door and a colored gentleman was found in the hall, armed with a pair of shears and clippers, who inquired if "dis was de gennelman dat wanted a clip."

In some way the report had got started that there was a man in town who wanted a hair cut, and the rumor had spread like a prairie fire.

The man was duly clipped.—Oil City Blizzard

LITTLE TIM, THE PIPER.

"I can pipe, too," he said.

Do you know how a child's eyes look when he has just learned how beautiful this vast world is, when he feels his wings like a bird, ere the heritage of the sons of toil has dimmed them? So Tim's eyes looked that winter night. He opened the door of the smithy where the members of the village orchestra sat at practice round the blazing forge. Every man paused, instrument in hand, at the sound of the fearless, shrill young voice.

Then, smiling, Tim shut out the drifting snowflakes and stepped into the room. The small feet were shoeless and dark as the earthen floor on which he stood. The clothes he wore hung round his slim form in grotesque tatters, but above the tatters rose a face such as God sends into a dark world now and then. Noble were the features; the sweep of the blue eyes was clear and grand; the curve of the lips was proud, yet sweet. From the beautiful brow waved hair, tawny and sun kissed, on which the glistening snow shone like stars. The men had scarcely time to look at the child when, raising his pipe to his lips, he began to play. The wonderful eyes shone; the slim, brown fingers obeyed the impulse of the grand soul imprisoned in tiny Tim. Strong men laid aside their instruments and clasped horny hands to listen. Here and there a face shadowed. Now and then a tear was furtively wiped away.

Tim smiled as he took the pipe from his lips, and his eyes turned wistfully to the blazing fire. They made way for him. They entertained him as if he had been of royal estate. A small, three legged stool was his throne, and he sat there, pipe clasped close, as happy as a king. He told them whence he came, as far as he knew.

"Over the hills," he said, "far, far over the hills." They called him Piper Tim in the caravan, never another name. He had always piped.

Then he laughed and stretched his thin, brown hands with joy to the blaze. He could tell nothing more. He belonged to the "tinker band," and the sound of music had drawn him so that he lingered to listen while the caravan went on its way over the hills.

The smith's wife admired the child's lovely face. His tatters brought tears to her eyes. Womanlike, she gave him to eat and to drink. Then they sat once more amazed while he played on his pipe ere, with laughing farewell, he went off into the darkness. That night the smith sat long dreamingly by the red logs in his forge. He sighed as he turned in at the cottage door, where his wife awaited him by the fire.

"How would it ha' been," he said, "gin we'd kept that little chap, the piper? Our bairn would just ha' been aboot his age gin the Lord had spared him."

There was a note of anxious query in his tone, but the starved mother's heart in the woman cried out:

"Ei, but I've been sittin here seein the bonny face o' the bairn in the firelight. I thought o' him out there in the darkness an the snaw wi' the tinkers folk. God keep an guide him. I wish ye'd spoken sooner. Keep him! Would I no', wi' you bonny face, you blithe o'en!"

"When he comes back again," the smith said as he drew his chair to the hearth, and his wife, with a glad smile, echoed his words.

The schoolmaster placed his old violin tenderly in its corner that night. He smiled a little bitterly as he thought of his gray hairs and his many years of plodding, then of Piper Tim.

"He plays as a bird sings," he thought really. "His heart is full of music." Then he trimmed his lamp and sat down to his books.

But the boy's face smiled from every page; the free, fearless voice was in his ears; the blue, pure eyes shone in the crackling flames. The schoolmaster flung aside his book and was back in the old days, when the hills and the stars and the sunshine had been his book, a maiden's eyes his heaven and the world a world of wonders. He looked at the empty chair of his dead wife, and he thought of sons and daughters far away.

"If I had kept the lad," he mused aloud, "I could have made a man of him, have saved him from the tinker's life. He would have filled my empty home."

Long he dreamed; then a smile of resolution curved his lips.

"When he comes again," he said.

And Piper Tim?

He went on his way that night, turning again and again to look at the long, bright gleams that fell on the snow from the great forest fire. He knew his people were camping in the mountains, and to the mountains and the darkness he turned his face. There was singing in his heart, there was always singing there, so he went on his way merrily. Up, up, through the blinding snow, neither cold nor weary for the singing in that heart of his, he watched always for the gleam of the red campfire, but he beheld never a spark.

The stars shone out serenely. Tim raised his face to them. They smiled into their twin stars, his eyes, yet still there was no campfire.

Tim, growing sore, sat down in the sheltered cranny of a rock. He raised his pipe to his lips. He played a tune that began bravely and ended softly and more softly still. Tim was asleep. The snowflakes fell like bristling stars, the dawn smiled over the hills, but Tim piped never again.

Little recked the tinker band that one child less crouched to the fire, one brown hand less stretched to the steaming pot. When the musicians meet in the smithy on winter nights and the wind shakes weird melodies from trees and mountains, the men look at each other, and sometimes a light breaks over rugged faces. "Sounds like a tune from Piper Tim," say they.

Occasionally a strange presence seems to fill the place. The smith and the schoolmaster raise eager faces, words tremble on their lips, but—ah, the fancies that are ever a-slumber in dreamers' hearts have been stirred by the wind's song and the shadow of the dancing flames.—Exchange.

The Decisive Test.

"Your friend has a wonderful memory."

"Marvelous!"

"Never fails him."

"I don't know about that. I never saw him on the witness stand."—Washington Star.

ORGANIZED.

Minnesota Forest Reserve Association Is Formed.

Minnesota and Chicago citizens met at the Chicago Athletic club last week and started the most important forest reserve movement that has ever been inaugurated in the United States. The gathering together of eminent men of Duluth, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Chicago was the outgrowth of the many pleas of Col. John S. Cooper, of Chicago, for the preservation of the exquisite timber and lake regions of Northern Minnesota without harm to the rights of the Indians and the lumbermen already upon the ground. Col. Cooper enjoyed the satisfaction of finding his labors rewarded by Minnesota herself sustaining him and organizing for a great campaign in favor of forest preservation, timber-planting, war upon the forest fire and war for the keeping of the natural beauty about Itasca, Leech, Cass and the upper lakes at the headwaters of the Mississippi.

The organization perfected bears the name of the Minnesota National Park and Forestry association. The officers of the organization are:

President, Cyrus M. Northrop, president of the University of Minnesota; first vice president, Theodore Roosevelt, governor of New York; second vice president, Judge Horace L. Lurton, of Tennessee; third vice president, Judge Hubbard, Cedar Rapids, Iowa; treasurer, John H. Witbeck, Chicago; corresponding secretary, Col. John S. Cooper, Chicago; recording secretary, H. M. Bracken, St. Paul; executive committee, Carter H. Harrison, C. S. Dennis, E. W. Blatchford, C. L. Hutchinson, George M. Nelson, Messrs. Beard, Ross Clark, Gray and Work, G. G. Hartley, A. G. Comstock, C. H. Stewart, F. M. Stevenson, F. W. Leavitt, W. B. Mirschon.

A finance and press committee will be selected by an executive committee, which will hold an early session at some point in Minnesota to be announced later. The organization decided that on or about Oct. 1 it would entertain a delegation of congressmen and other prominent public men with an excursion to the lake and forest section in which it is proposed to ask congress this winter to create a forest reserve. The excursion will leave Chicago by special train over the Burlington road and go to St. Paul, where the members will entertained at a banquet to be given by that city. Then the guests will be taken over the Great Northern road to the Itasca region for a week's hunting and fishing. After this they will visit Duluth and be entertained there and then go to Minneapolis and be the guests of the Minneapolis board of trade. The entire journey will occupy ten or twelve days.

The object of the forest reserve organization formed is stated in the following paragraph, taken from its constitution:

The object of the association is to preserve, as a national park, as far as practicable, the native forests, waters and topography of an extensive tract of land in the northern part of Minnesota, together with the wild game in the woods; that an intelligent system of forestry may be established therein, and that our citizens may have for generations to come a great region, abounding in native and cultivated forests and waters, to which they can resort in search of health and enjoyment, and that the preservation and renewal of the forests may be inaugurated in the central Western states of the Union. Any citizen of the United States of good character and in sympathy with the object and purposes of this association shall be eligible to membership, and shall become such member when elected by the executive committee of the association, but no dues shall be required from members. The funds necessary to carry out the object and purposes of this organization shall be raised by voluntary contributions, and shall be paid to the treasurer, to be by him disbursed as directed by the executive board.

The gentlemen taking part in the forming of the organization were:

St. Paul—Doctors Bracken and Hutchinson, Ross Clark, George M. Nelson, Charles Cristadore and E. V. Smalley.

Duluth—Col. C. H. Graves, Congressman Morris, F. A. Frick and J. C. Hunter.

Chicago—Col. John S. Cooper, Henry S. Fitch, George E. Cole, S. C. Eastman, Dr. Nixon and F. S. Baird.

What the extent of the reserve shall be and how congress shall be asked to act this winter will be determined at the meeting to be held in Minneapolis after the excursion to Itasca. Much of the success of this excursion is to be eventually charged up to President Hill of the Great Northern railway, who has strongly favored the creation of the reserve along the lines outlined by Col. Cooper to the citizens.

CONTRACT LET

For the Building of the Odd-Fellows' Hall.

The contract for the building of the Odd Fellows' hall was let last week to L. Johnson, of Red Lake Falls. The building is to be completed by Oct. 1, and the price paid is $3,625. The store room of the building has been leased to Martin Evenson, he having signified a willingness to pay $40 per month for the same.

Teachers' Examination.

State teachers examination was held at the high school building Monday and Tuesday under the supervision of County Superintendent Jeffers. Owing to the number present and the regulations regarding seating, it was found necessary to divide the applicants into two sections, the second section being placed in charge of J. E. Ford. There were thirty-one candidates for certificates, many of whom took the third-grade examination, which was conducted under nearly the same rules as in former years. The papers of those who wrote for a second grade were forwarded to the state department for marking. Several of the older teachers took advantage of the section in the law granting certificates without examination for five years' service and made application direct to the department of public instruction.

The questions were about on a par which those used in former examinations with the exception of the number, there being only four questions in each subject. The time for writing each subject was also reduced from two and one-half hours, which has been given in previous years, to one hour.—Red Lake Falls Courier.

CITY AFFAIRS.

Election of Officials Will Be Held Nov. 7.

The biennial election of city officers will be held on the Tuesday after the first Monday in November, and there is already considerable talk of candidates for the various offices. A thorough discussion of all affairs pertaining to the city's weal is now in order and the suggestion has been made that it would be a good idea to have a convention at which resolutions expressing the wants of the people will be adopted. This would be an excellent thing to do, but the selection of aldermen is of more importance. There is no denying the fact that the city's affairs should be conducted more economically. The aldermen and mayor should serve without a salary; the office of city attorney should be abolished, and the other city officials should have their salaries reduced.

The building of better roads leading into the city is also an important issue. This town is losing considerable trade simply because some of the roads coming in from the north and west are almost impassable. If we can reduce the expense of maintaining the city government about $1,000—which is a fair estimate—and expend the amount in a business like way upon the roads, the benefit to the city would be great and lasting.

The officers to be elected this year are: mayor, treasurer, two justices of peace, two aldermen at large, and an alderman from each of the three wards.

For the office of mayor, Frank H. Kratka is at present the only candidate. He has served the city in like capacity in former years and is willing to do so again. While this office should be an important one, just the reverse is true. The city charter gives the mayor very little power. Mr. Dobner has very faithfully performed the duties of this office during the past term, and announces positively that he will not again be a candidate, in fact he will be thankful when his present term expires.

For aldermen, at large, the names of W. T. Mullarky and M. J. Burns have been suggested. Both are very level headed business men—are interested in the city—and could be depended upon to do their duty without fear or favor. For alderman from the First ward, Hans Langseth, C. C. Jackson, John Sorum and R. B. Vining are mentioned, anyone of whom would be acceptable to a majority of the residents of that ward. The Second ward has C. A. Bobbecke, Carl Kretzschmar and Matt Barzen, and were it possible, the voters would probably elect all three. In the Third ward the names of Joseph Jerome, August Brown, C. L. Dobner and John Kivel are mentioned as posibilities.

Burned the Weeds.

The weed burner engine was up on this branch last week, and attracted considerable attention from those who were not familiar with the workings of such a machine. The burner is attached to the rear of the engine and when in operation is lowered to pass near the track. Crude oil furnishes the burning material and the apparatus is passed over the weeds and burns them up. The idea is quite simple when once understood. A box car is placed in front of the engine in which the supply of oil is kept. the idea of a weed engine burner originated but two years ago and the invention is practically a new one.

THE SMALL END.

Timber Inspector Opines that Indians Are Cheated.

"It may be that the 'dead-and down' timber system, as conceived by the government, is all right, but the manner in which it is administered is woefully at fault. Whether it is from lack of knowledge or willful neglect I am not prepared to state, but certainly the Indians are not getting value received."

This is the way C. J. Nesler, confidential agent agent of Secretary Hitchcock, of the interior department, expressed himself to a St. Paul reporter. He sat before a big stack of typewritten papers that cover personal observations made in Northern Minnesota during the last four months.

Mr. Nesler stated that the secretary of the interior is firmly convinced that something is radically wrong in the scaling of logs under the dead-and-down system, and he secured an appropriation from congress for a special inspection. Each day, it was said, the stack of complaints on the secretary's desk had increased until they became too numerous to secure separate consideration. It was believed by the interior department that where there was so much smoke there surely must be a little fire, so he sent the inspectors out on a fire-hunting expedition.

The terms of the appropriation provided for two inspectors to be appointed, one from the Indian department and one from the interior. J. F. Jenkins was appointed from the former department and Mr. Nesler was selected from the latter. They were instructed to make a searching investigation and be prepared to make a detailed report with a view of suggesting changes if they were deemed necessary. Since they have been detailed they have been acting under the direct orders of Secretary Hitchcock, and for that reason they will report to him in person.

Mr. Nesler was not just prepared to make a statement about the recommendations. He would much rather wait until he had had a consultation with his chief, with a view of exchanging views. Changes? Yes, of course, there must be some changes before the Indians will get what is due them. It was even possible that the Nelson act might be overhauled in an effort to get a more satisfactory adjustment concerning the standing pine. But certainly there is opportunity for some great reforms in regard to the dead-and-down timber. The scheme that is now in vogue, if it was carried out as the framers of the law had intended, would successfully solve the difficulty, but it is believed that it is impossible to have it properly administered, ideas differ so widely in regard to what constituted dead-and-down timber. Some of the loggers who had bought the claim on a certain tract might believe that every tree that had lost a branch or looked like if it was going to do so would come under the catalogue of dead-and-down timber, while others might be a little more lenient with the standing pine. The inspector was not saying that any one stole pine, be it understood; he only refeferred to their lack of knowledge of what dead timber or timber that was not down might be.

In regard to the bank scale, which, in plain terms, is the measurement of logs on the banks of the river before they are made into rafts. Mr. Nesler was not so sure that that would be the thing. It would not prevent the cutting of green timber, even if it did make the logging companies pay for every foot of pine they cut. He thought a happy medium could be struck between the two systems, but that would all rest with congress and Secretary Hitchcock after the reports were made.

AN ESTIMATE

Of the Wheat Crop in the Northwest.

Oscar K. Lyle, of New York, at the request of McIntyre and Wardwell, made a trip through Minnesota and the Dakotas to investigate crop conditions. He says: "Minnesota will reach an average of 13½ bushels of wheat per acre from 4,900,000 acres, or 66,150,000 bushels. The official crop last year was 78,417,912 bushels." From North Dakota he expects a yield of 12¼ bushels per acre from 3,800,000 acres, or 46,550,000 bushels, against an official production in 1898 of 55,645,445. He estimates that the yield in South Dakota will average 11 bushels per acre from 3,300,000 acres, or a total of 36,300,000 bushels, as an official return last year of 42,040,923. This estimate of 149,000,000 bushels of the three states is 27,000,000 bushels, or about 15 per cent., under the crop of last year. The indications are for a spring wheat crop in the entire country of 239,000,000 bushels on the 17,850,000 acres afficially declared as the planted area. This is an average of 13.4 bushels per acre, 20,000,000 larger than the largest crop, with the exception of last year, that this country has ever produced and 40,000,000 bushels more than the crop of good condition almost without precedent for growth in July.

Did You Ever Think of This?

Have you ever thought of the distance you travel while you are out for an hour's stroll? Possibly you walk three miles in an hour, but that does not represent the distance you travel. The earth turns on its axis every twenty-four hours. In round figures, call the earth's circumference 24,000 miles in the axial turn of the earth. But this is not all. The earth makes a journey around the sun every year. Put the distance of our planet from the sun at 92,000,000 miles. The diameter, is therefore, 184,000,000 miles, and the circumference described by the earth 578,000,000 miles. In other words, the earth travels around the sun each day 1,584,000 miles, and every hour—for instance, the hour during which you took your walk—the earth moved through 66,000 miles. So, adding your three miles of leg travel to the hour's axial movement of the earth, this to the earth's orbital journey and that again to the earth's excursions with the sun, and you will find you have traveled within the hour 85,930 miles.—Red Wing Republican.

What One Grain of Wheat Will Produce.

The exhibit being prepared by Geo. Purvis to represent Polk county's productiveness at the state fair is being prepared, and the samples secured are among the finest over seen, says the Crookston Times. Yesterday, J. M. Stephens brought in some remarkable samples of wheat and oats. One sheaf of wheat contained 13 stools, none of which numbered less than 50 stalks, one having 69 separate shoots, headed from a single kernel of grain. A count showed that the heads averaged 52 grains each, making a total of 3,588 grains of wheat from planting a single kernel. One stool of oats numbered 80 shoots, averaging 109 grains each, an increase of 8,720 per cent.

POT HUNTERS.

They Are Getting Too Numerous Over At Argyle.

A resident of Argyle, Minn., writing to a a well known local protector of game, says that for two weeks prairie chickens have been slaughtered by pot hunters. The young birds are scarcely able to fly, he says, and complaints to the game wardens have not resulted in stopping it.

The same gentleman says that he has received more than twenty letters of a similar nature from other parts of the state within the past ten days, telling of violations of the game laws.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Flour Mill At Warren.

J. S. Hilleboe and L. M. Johnson have formed a co-partnership under the firm name of Hilleboe & Johnson, for the purpose of engaging in the milling business. Mr. Hilleboe will look after the business management and Mr. Johnson will have charge of the mechanical part. They have already made arrangements for the purchase of the necessary machinery and will erect the needed structures on land a little south of the Lyons House as soon as E. G. Woolery, who is drilling there, strikes a large enough flow of water. The mill will have a capacity of 75 barrels per day, and is primarily designed to do an exchange business. Both members of the firm are well known here, where they have resided for many years. Mr. Johnson is a practical been bookkeeper for K. J. Taralseth ever since he came here.—Warren Register.

Will Change the Form.

A new form of post office money order will be issued by all post offices commencing Sept. 1. The form now in use was not originated by the post office department, but it was modeled after those used by the express companies, who have always protested against the use by the government of their money order form.

The new post office order form will be modeled after the system now used in Canada and will be more simple and satisfactory to both the remitter and the postmaster than the one now in use. Manifold carbon paper will be used, by which means the advice, which is sent to the receiving postmaster, is a duplicate even to the handwriting of the order, and is made is made out by manifold as an order is filled out. The money order itself will be made out in check form, much resembling one in wording also. It will have special places for the sum, both written and in numbers.

Won't Go Unless Stamped.

Heretofore when a customer neglected to stamp his checks, the banks have been in the habit of affixing the stamp and then paying it, but that custom is now done away with, according to a recent decision of the internal revenue department. Among other things the commissioner of internal revenue notifies revenue collectors as follows:

"You are directed to notify the banks that are guilty of stamping unstamped checks that if the practice is not immediately discontinued they will be reported to the United States District Attorney for prosecution."

All banks, therefore, will be compelled to reject all unstamped checks, and will refuse to pay them. The customers of banks are requested to make especial note of this.

ORGANIZED.

Minnesota Forest Reserve Association Is Formed.

Minnesota and Chicago citizens met at the Chicago Athletic club last week and started the most important forest reserve movement that has ever been inaugurated in the United States. The gathering together of eminent men of Duluth, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Chicago was the outgrowth of the many pleas of Col. John S. Cooper, of Chicago, for the preservation of the exquisite timber and lake regions of Northern Minnesota without harm to the rights of the Indians and the lumbermen already upon the ground. Col. Cooper enjoyed the satisfaction of finding his labors rewarded by Minnesota herself sustaining him and organizing for a great campaign in favor of forest preservation, timber-planting, war upon the forest fire and war for the keeping of the natural beauty about Itasca, Leech, Cass and the upper lakes at the headwaters of the Mississippi.

The organization perfected bears the name of the Minnesota National Park and Forestry association. The officers of the organization are:

President, Cyrus M. Northrop, president of the University of Minnesota; first vice president, Theodore Roosevelt, governor of New York; second vice president, Judge Horace L. Lurton, of Tennessee; third vice president, Judge Hubbard, Cedar Rapids, Iowa; treasurer, John H. Witbeck, Chicago; corresponding secretary, Col. John S. Cooper, Chicago; recording secretary, H. M. Bracken, St. Paul; executive committee, Carter H. Harrison, C. S. Dennis, E. W. Blatchford, C. L. Hutchinson, George M. Nelson, Messrs. Beard, Ross Clark, Gray and Work, G. G. Hartley, A. G. Comstock, C. H. Stewart, F. M. Stevenson, F. W. Leavitt, W. B. Mirschon.

A finance and press committee will be selected by an executive committee, which will hold an early session at some point in Minnesota to be announced later. The organization decided that on or about Oct. 1 it would entertain a delegation of congressmen and other prominent public men with an excursion to the lake and forest section in which it is proposed to ask congress this winter to create a forest reserve. The excursion will leave Chicago by special train over the Burlington road and go to St. Paul, where the members will be entertained at a banquet to be given by that city. Then the guests will be taken over the Great Northern road to the Itasca region for a week's hunting and fishing. After this they will visit Duluth and be entertained there and then go to Minneapolis and be the guests of the Minneapolis board of trade. The entire journey will occupy ten or twelve days.

The object of the forest reserve organization formed is stated in the following paragraph, taken from its constitution:

The object of the association is to preserve, as a national park, as far as practicable, the native forests, waters and topography of an extensive tract of land in the northern part of Minnesota, together with the wild game in the woods; that an intelligent system of forestry may be established therein, and that our citizens may have for generations to come a great region abounding in native and cultivated forests and waters, to which they can resort in search of health and enjoyment, and that the preservation and renewal of the forests may be inaugurated in the central Western states of the Union. Any citizen of the United States of good character and in sympathy with the object and purposes of this association shall be eligible to membership, and shall become such member when elected by the executive committee of the association, but no dues shall be required from members. The funds necessary to carry out the object and purposes of this argan-shall be raised by voluntary contributions, and shall be paid to the treasurer, to be by him disbursed as directed by the executive board.

The gentlemen taking part in the forming of the organization were:

St. Paul—Doctors Bracken and Hutchinson, Ross Clark, George M. Nelson, Charles Cristadoro and E. V. Smalley.

Chicago—Col. John S. Cooper, Henry S. Fitch, George E. Cole, S. C. Eastman, Dr. Nixon and F. S. Baird.

What the extent of the reserve shall be and how congress shall be asked to act this winter will be determined at the meeting to be held in Minneapolis after the excursion to Itasca. Much of the success of this excursion is to be eventually charged up to President Hill, of the Great Northern railway, who has strongly favored the creation of the reserve along the lines outlined by Col. Cooper to the citizens.

AN ESTIMATE

Of the Wheat Crop in the Northwest.

Oscar K. Lyle, of New York, at the requst of McIntyre and Wardwell, made a trip through Minnesota and the Dakotas to investigate crop conditions. He says: "Minnesota will reach an average of 13½ bushels of wheat per acre from 4,900,000 acres, or 66,150,000 bushels. The official crop last year was 78,417,912 bushels." From North Dakota he expects a yield of 12¼ bushels per acre from 3,800,000 acres, or 46,550,000 bushels, against an official production in 1898 of 55,645,445. He estimates that the yield in South Dakota will average 11 bushels per acre from 3,300,000 acres, or a total of 36,300,000 bushels, as an official return last year of 42,040,923. This estimate of 149,000,000 bushels of the three states is 27,000,000 bushels, or about 15 per cent., under the crop of last year. The indications are for a spring wheat crop in the entire country of 239,000,000 bushels on the 17,850,000 acres officially declared as the planted area. This is an average of 13.4 bushels per acre, 20,000,000 larger than the largest crop, with the exception of last year, that this country has ever produced and 40,000,000 bushels more than the crop of 1897. He found the corn crop in good condition almost without precedent for growth in July.

THE Ada Herald (Pop) admits that the tramp has practically disappeared, but can't see how the Republican administration is to blame for it. The Herald could "see" quick enough if such a state of affairs had come about under 16 to 1. But that is an impossible proposition.

WHEN it became evident that civilization and the Indian could not mix with any degree of mutual satisfaction, the wise goverment set aside reservations where the guileless red man could, undisturbed, follow the customs of his ancestors. Say, masters, lords and rulers of the earth, isn't it about time to agitate the subject of horse reservations?

INSURGENT ATKINSON, of the Aguinaldo Auxiliary association, proposes to distribute his copperhead literature among the returning volunteers. We would strongly advise him against doing so in person. As a mark of disapproval, the boys sometimes apply a half shelter tent in connection with sixteen strong arms in an enthusiastic manner highly embarrassing to the victim.

QUIETLY, without blare of brass bands or rounds of popular applause, thirteen thousand young men have, in the past fortnight, volunteered to follow the old flag through the swamps and jungles of Luzon until the rebellion is stamped out. Let no fool auxiliary association lift its head. These are not "brave young heroes"—they are just plain American soldiers—but they mean business.

WE CAN'T PUBLISH IT.

The NEWS is in receipt of a communication from Van R. Brown, county attorney, regarding his appeal from the allowance by the county commissioners of $506.78 to reimburse the citizens of this county who were at St. Paul last winter endeavoring to secure a bill passed, which would give Red Lake county a just settlement with Polk county. While the columns of the NEWS are always open to all, they cannot, however, be used as a sewer, and for this reason we refuse to publish Mr. Brown's communication. Mr. Brown appealed from the allowing of these bills, and if he wishes space in these columns to defend his course, he is welcome to it, but he cannot use it to call honest men liars and boodlers.

The real facts of the case are as follows: At the instance of the board of county commissioners, Marcus Johnson, Theo. Garceau, C. E. Boughton, Dr. Watson and K. M. Hansen spent fifteen days in St. Paul last winter lobbying for a bill of interest to this county. It was the understanding that the commissioners would reimburse them for the amount of their expenses. Bills amounting to $506.78 were presented by the gentlemen and allowed by the board. This is a very reasonable sum. Mr. Brown is in favor of repudiating this claim. The matter will be tried before Judge Watts this fall and the NEWS sincerely hopes that the public spirited citizens of Red Lake county, who were at St. Paul last winter, will be reimbursed.

WORK BEGUN

By the Government Improvement Boat.

The government improvement boat was towed up to High Landing Monday by the "Ethel" and will work between that place and this city until it freezes up this fall. The river above High Landing is in excellent condition and there is no need of working above that point. Capt. Davenport came up from St. Paul to start the work.

A survey of the river and lake near the outlet will be made this fall for the purpose of ascertaining the feasibility of building a government dam at the outlet. It is highly probable that a dredger will be put at work on this river in a few years and the river straightened out. This would be the means of practically making a canal from this city to the lake and would allow boats much larger than are at present on the river to make regular trips.

SCENE IN A PORTUGAL WINERY.
In the mountains, at the Quinto do Sexio, Portugal, a famous Port Wine district where the custom of treading the grapes for Port Wine is still in vogue. From ten to a dozen men or women for each gang in turn continue the treading, day and night, during the four or five weeks vintage. Some of the treading vats are large enough for three separate rows of ten men each, who with their white breeches well tucked up, their arms on each other's shoulders, raise and tread their feet alternately, with song and shouts to keep the lazier ones up to the work, and a band with string instruments enlivens the hours.

Speer, of New Jersey, Uses Rollers instead of Feet.
It is from this district the vines were imported over forty years ago that now fill the vineyards of the Speer Wine Co., at Passaic.
At Passaic the same kind of grapes are crushed between large rollers of rubber, revolved by steam. This is the only place in this country where the real genuine Port Wine is made from the Oporto grape—and they are grown right in SPEER'S VINEYARDS.
These vineyards extend over ⅓ of a mile along one of the Main avenues of Passaic, and comprise fifty six acres. The soil being rich in iron makes the wine most valuable for Medical use.

SPEER'S WINES
Are well known to be of the highest character, the oldest and most refined Wines in America, equal if not superior to any wines in the world. They consist of Port, Sherry, Burgundy, Claret, Sauterne Wines, and ★★★ Climax Brandy. Mr. Speer has some Wine in his cellars that he made over thirty eight years ago. All of Speer's Wines and Brandy are very old, rich, well rounded, soft and delicate. Every family should have a bottle or two of each variety of Speer's Wines and Brandy always in the home, for sickness or family use

CASS LAKE FIRE.

Main Business Portion Destroyed By Fire.

Cass Lake, August 14.—A fire which broke out at 6 o'clock this evening destroyed fifteen buildings comprising the main portion of Cass Lake.

The fire started in the middle of the block and burned every building on the west end except Lussier's jewelery store and the Times office. These buildings were saved only by heroic efforts. The fire was caused by the explosion of a gasoline stove in Jerry Bell's barber shop.

The total loss is between $15,000 and $20,000, and no insurance was carried. The buildings were all frame, and most of them of comparatively cheap construction. The absence of insurance is accounted for by the fact that there was no adequate fire protection, and the further fact that the residents were all squatters. The title to the land occupied by the townsite being vested in the government.

The principal losers were:

- Ed. Elston, hotel.
- S. L. Daying hotel.
- M. J. Foley, hotel.
- Mrs. Bye, lodging.
- Moining & Co., hardware.
- T. P. Cory, general merchandise.
- F. C. Hazelton, livery.
- B. D. Junkins, flour and feed.
- F. W. Smith, law office.

The fire is to recent to permit any accurate estimate of the future movements of the people who are losers. It is safe, however, to predict that most of them will rebuild, although it is unlikely that any steps will be taken until the contests over the title to the real estate can be settled, which will not be for several weeks.

I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

FINGERS OF ICE.

A Husband's Return From the Other World.

The road ran through a beautiful, half cleared wood, and at the end, on a slight rise of ground, stood the madhouse. Of course it was not called a madhouse, or people would not have sent their mentally unhinged friends there. It bore the euphonious appellation of "Dr. Brier's Home Sanitarium" and was consequently well patronized. People usually dislike calling a thing by its proper name.

The perfectly kept grounds were surrounded by a high iron fence, within which the harmless inmates wandered at will during certain hours of the day.

On a rustic bench sat a young woman. Her eyes were closed, and as she remained in repose she was beautiful, with a Spanish type of beauty that no other nation can equal.

Suddenly she started up with a wild motion of the hand toward her throat as though she were being choked. The dark eyes showed intense fright, and the whole face was convulsed. Gradually the frenzy passed away, and she sank down upon the bench again, with a weary little laugh. The soft breeze rustled the leaves of the trees and murmured a gentle lullaby. Slowly the beautiful head sank lower and lower until it was pillowed on a fleecy wrap which lay on the end of the bench, and she slept.

At that exact hour it happened that a curious woman, accompanied by a friend, asked permission of one of the physicians on the staff to be shown through the place. He had the misfortune to be one of her friends, so he acquiesced; but being busy at the time he turned her over to the mercies of a young doctor, who, finding the curious woman and her friend rather amiable, did his utmost to entertain them.

And so it occurred that after going through the building they sauntered about the grounds and saw the Spanish beauty lying asleep, with her face as calm and sweet as that of a sleeping child.

"Oh," cried the curious woman ecstatically, "do tell us about her!"

The young doctor smoothed his budding mustache and looked about him. No one was visible.

"We don't often tell the history of our patients," he began hesitatingly, "but this is a rather peculiar case, and if you specially desire"—

"Oh, do tell us!" cried the curious woman, with a world of persuasion in her voice. "I assure you it will go no farther. Is she Spanish?"

They moved away slightly that their voices might not disturb the sleeper. The young doctor replied:

"Oh, yes! She was born in Castile, and while yet little more than a child—hardly 16, I believe—married for wealth and position a Spaniard three times her age.

"Affairs went smoothly for two years, when the husband contracted a disease, which proved fatal. Now it would have been much nicer and more like what one reads in Sunday school books if he had bidden his relatives an affectionate farewell as he lay on his deathbed, but instead of doing that he called his young wife to him and said in tones so low that no one but she could hear, 'Inez, if you marry again, I shall come back from the grave, and, with the icy fingers of death, I shall choke you—choke you.' His face was convulsed with passion, and shortly afterward he died. He was buried with the pomps and ceremonies required in a Spanish family of position, and for two years the widow remained in seclusion.

"At the end of that time she came forth more beautiful than ever and joined a party of friends traveling in England. There she met the man who was to be her future husband—a handsome, athletic young American of the Anglo-Saxon type.

"Her former husband's dying words so haunted her that at first she repulsed the American's suit. However, he followed her to her home in Castile, and at last, sensibly concluding that these haunting words were merely the ravings of a delirious man, she married the American.

"They came to America to live and for a time were very happy, but after a time they—that is, she"—

The young doctor paused and cleared his throat. The curious woman and her friend exchanged glances.

"She began to suffer from a strange hallucination," he went on. "At night she often woke with a scream, believing that the icy fingers of her former husband were choking her. The matter grew worse, until she felt the fingers not only at night, but also in her waking hours. Numberless physicians were consulted, but they offered no remedy.

"Her husband was heartbroken and tried everything in his power to save her, but nothing availed, and she gradually grew worse until it was necessary to bring her here. Do you notice the crimson roses pinned on the front of her gown? They seem to be the only thing she cares for. Her husband comes every week and brings a huge bunch of them. She likes the flowers, but pays no attention to him. Some day the icy fingers will close tightly together, and that will be the end."

"And can she not be cured?" asked the curious woman.

"Oh, no!" said the young doctor. "Quite hopeless."—Exchange.

An Indian Artificial Lake.

Jal Samund, or Sea of Victory, near Odeypore, is the biggest artificial sheet of water in India. It was made by the Maharana Jal Singh at the end of the seventeenth century. Apart from its great size and beauty the lake strikes any one visiting it for the first time by the marvelous simplicity of its construction. This inland sea, covering some 30 or 40 square miles of land, in some places to the depth of over 100 feet, has been created and kept in existence for a couple of centuries by one marble wall scarcely 300 yards long.

In comparison with the lake this "bund" is small in the extreme, but in reality it is a white marble structure of marvelous strength and simple beauty. Along its whole length shining steps of pencilled white lead down to the water's edge, at this time nearly 30 feet below the summit of the "bund." On the reverse side a second wall backs the "bund" proper. Till recently the space in between was unfilled and formed a vast sort of cavern, where both tigers and dacoits have been run to ground in not remote years. The present maharana spent much in filling up this empty space, with the triple benefit of ousting marauders, strengthening the "bund" and making a promenade or terrace along its whole length.—Lahore Tribune.

His Aunt's Companion

"Wanted—A companion for an elderly lady."

That was the advertisement that appeared in a newspaper of a rainy Monday morning in November, 18—.

Glenville was nothing more than a little country settlement, with a red brick town hall and a labyrinth of narrow streets which seemed to have been laid out with special reference to the bewilderment of any chance passer who might find himself involved in their maze.

Mr. Reginald Chillingfield, who had been out for a walk in the street, was met on the threshold of the hotel by the bootboy, who said:

"Oh, please, sir, there's a lot of 'em all a-askin for you."

"A lot of what?" demanded Mr. Chillingfield.

Reginald Chillingfield was tall and slender and handsome, with bright blue eyes and a straight nose, which latter feature he rubbed as he stood staring at Mike Updown.

"Of ladies, sir. Come to answer the advertisement."

"Oh," said Mr. Chillingfield, "I recollect now."

The array of feminine faces, all expectantly turned toward him, was enough to awe the stoutest bachelor heart, and Reginald Chillingfield closed the parlor door with a bang.

"Jones," said he to his familiar friend, who had just lighted a cigar in the reading room, "what shall I do?"

"In respect to what?"

"My Aunt Polly's companion. There's a dozen of 'em there, apparently all ages from 16 to 60. My Aunt Polly doesn't want 12 companions."

"Have 'em admitted one by one," suggested Jones, and on this hint Mr. Chillingfield promptly acted.

"You sit and pretend to be reading the newspaper," whispered Chillingfield, "and if you like the applicant's looks, cough; if you don't, crackle the newspaper. Dear me, my shirt collar is wet already. My face is burning. Why could not Aunt Polly have hunted up her own companion? Yes, Mike, all ready. Ask one of the ladies to walk in."

And, with a grin, Mike announced:

"Miss Zeriah Hall."

Miss Hall was tall, scant haired and spectacled, in a robe of gingham and a drab silk hat.

"I am seeking a situation, young man," she said, "not from necessity, but because in middle life one feels the lack of companionship. I hope the elderly lady mentioned in the advertisement is a church member?"

Crackle, crackle! went the newspaper. Chillingfield glanced guiltily at his friend.

"No, she's not—that is—I think perhaps a younger person— You did not say how old you were, Miss Hall."

Miss Zeriah went out, closing the door behind her with a bang.

Mrs. Hawkesbury, the next candidate, was a clairvoyant and spiritualist.

"I think I could amuse the old lady with foretelling the future," said she. "That was the way I did at my three last situations."

"Three!" repeated Mr. Chillingfield. "Jones, my dear fellow, don't rustle that paper so vehemently. Did you say three? How did you happen to leave those situations?"

"The visitation of Providence, sir," said Mrs. Hawkesbury. "They all died—the respected ladies whom it was once my duty and my pleasure to"—

The next was too deaf, the next too fleshy, the third was unwilling to live with any lady who did not keep a man servant, the fourth wanted too high a salary—so on, ad infinitum, until the newspaper was fairly crackled to pieces. Until at length there was, so to speak, a "tie" between the last two candidates.

Ruth Coxe was just 19, pretty as a sweet pea blossom and ready to undertake any description of service to escape from her stepmother and nine turbulent half brothers and sisters.

Helen Howard was a queenly young woman of five and twenty, who read like Mrs. Scott-Siddons, sang delicious Scotch ballads and frankly owned that she needed a home.

Mr. Jones coughed himself purple in the face over both of them.

"You couldn't do better, Reginald," said he, "than to take"—

"Which one?"

"Both!"

"But you must remember that I have only got one Aunt Polly. A choice must be made."

"Toss up a copper."

"You irreverent villain!"

"Draw cuts, then. Look. I write 'Helen' on one, 'Ruth' on the other. Presto! Change! Now draw. Ruth has won the day!"

So Mr. Reginald Chillingfield took Ruth Coxe home with him to the domiciliary abode of his Aunt Polly by evening train, leaving Helen Howard sad and quiet.

"You are disappointed," said he. "I wish I could have engaged you both."

"Yes," said Helen, "I am disappointed, I confess. Life is hard and stern to me."

Reginald Chillingfield thought over her words. They haunted him, and not only her words, but the garnet brown shadows of her eyes, and a week afterward he went back to Glenville.

"Yes, Miss Howard is at home," said the shabby maid of all work at the third rate boarding house where Miss Howard lived. "Walk in."

And Mr. Chillingfield walked in, to find Miss Howard tete-a-tete with Mr. Jones.

"Hello!" cried Jones. "Who would ever have thought of seeing you?"

"I might say the same," laughingly retorted Chillingfield, as he took Miss Howard's hand. "But I have news for you, Miss Helen.

"I have heard of an excellent situation near my aunt's—an invalid lady, whose husband"—

"Hang the invalid lady and her husband!" interposed Jones. "I was just going to write you about it, old boy. We are to be married tomorrow."

"No!" cried Reginald. "Then I'll stay to the wedding. But"—

"Well?"

"Isn't it rather a sudden arrangement?"

"Life is full of sudden things," said Jones philosophically. "Helen is willing to run the risk."

And so the troublesome question was settled satisfactorily to all parties.—New York News.

VOL. XVI. NO. 33. THIEF RIVER FALLS, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA THURSDAY, AUGUST 24, 1899. TERMS $1.50 IN ADVANCE.

SOME SUGGESTIONS

Which Are of Interest to the Tax Payers.

The suggestion was made to the NEWS by a gentleman deeply interested in the future of Thief River Falls that at the next city convention a resolution be adopted to the effect that the salary of the city clerk be reduced from $300 to $100; that the office of city attorney, which now costs the city $200 per year, be abolished, and that the five aldermen and mayor, at present receiving $25 and $40 per year, respectively, serve without pay. This would make a direct saving of $565 a year. This amount to be expended upon the roads leading into the city.

If the city is to expend money upon the country roads next year, and this seems to be almost the unanimous opinion, it will be well to consider the most feasable ways. If the work was let by the contract to the lowest bidder, it is highly probable that the money expended would go further. And the roads to be built should be those upon which the farmers are willing to donate the most labor.

The greatest handicap to the prosperity of the farmers in this section is the cost of hauling their goods to market. While many may not realize the truth of this assertion, it is nevertheless true. If the roads were in good shape, farmers could market their crops in about one half of the time it takes at present—and time should be money to the settler who is improving his farm.

FULLER-BROWN.

Two Popular Young People Married Monday.

It is the pleasant duty of the NEWS this week to record the marriage of two of Thief River Falls' most popular young people. At 4 o'clock Monday afternoon, the Rev. Val Kern officiating, Herbert Fuller and Miss Martha Brown were married. The ceremony was performed in the German-Lutheran church in the presence of a large number of friends of the contracting parties.

Both the bride and groom are well known in this city, they having been residents of Thief River Falls for a number of years. The bride is a handsome and accomplished lady and a daughter of August Brown, the well known East side resident. The groom has for a number of years been the superintendent of the city schools, and is a young man with a host of friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Fuller, accompanied by Mr. F.'s parents, are spending a few days on the former's farm north of the city.

The Man Who Succeeds.

The man who makes a success of an important venture never waits for the crowd. He strikes out for himself. It takes nerve. It takes a great lot of grit. But the man who succeeds has both. Any one can fail. The public admires the man who has enough confidence in himself to take a chance. The chances are the main thing after all. The man who tries to succeed must expect to be criticised. Nothing important was ever done but the greater number consulted previously doubted the possibility. Success is the accomplishment of what most people think can't be done.—C. V. White.

BEEF GOES UP.

Cattle Are Scarce and the Prices Advance.

The price of beef cattle is steadily advancing and farmers in this vicinity will probably realize more for their stock this year than ever before. There are several reasons for the rise in the prices of beef, and one of the most patent is the increased purchasing power of the people, caused by the improved business conditions. There is also a scarcity of cattle. The reports to the Agricultural department at Washington showed that at the end of the last year there were nearly two million less cattle in the country, not including milch cows, than there were at the end of the preceding year, and while there are no recent reports as to the number of beef cattle, there is no doubt that there has been a further decline within the past few months. If one will travel over the great grazing sections of the West, he will see vast tracts of land that have been destroyed by overgrazing, and the bad uses of the water facilities which have drained the uplands and given the alkali greater opportunity for coming to the surface. The diminishing number of cattle has been attended by a rise in the valuations, and our latest advises show an increase of nearly twenty million dollars in the valuations of the lessened total number in the country.

WHEAT YIELD

The Minneapolis Journal published its annual estimate of the total yield of wheat in Minnesota and the two Dakotas last week and places the total yield at 27,000,000 bushels less than last year's crop. The Journal's estimate last year was about 200,000,000 bushels, which proved to be about 25,000,000 too low. It attributes this error to a mistaken estimate of the acreage and has increased its acreage estimate this year. This year it estimates the total wheat yield in North and South Dakota and Minnesota at 196,800,000 bushels.

Speaking, in general, for the wheat crop of the three states, it can be said that the yield is uneven and sufficiently mixed to make it difficult to arrange an estimate in advance of threshing.

Good Claims.

John Pacha, the popular drink mixer at Hotel Wilmes, last week received a letter offering him $800 for his right to a claim on a piece of indemnity land out in Cass county. John filed the claim several years ago, but owing to the dispute between the government and the N. P. railroad as to ownership had long since given up hope of ever realizing anything out of it. He will look the matter up at once, as the tract is at present quite valuable.—Red Lake Falls Courier.

P. Wilmes, of this city, also has a right to file on this indemnity land. The claim is located near Walker and contains over $3,000 worth of pine. Mr. Wilmes left Monday for St. Cloud where he will look the matter up.

Tersely Told.

What the homesteaders on the Red lake cession (or ceded reservation) want, is free homesteads. What the Chippewa Indian wants, is pay for the land he has already ceded, including Red lake homesteads.—Bemidji Pioneer.

LOVE AND A RIFLE.

Educated Young Indian Takes His Own Life.

Farris, Minn., Aug. 19.—Joseph Hide, a young full-blood Indian graduate of one of the government schools, recently employed at this place as a clerk in Nygaard's general store, committed suicide by shooting himself with a Winchester rifle. Evidently the act was premeditated, as he took his father's rifle after the family had retired for the night, and going outside, committed the act, which is supposed to be the result of some complication with a young Indian woman. He was held in high esteem in this community.

Acknowledges the Corn.

Wm. Munch has brought to Mr. Purvis, for the county exhibit at the state fair, a sheaf of corn nine and one-half feet high and that not cut to the root. Each stalk contains at least three ears, some of them more, the cobs averaging 17 inches in length. Who will say after this that Polk county cannot grow field corn? Mr. Purvis took 25 prizes for corn at the World's Fair for the Minnesota exhibit, and the wise ones shook their heads when he told them it was grown in the northern part of the state. Mr. Munch's exhibit shows that Polk county can grow corn or anything else that can be produced in the temperate zone.—Crookston Times.

Can You Do It?

Two farmers came to a grocery to get some oil. One of them had an eight gallon can and the other a five-gallon can. Each one wanted just four gallons of oil, but the grocer's measures had all been stolen except one of three gallons, and he did not know how to measure it out for them. As four and four make eight, it was easy enough to first fill the eight-gallon can, but how to get just four gallons of that into the five-gallon can was a hard problem, but at last, after the three men had spent the long afternoon in trying, they did it, using only the three measures of eight, five and three gallons each.—Princeton Union.

Will Settle Cut-over Lands.

A sale has been consumated whereby Frank Crowell, of Minneapolis, purchases 13,000 acres of land from T. B. Walker. The land is adjacent to the town of Shevlin. Two-thirds of the land is covered with hardwood timber, and it is all good farming country. The consideration was $25,000. A. A. Paine, the Itasca park promoter and former editor of the Solway paper, will have charge of the work of settling the land.

Headquarters at St. Paul.

Supervisor Rakestraw, of the Indian school service, has decided to make his headquarters at St. Paul. Mr. Rakestraw was recently transferred from the Pacific slope to the school district embrasing Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan and North Dakota, succeeding Supervisor Wright, transferred to the Southwest.

The Indian Population.

According to figures prepared at the interior department, the Indian population in Minnesota numbers 8,800. There are 7,833 Chippewas and 967 Sioux.

Our Senator Ill.

According to the Crookston Times, Senator O. H. Myran is quite ill in a hospital in Minneapolis of asthma.

SWINE PLAGUE

Near Crookston—The Farmers Ought to Quarantine.

It is reported that there are several cases of swine plague in the townships close to Crookston. This is very unfortunate as it was thought that both swine plague and hog cholera were eradicated from this county. However, inasmuch as the disease is here, the best thing to do is to try to arrest the spread of it so that the damage may be as limited as possible.

Swine plague, like hog cholera, is a germ disease that spreads easily from place to place. It can be carried on a person's shoes, on the feet of horses, on the wheels of wagons; stray dogs can carry the germs from one herd to another. Even birds flying from one hog yard to another can be the means of spreading the disease. A farmer is often not to be blamed if his hogs are dying from swine plague as he may be entirely innocent as to how the germs were carried. When the disease has appeared the owner of the animals affected should immediately quarantine his herd.

If the local board of health has any knowledge of the matter it is their duty to establish this quarantine and also to notify the state board of health. When the disease is once in the herd the majority of the hogs are likely to die. By separating the well ones from the sick the chances are better that some may be saved. All communication between the two pens should be cut off. No one should be allowed in the pens of the sick hogs except they thoroughly disinfect their clothes or other material that might carry away the germs.

The laws of the state also assist in protecting a farmer from careless neighbors. He can quarantine his own yards and buildings, and if any unauthorized person enters them he is subject to fine or imprisonment. The state board of health will furnish placard free to all applying, who wish to quarantine their herds. It reads as follows:

NOTICE!

All unauthorized persons are forbidden, under penalty of the law, to approach on these premises, nearer than 50 feet to any pens or yards where hogs are confined.

CHAPTER 233, LAWS OF 1897.

Section 11. Whenever during the prevalence in the state of any contagious of infectious disease among domestic animals, the owner shall post on his premises a notice forbidding all persons not authorized by state or local boards of health to enter any building or enclosure on said premises without permission from said owner, it shall be a misdemeanor to enter upon said premises, punishable by a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars ($25) nor more than one hundred dollars ($100), or by imprisonment for not less than thirty (30) nor more than ninety (90) days.

There is no cure so far discovered. The only practical method is to establish a rigid quarantine and thereby confine the disease to the smallest possible territory.—Polk County Journal.

Birthday Celebrated.

A large number of the German-Americans of this section were at the farm residence of August Yanke, three miles west of town, Sunday, where the anniversary of the birth of Mrs. Yanke was celebrated. Over 100 people were present and all report a most enjoyable time.

TO KNOW SEPT. 1.

State Examination Marks to Be Announced Then.

Concerning the state examinations held Aug. 7 and 8, the Pioneer Press says: "The great bulk of teachers examination papers has been received by Superintendent Lewis, of the state department of public instruction, all but a few more remote counties having made returns of the papers through the county superintendents. There are not as many papers as Supt. Lewis believed there would be. He thought the papers would number somewhere between 50,000 and 100,000, but is now of the opinion that there will not be more than 25,000 to 50,000. On this basis he figures that between 2,500 and 5,000 teachers took examinations out of a total of 10,000 teachers in the state. Second grade teachers have to submit eight papers and those being examined for first grade certificates, 13 papers. The expert teachers, employed in reading and classifying the papers, are hard at work in the hall of representatives and Supt. Lewis expects to have the examinations all passed upon by the opening of the school year the first of September."

He Knew Her.

An old man from the country south of Fisher would not believe that he could hear his wife talk twelve miles by the telephone. His wife went to Crookston for a week's visit and the old man went to town to satisfy himself by an experiment with the telephone. He went to the telephone exchange office on Thursday, about the time the lightning blew the butcher shop to pieces and told them he wanted to talk with his wife. They explained how to operate the phone and exclaimed, "Hello Jane!" At that instance the lightning struck the the telephone wire and knocked the old gentleman down, and as he scrambled to his feet, he excitedly exclaimed, "That's Jane, by gosh."—Trail County Times.

Dismissed.

The case of assault against Chief of Police Sirois, of Red Lake Falls, in which he was fined $15 at St. Hilaire, was dismissed last Saturday by Court Commissioner Mathews, on a writ of habeas corpus, and the county pays the costs as usual.

Dissolution Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the partnership heretofore existing between Whitman & Culver has this day been mutually dissolved. The business is to be continued by Mr. Culver, who will collect and pay all bills.

Building the Line.

A large crew of men employed by the Northwestern Telephone company are camping in the city. The men are at work putting up the telephone poles which will connect this city with Minneapolis and intermediate points.

1,500 Barrels.

Red Lake Falls has, since the recent fire there, let the cotract for the construction of a 1,500 barrel cistern to which they will back up their fire engine the next time their quarterly fire breaks out.

Located.

Agent Mercer has recommended the location of one of what are called the Gilfillan schools on the point between upper and lower Red lake on the Red Lake reservation.

LOTS OF HUNTERS

Will Be Here When the Hunting Season Opens Up.

There will undoubtedly be a large number of hunters in this section when the season opens up. Ed. Wilcox is corresponding with several parties who are thinking of shooting prairie chickens here, among whom are Page Morris, congressman from the Sixth district, and F. J. Whitney, general passenger agent of the Great Northern railroad.

Being Pushed.

L. Johnson, the contractor, arrived in the city Sunday with a crew of about fifteen men and is busy at work building the Odd Fellows' brick building. He states that it will be completed before Oct. 1.

THE NEWS,

By John W. Eastman.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

Thief River Falls has—have you?

The Hibbing News sizes up the situation to a nicety when it says, "Bryan wants the vote and then the voter is of no consequence."

With ten thousand more volunteers in sight and General Miles again in favor with the authorities, Aguinaldo takes little comfort in the news from America.

Crookston will have a carnival this fall instead of a street fair. It is sure to be a success, as the enterprising people of that place never do anything by halves.

A Chicago report asserts that James J. Hill will build fifteen new steamers for the trans-Pacific trade of the Great Northern road, the present fleet being inadequate to handle increased business.

The demand for the repeal of the national bankruptcy law is quite general. While the law was passed in the interests of honest bankrupts, it is enabling too many dishonest men to swindle their creditors.

No, Tom Reed will not head the anti-expansion ticket. Tom may be a "czar" and all that sort of thing, but his most hopeful enemies never accused him of being a fool.

The Polk County Journal has recently added a new Optimus press to its well equipped office. The Journal is one of the best papers published in the Red River valley, and typographically it is unexcelled in the state.

The published accounts of the Dreyfus trial read more like the minutes of a Populist convention than the proceedings of a court of justice. The man who talks fastest and loudest seems to be the winner, always providing that the judge has not made up his mind before the "trial" commenced.

The St. Paul Globe, accustomed to snarl at everything in sight, takes a snarl at our own Mark Twain by way of keeping its hand in. As usual, the Globe fails to strike a responsive chord. A back handed slap at that brave, cheerful apostle of good fellowship appeals to most of us as wanton viciousness or a bad case of liver.

Paul J. Dixon, editor of the Missouri World and the Missouri member of the Populist national committee, asked if the Populists would have a presidential ticket of their own in 1900, promptly replied: "I believe they will. In fact, they already have a ticket in the field. On September 6, 1898, a national convention of straight Populists was held at Cincinnati, and at that convention Hon Wharton Barker, of Philadelphia, was nominated for president, and Hon. Ignatius Donnelly, of Minnesota, for vice president. These nominations were subject to a referendum vote of the members of Populist precinct clubs. When that vote is taken the club members may vote for Barker and Donnelly or for any straight Populist, and the persons receiving the most votes will be the nominees. I do not think the Democratic leaders have at any time seriously contemplated the renomination of Bryan. His nomination in '96 was, in my opinion, a temporary expedient to tide the party over the campaign."

Several Indians, who have been employed by P. & J. Meehan on the drive, arrived in the city the first of the week and are spending their hard earned money.

TAMED THE JOCKEYS.

THE MIDGETS EACH HAD A BAD CASE OF SWELLED HEAD.

A Spanking Over a Waiter's Knee Cured One, and an Unceremonious Tumble Into the Ocean Took the Insolence Out of the Other.

"It is a notorious fact," said an old horseman, "that successful jockeys are more afflicted with the big head than any other class of midgets you're liable to meet up with. On two occasions that I recall I've seen American waiters take prominent American jockeys down when the latter have become insufferable in their conduct. Some years ago an eastern jockey whose fame was spread broadcast throughout the racing world was taking dinner with a party of foolishly idolatrous friends at the Cliff House, outside of San Francisco. The jockey had been riding during the winter racing in and around San Francisco, and on this day he had won the swell event of the year on a rather no account horse. Consequently his hat was a whole lot too small for him.

"He was an insulting little chap at best, but on this occasion he simply let his tongue run away with his brains. His humor took the turn of joshing an old time waiter at the Cliff House who had been in California since the days of the Argonauts. The old man had long side whiskers, and the jockey made sundry and divers remarks to the waiter about the opportunity he was giving to the wind by wearing whiskers of that particular length, and the old man took the talk good naturedly without paying much attention to the touch of nastiness in the midget's remarks. Finally, however, when the wine had gone around pretty freely, the jockey reached up behind his chair as the old waiter was in the act of performing some little service for the men at the table, and, twisting his hand in the hair on one side of the old servitor's face, he deliberately pulled out a fairly large handful of the latter's whiskers.

"The old man leaped back with pain and indignation, the jockey laughing at him idiotically. Then the waiter coolly lifted the jockey out of his chair by the scruff of the neck, sat down and calmly deposited the midget across his knees, face downward.

"'Son,' said the waiter, 'there's something that you've stood in need of for a long time past, judging from your actions here during the past few months, and that something you're about to get and get good,' and he brought the palm of an ample hand down with a smack that sounded very pleasant indeed unto the ears of all the rest of the people in the room (except the jockey's friends) who had seen the beard pulling incident. Then he brought both hands into play, and the rataplan told of splendid execution. The jockey kicked and struggled, but he couldn't break loose, and he had to take his medicine. Then his friends at the table jumped to his rescue, and, quickly letting the jockey slide on to the floor, the old waiter, thoroughly aroused, jumped up and knocked them down one after the other. He just polished them all off in detail, and when he had got through with them he stood his ground. Then the manager appeared on the scene, and when he was told by a number of other guests, prominent men, what had happened he assisted in kicking the party out of the house.

"Another time a jockey who leaped into prominence with meteoric speed by reason of his winning two of the great events of the eastern turf in quick succession got the worst of it at the hands of a Coney Island waiter. I saw the incident myself. The jockey had had such a mighty accession of the 'I am it' spirit that he considered he could perform all sorts of mean little tricks at the expense of all hands and do the same with impunity. On this day he had won three straight races, and his imperiousness was something monumental. He took dinner with three bookmakers on one of the big Coney Island piers. The man who waited on the party was a bullet head, but a quiet, attentive man at that. He was removing some plates after the second course when the jockey picked up a siphon of seltzer and deliberately squirted half the bottle full in the waiter's face. The waiter wiped his face and his shirt front off with his table towel and then he walked up to the jockey's chair and said:

"'Have you had yer dip in de sea yit t'day, Freddy?'

"'No,' said the jockey, with an expression of surprise on his face, as if he wondered what was coming.

"'I t'ought not,' said the bullet headed waiter. 'Dat's de reason I'm goin t' let you have it now.'

"Then the waiter suddenly picked the famous jockey up, and before any of the men at the table could interfere he carried him over to the railing of the pier and dropped the midget horse rider into the water, about 15 feet below.

"'I jist want t' see if de little snoozer wit' de swelled-out kin swim as well as he kin ride a horse,' said the waiter, quietly watching the jockey come to the surface and strike out. The jockey could swim, and he made the beach without any trouble, but he didn't return to the pier."—Washington Star.

Missing Time.

What do people do with their surplus time? They used to weave the cloth their garments were made of and make them by hand. They now get them ready made at the stores. It takes less time to do every act of drudgery than it used to take. What becomes of the surplus time? If we have gained an hour over our ancestors, what becomes of it?—Atchison Globe.

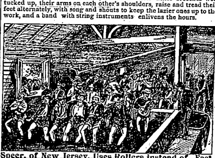
SCENE IN A PORTUGAL WINERY,

In the mountains, at the Quinto do Sexio, Portugal, a famous Port Wine district where the custom of treading the grapes for Port Wine is still in vogue. From ten to a dozen men or women for each gang in turn continue the treading, day and night, during the four or five weeks vintage. Some of the treading vats are large enough for three separate rows of ten men each, who with their white breeches well tucked up, their arms on each other's shoulders, raise and tread their feet alternately, with song and shouts to keep the lazier ones up to the work, and a band with string instruments enlivens the hours.



Speer, of New Jersey, Uses Rollers instead of Feet.

It is from this district the vines were imported over forty years ago that now fill the vineyards of the Speer Wine Co., at Passaic.

At Passaic the same kind of grapes are crushed between large rollers of rubber, revolved by steam. This is the only place in this country where the real genuine Port Wine is made from the Oporto grape—and they are grown right in Speer's Vineyards.

These vineyards extend over ⅓ of a mile along one of the Main avenues of Passaic, and comprise fifty six acres. The soil being rich in iron makes the wine most valuable for Medical use.

SPEER'S WINES

Are well known to be of the highest character, the oldest and most refined Wines in America, equal if not superior to any wines in the world. They consist of Port, Sherry, Burgundy, Claret, Sauterne Wines, and ★★★ Climax Brandy. Mr. Speer has some Wine in his cellars that he made over thirty eight years ago. All of Speer's Wines and Brandy are very old, rich, well rounded, soft and delicate. Every family should have a bottle or two of each variety of Speer's Wines and Brandy always in the home, for sickness or family use

IT'S NO GOOD.

A Forged P. & J. Meehan Time Check.

P. & J. Meehan Tuesday received the following letter from M. Williams, a saloon keeper at Wadena, Minn.:

I hold an order on you for $58, given by H. P. Kruger, July 15, 1899, due Nov. 1, 1899, camp No. 34. Will you kindly inform me if said order is good? It is drawn to Peter Rassmussen and endorsed over to me. An early answer will be appreciated.

Mr. Williams, who by the way is a brother of George Williams, of this city, has been informed by the lumber firm that the check is a forgery. No one by the name of Peter Rassmussen has been in their employ; they have no foreman by the name of H. P. Kruger, and camp No. 34 is a myth. Since the law was passed last winter making time checks payable on demand, P. & J. Meehan have dispensed with using them, paying their men in cash.

The Hessian Fly.

Grain in the southern part of the county is reported as crinkling down pretty badly, and the farmers attribute the cause to the Hessian fly, which, it is found, has deposited an egg above one joint of a stalk in each case where a head droops. This report is confirmed by farmers from Euclid and in various other portions of the county.

Some of the supposed hail losses are due to this cause. In each case where the grain is crinkled the head fails to fill and the berry is much shrunken. One farmer, whose grain looked good for a 30-bushel yield, and who contracted with a thrasher on this basis, has scaled his estimate down one-half. The outlook now is that the yield on the average will not be above ten bushels per acre in this and Norman counties, while the grade will be so low that number 1 northern will be scarce.—Crookston Times.

Incendiarism.

At about quarter to 12 Tuesday night someone set fire to the tent belonging to the merry-go-round. It was saturated with oil, and undoubtedly would have burned up rapidly, but for the timely discovery. No reason can be assigned for anyone committing a deed of this kind. The damage to the tent and carriages was small.

"I Have; Have You?"

Will C. Smiley, late lieutenant in the 14th Minn. Vol., circulated among the citizens of Thief River Falls yesterday taking orders for the "I have; have you?" badges. About $25 was collected, and the amount will bring twenty-five of the members of the Thirteenth regiment one hundred miles nearer home.

I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

THE CLOCK.

By J. J. Kingsley Tarpey.

The clock stood between the two cheese presses, against the wall facing the window, and from the first it had the air of being the most important piece of furniture in the room. But it was only when I became more used to the ways of the house that I fully realized the part that it played. The beauty of the thing had gained my respect at once—the fine and delicate inlaying of brass in the polished wood; the brass dial plate, with its quaint engraving of sun, moon and stars; the beautifully wrought iron hands. Those had the homage that was their due long before I learned the sovereign power of the old clock itself. Everything about the house was regulated by it. The animals outside listened for the stroke of the hour before they began their clamors. Georgie had a different tune for every quarter that it struck of the allotted time for churning. If the clock said 9, the family went to bed, though my watch only pointed to 10 minutes past 8. But they were wise in their generation, for they knew the old tyrant would have them out of bed again before 9 in the morning.

On Saturday night the greatest ceremony of winding took place, and in the earlier part of that day the clock set all inferior timekeepers, including the sun, at defiance. It usually gained from 20 to 25 minutes in seven days, and as it was always set half an hour fast you could count toward the end of the week on having dinner an hour earlier than you ordered it. It was exactly the same if an appointment had to be kept or a train caught.

There was an attitude of contemptuous pity in the household for the people whose clocks did not keep the same time. I had an unavailing argument with John on the subject. He admitted that the old clock was "a bit faster than other clocks," but he could not see that it was any the worse for that, and as for its being set half an hour fast—well, it might be fast by my time or London time, but it was the time they kept in that part. No, he couldn't say who started it nor when it was started. It had always been like that as long as he could remember. Station time? Oh, nobody went by station time, not even the trains. Farmers couldn't trust to station time. And church time was something between. It was all a matter of custom. In Ireland, he understood, they were half an hour slow. That wouldn't suit in Cheshire. John was still young enough to feel great pride when he wore his father's watch on market days. It was not very long since the day his mother had first intrusted him with it and had watched with anxious eyes as he drove off with his sister in the old spring cart. Perhaps the most important duty on market day was that of "bringing back the time." It was a function as serious as the ancient one of bringing home the sacred fire, and it could scarcely have been performed successfully save by the old silver watch and the eldest son of the house.

Once, during harvest, there was a question as to whether Georgie might not be trusted to go to market. There seemed to be no doubt in any one's mind that he could dispose of the butter and eggs, but at last, though the pressure of work was great, it was John that went.

"You see, he had to bring back the time," his mother explained; then, seeing my look of surprise, she went on apologetically: "Georgie—well, Georgie is only a lad. He's not like John. I never thought to trust any of them with our master's watch, but John was always old for his years. They are good children, all of them, but I should not like to see any of them but John bring back the time and wind the clock."

"The life of the farm seems bound up in the old clock," I said musingly. "If it stopped, I think the whole thing would come to an end."

Mrs. Pimlott stood silent for a moment, and, as I glanced at her, I saw the shadow of a memory cross her face. "It did stop once," she said at last, "many, many years ago. Our master, you know, he died when they were all little ones—John and Ann and all. He was ill a long time, weeks and months, and I could think of nothing, care for nothing, but that. I scarcely remembered that I had children in those days. And near the end my baby sickened and died. I had always been fond of my babies till that time, but I never cried when she went. I think I hardly noticed. I think—I would have let all the children go if I could have kept him a bit longer, and afterward—I never took no notice of them nor of anything. It wasn't that I cried or took on. I was never that sort. Neighbors came in, and some one must have minded the children and the stock and that, for they didn't die, but I never took notice, and at last some one went to the vicar, and he said he'd come and see what he could do, and he talked very kind and said I knew where to lay the burden and how the world was full of trouble. And the words were like pebbles against the window. 'And your little children, Mrs. Pimlott,' he said. 'You must rouse yourself for the sake of your little ones.' And when he had gone I sat there trying to think what it all meant, and I thought of the children, but only to wonder why they were there. And suddenly I looked at the clock, and I saw that it had stopped, and I thought how vexed our master would have been to see it, and in a minute something came over me like a flood, and I broke down and cried—well, I can't tell you how I cried. And when I came to myself a bit I felt something pulling at my apron, and there was John and Ann had crept in, and the poor little mites were crying too. And—well, the clock stopping like that somehow made me see things different. Our master was always that particular about the clock. And after I'd wound it up and set it going—well, the rest seemed to come easier. No; we've never let it run down since then."—Speaker.

A Head For Business.

Algernon—Ah, my dear boy, so glad to see you! And how is your suit with Miss de Rich getting on?

Augustus—Weally, my boy, I can't say that I've made much progress so far, but I believe I've hit on the right idea now. Do you see this dawg?

"Of course. What a delightful pug! Just like the one that Miss de Rich admired, by the way."

"It's the very one, my boy. She went into ecstasies over it at the dawg show."

"Ah, I see! So, you've bought it for her?"

"No; for myself."

"For yourself? What good can that do you?"

"Why, my boy, can't you see? Ba Jove, the dear girl will have to take me or lose the dawg, you know."—Pearson's.

His Friend's Opinions.

Gallimard is an artist, and one year he decided to exhibit something. The picture on its completion enchanted him. It had been painted in the strictest seclusion for fear the idea might be stolen, but now that the time for sending it in has arrived that anxiety is removed, and he invites two friends to inspect his work.

First Friend—Ah, ah! So that's the thing, is it? By Jove, but it's good, old fellow!

Second Friend—Hurrah for the dog! Where did you get your idea?

Gallimard—Oh, it's quite a long story! I was coming back from Nanterre one day, and from the car window I saw this garden, with the children playing among the trees and the big dog running and jumping around them. The thing so fascinated me that I went back on foot, made several studies, and here you are.

First Friend—My dear boy, it's a fine piece of work.

Second Friend—It's simple, but you've hit it just right. Where did you find the youngsters?

Gallimard—They are my little nephews.

First Friend—There is one little thing I notice, though. Do you mind my speaking of it?

Gallimard—Why, of course not. One cannot always judge of effects oneself. Good advice is always welcome.

Second Friend—Especially a friend's advice.

First Friend—Well, then, old fellow, your sky is a trifle too clear. You should cloud it a little.

Gallimard—Do you think so?

First Friend—Yes; because, you see, you didn't pose your brats out of doors, and they haven't the—you catch what I mean?

Gallimard—Yes, yes. Let me see—a little smudge of cloud right here perhaps. Well, if you think—

Second Friend—Oh, yes, my dear boy, yes, and put one in here too.

First Friend—That youngster there is hit off to life, isn't he, Chose?

Second Friend—Seems to me he has a sort of frightened look. If I were Gallimard, I would take away the other one, the one who's laughing, because you can't see what he's laughing at. Don't you think so, Machin?

First Friend—Oh, he could leave the one who's laughing if he liked and take away the frightened one, for, as you say, they don't correspond—one or the other would have to go.

Gallimard—Why, I thought they were rather effective, the two contrasting faces.

Second Friend—That's all very well, my dear boy; but then it ceases to be a picture. It is simply a study of heads, of grimaces.

First Friend—He's right. Take out the laughing boy. Besides, he isn't as well done as the other. He looks just a little bit like a monkey.

Gallimard—But, you see, that one all alone—

First Friend—I agree with you perfectly, but this is what you could do: To explain his fright let the house be burning up. He could be running away from the fire.

Second Friend—Good! That's a capital idea, but in that case he would have to take away the trees, otherwise you couldn't see—

Gallimard—But that changes my whole picture. I would rather leave in the laughing one.

Second Friend—Oh, of course, if you like, only what in the world is he laughing at? Besides, if you wanted to make him your principal subject, you should have put him in the foreground.

First Friend—The fact is that over there in that corner, where the dog is, the perspective is not at all clear, and then your house is all mixed up with the trees in the foreground. You ought to put your trees behind.

Second Friend—Or take them away altogether. That would free the house.

Gallimard—But, you see, if I only leave one child—

Second Friend—I have an idea. Will you allow me? Take out the house and trees and put them off there in the background, leave the frightened boy where he is and make a lion rush down upon him from a mountain. Your sky is warm, the whole thing will look like an African scene.

Gallimard—A great idea! But how about the costume?

First Friend—Oh, that's simple enough. Chose is right. You'd have a superb effect there. All you have to do is to dress the little fellow like a Bedouin. Come to think of it, you should make him larger—a young man, in fact.

Second Friend—Or an old man with a gray beard.

First Friend—Oh, I'll tell you what would be stunning. A negro with snow white hair. You'd make a sensation then and no mistake.

Gallimard—Yes, but that's entirely departing from my subject.

First Friend—Not necessarily, only altering it a little. Make your negro nude. In that way you'd have a fine relief effect, and it would be strange indeed if your picture did not create a stir.

Gallimard—I would never have believed—

First Friend—Well, you see, you asked our opinion, and, being friends, we gave it to you.

One alteration after another is suggested, until finally he is advised by some to change the subject of his picture to a "Cabstand" or the "Arrival of an Excursion Train" and by others to the "Wreck of the Meduse," the "Execution of Louis XVI," etc.

In short, Gallimard never exhibited at all, because in the end he became insane.—From the French for Short Stories.

Jumping at Conclusions.

He—Are any of your sisters married to foreign noblemen?

She—No; they are all married to good American citizens.

He—Then the reports I have heard concerning your father's wealth must be exaggerated.—Chicago News.

Prejudiced Against Mince Meat.

Chapple — Averted twibble twagedy just now.

Chollie—No! How?

Chapple—Man said he would pound me to mince meat if I did not give him half a dollah, and I gave him half a dollah.—Tit-Bits.

THE GAME LAWS.

An Outline of the Provisions of Those Inforced.

The hunting season is at hand, and the following brief summary of the provisions of the game laws passed by the last legislature will be read with interest by sportsmen and others:

The open season for prairie chickens, snipe, white-breasted or sharp-tailed grouse and turtle doves bigins Sept. 1 and closes Oct. 31. The season for quail, partridge, ruffled grouse or pheasant opens Oct. 1 and closes Dec. 1. The season for ducks, geese, brant and all aquatic fowl opens Sept. 1 and closes Dec. 31.

The sale, exposing for sale, having in possession with intent to sell, or the shipment to any person either within or without the state by common or private carrier, of any quail, ruffled or sharp-tailed grouse, prairie chicken, partridge, or pheasant, is punishable by a fine of from $10 to $25 and costs, or by imprisonment of from 10 to 30 days for each and every bird sold or shipped.

The open season for deer begins Nov. 1 and closes Nov. 20, and no hunter is allowed to kill more than five deer in one season. The law further prohibits the sale of deer during the first five days of the open season.

No licenses are required except for hunting deer. Resident deer hunters must secure a license, the cost of which is 25c; non-resident deer hunters must pay $25 for the same privilege. The licenses are issued by the county auditor.

For the benefit of the small boy it might be added that the killing of any whippoorwill, nighthawk, blue bird, finch, thrush, linnet, lark-wren, martin, swallow, bobolink, robin, cat-bird or any other harmless bird at any season of the year is punishable by a fine of from $10 to $25, or by imprisonment from ten to thirty days.

Will Sue for $2,000.

H. W. Lee, of Thief River Falls, was in the city Thursday filing some papers and taking notes in an action which he will begin for M. Skala against the city and township of Red Lake Falls for damages claimed to have been sustained by Mr. Skala, the cause of which was the construction of a culvert on the section line road between sections 10 and 15, also by the construction of ditches leading to it. It is claimed that these drain several large slough, the water from which overflows the complainant's farm, damaging him to the extent of $2,000. Just how the city can be made a party to the defense is not clearly brought out, but it is understood that several years ago the city and township jointly constructed a part of the road mentioned and no doubt this is the grounds for including the city in the action. The case promises some important phases of the law and will be watched with interest.—Red Lake Falls Courier.

The Chief Back.

Chief Moose Dung returned to this city last Friday from a trip to Turtle Mountain, N. D., where he had been visiting the Chippewas in that section. He brought back with him 11 horses which were presented to him by the Indians over there.

FOUND NO GOLD.

Hugh Dean, Returned From Alaska Last Week.

Hugh Dean, who was one of the party of five to leave this city in the spring of 1897 for the gold fields of Alaska, returned to this city last Friday. Eighteen months spent in the gold country convinced him that there is no place like Thief River Falls. He was in the Copper river country, and was within fifty miles of the source of that river. The country, he states, is very barren, only a few spruce trees growing in the vallies. There were thousands of people in there and not a paying claim was found by anyone. The hardships underwent were beyond description, and hundreds of people died of starvation, cold and scurfy. Of the other members of the party, with whom Mr. Dean went to Alaska, the whereabouts of Archie Young, who is at present at St. Michaels, Alaska, is all that is known. When Mr. Dean left for Alaska he had $1,500 in cash, and returned to Thief River Falls with less than $5.

Good Advice.

Have you given the matter of firebreaks any thought of late? Remember the big growth of grass on the prairies this summer is likely to result in big prairie fires, which will, unless protected by wide firebreaks, cause a great deal of loss. More than ordinary precaution must be taken this year to provide with good firebreaks. Don't suffer loss, when all that is necessary is a little foresight. Plow good, wide firebreaks, burning the grass between, and do it before the fire sweeps everything off the place. There are two things that wait for no man—time and prairie fires. — Crookston Times.

A New Horse Feed.

According to Consul Hughes, of Coburg, potato bread is used by the natives of Thuringia, Germany, to feed their horses, especially when they are worked hard in very cold weather. The animals thrive on it, and their health and strength are excellent. The method of preparation is simple and inexpensive. The potatoes are slowly stewed till soft. They are then mashed thoroughly, and an equal quantity of corn meal added. It is mixed into a thick paste, with a small quantity of salt. The paste is then divided into 4-pound loaves and allowed to bake thoroughly. In the slow country ovens it generally takes from fifteen to eighteen hours. When cold they are fed to the horses and cattle doing heavy work at the rate of four loaves a day, viz., one in the morning, one at noon, one at about four o'clock, and one at night. With the last about 10 pounds of poor hay is given. It is claimed for this method that horses can do much more work on the same amount of food, and that it is good for their teeth. —Anoka Herald.

They Are Gay.

Over 40 hands on the Woodward farm struck this morning for higher wages. They were getting $2.00 per day but wanted $2.50, which the manager concluded he could not pay. It remains to be seen whether or not the men did a wise thing. Threshing has been finished further south and many men are coming this way to work. Two dollars per day are not bad wages for threshing by any means. The farm still has one crew at work. Mr. Woodward says that only one Swede among the large number in his employ joined in the strike.—Warren Sheaf, Aug. 25.

A NEW WHEAT.

Of a Bearded Variety That Will Do Well Here.

Fargo, N. D., Aug. 26.—Secretary Wilson, of the department of agriculture at Washington, secured some Russian wheat last winter, a sample of which was sent to the agricultural college here for planting. The experiment seems to have been a decided success. It is a bearded wheat with four rows on a side, with a very large plump berry. Several heads were counted and found to contain 60 kernels each, of an average weight of a grain each. The famous Scotch Fife, the leading wheat of this section of the Red River valley, is only about one-half as heavy with about one-half the grains in a head. The experiment would indicate that the wheat would yield about seventy-five bushels to the acre.

There is one disadvantage in that the grain appears to be of a soft variety as winter wheat. Experiments with winter wheat sown here show that it becomes hard wheat after a few seasons. The Russian wheat might change its condition in that respect—in fact, the blue stem wheat, sown largely through some parts of the state, is said to have originally been soft wheat. If the wheat is a success, it will yield perhaps three or four times the kind now sown and will be a bonanza for northwestern farmers.

Local Lady Won.

The grand ball given by the Red Lake Falls Orchestra Tuesday night was largely attended. The interest centered in who would win the prize for the best waltzing. The Judges were Miss Florence Newton, Mrs. Jas. Meehan, Jr., F. E. Hunt, E. D. Vayo and Fred Burgdorf. Joseph Sally and Miss Nellie Curran were awarded the prizes, which consisted of a box of Armstrong's J. B. cigars, for the gentleman, and a gold thimble for the lady.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

Paranto to Brown.

Four weeks ago, through the columns of the NEWS, I challenged Van R. Brown, of Red Lake Falls, to a foot race for $50 or for fun. Brown is a sprinter of some local celebrity and, it is understood, made some criticism of my abilities in that line, but has so far failed to respond to the challenge. Taken in connection with the failure of their ball team to live up to its agreement and play us a return game, this seems to show that the sports from down the river have a yellow streak concealed about their persons.

A. PARANTO.

Another I. O. O. F. Building.

Clearwater Lodge I. O. O. F. may soon have a new home. Negotiations are now in progress with H. M. Kaus, which, if consummated, will transfer to the Odd Fellows the lot adjoining the Kaus block, upon which they will erect a substantial two story brick block, 25x80 feet. The lower floor will be utilized by Horovitz Bros.' clothing establishment while the upper story will be fitted up for lodge purposes. This lodge is one of the strong financial institutions of our city, and as the members seem to be all of one mind, the new home will no doubt be commenced early next month.—Red Lake Falls Courier.

He Has Been Here.

A "kissing bug" was seen in Perham one evening this week in real operation. The bug was about five feet ten inches tall, dark coat, tan shoes, and wore a straw hat. An old gentleman was first to notice it operating in the moonlight and attempted to get his hands on it, but, alas, it flew, and has not been seen in town since.—Perham Bulletin.

LOST NOTHING.

M. Williams Did Not Cash the Time Check.

Martin Williams, the Wadena general merchant, who was reported to have cashed a forged P. & J. Meehan time check by the NEWS last week, seems to have been fortunate. Seen in reference to the matter by a Pioneer-Journal reporter, he said that a week ago a stranger came into his store with a time check of the Messrs. Meehan and wanted to sell it. Mr. Williams is well acquainted with the Meehans, and he said he knew the time check was all right if it had been drawn by them, but owing to the fact that the man was an entire stranger, he concluded to be a little cautious so he wrote them, and received a letter in reply that the check was no good. Mr. Williams has no idea who the fellow was that had the check. He told him he would write up and see if the check was genuine, and if so he would buy it, and the fellow has never been around since.

Stop Thief.

Gus Naplin, of the town of Polk Centre, mourns the loss of a valuable horse which was stolen from the barn on his farm Monday night. A harness was also stolen from a neighboring farmer. Suspicion points to a stranger who had been hanging around the community for several days, as he disappeared at the same time. Mr. Naplin offers a private reward of $25 for the return of the animal and the conviction of the thief.—Red Lake Falls Courier.

Pine Land Farmers.

The Bemidji Pioneer says: "It is estimated that over 1,000 of the voters of Beltrami county have, within two weeks, left for the Dakota harvest. So few of them have yet been able to open more than an acre of their own farms, that the income of a couple of months in Dakota at $2.00 per day and found makes a very comfortable addition to the needs of the Beltrami homesteader."

It Bloomed.

The yearly blooming of Mrs. Carl Kretzschmar's night blooming cereus occured last Friday evening. The plant is a model of its kind, as all who witnessed it will testify. Mrs. Kretzschmar has perhaps the finest selection of plants in the city, a fact of which anyone could be justly proud.

NEW WHEAT

Marketed in Thief River Falls Last Friday.

Halvor Anderson, one of the enterprising settlers living in the northern part of the town of Excel, was one of the first farmers to market new wheat in Thief River Falls this year. He brought down a load last Friday, which he sold to the O. K. mill. The wheat was of a very good quality, in fact better than any marketed here last year, and graded No. 1 hard.

Messrs. Hanson & Barzen, of the O. K. mill, have been making extensive arrangements and propose to buy all the wheat they can this fall. They have excellent facilities for handling the same, and owing to the fact that it is a local firm, the farmers will probably give them preference.

The movement of wheat from the new crop into Duluth is much later this year than it was last. The rains have interfered with the work of harvesting the grain and have caused the set back, although the entire season has been somewhat backward. There is very little new wheat offered on the board of trade now, while at this time last year the sales were running very heavy. The receivers expect the offerings to begin almost any time, and they undoubtedly will if there should be more rain for a few days.

In all about thirty cars of new wheat have arrived here up to the present time. It is showing up remarkably well thus far. Most of the thirty cars have graded 1 northern. Only seven or eight out of the lot have graded 2 northern. It is hardly expected that the entire crop will run as good as this, however, for the combination of rain and hot weather, which the wheat fields went through this summer, are certain to have caused the shrinking of a great deal of grain.—Duluth Herald.

A Good Deed.

Here is fraternity for you, the kind that is worth recording. The St. Cloud Times says that Herman Brueskon, who was so badly injured in a harvest accident in St. Martin several weeks ago, is able to be out and is rapidly approaching complete restoration to health. Mr. Brueskon is a member of the Catholic Order of Foresters, of St. Martin, and while he lay upon a sick bed at the hospital two weeks ago Sunday, the members of the order, with twenty binders, gathered at his farm and cut all his grain, and last Sunday they met there again and put it into stacks. It was a generous and timely action and reflects much credit upon the order.—Melrose Beacon.

THE NEWS,

By John W. Eastman.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

This section of the state just at present could use a few of Mr. Bryan's "army of unemployed."

A North Dakota editor calls one of his journalistic brethren a "pin-pedaled, pumpkin-pated, pancake-phized, political pie-bald, puerile pencil pusher." We should judge that he is not an admirer of the gentleman.

If Bob Dunn was governor the Thirteenth regiment would be brought home at the state's expense. Mr. Dunn believes in doing right—does not let minor technicalities influence his sound judgment—and that's why he is so popular.

England is doing more studying before gobbling up the South African Republic than is her wont when a bit of valuable territory is available for "annexation." But then those dead-shot Dutchmen armed with elephant guns are such horrid beastly Boers, y' know.

If the war is not ended before the first of January, it will be because of the aid and comfort given to the Filipinos through the false report sent by the anti-expansion league, which holds forth in Boston.—Osakis Review.

The public is rapidly getting onto this fact and Atkinson et al. will hear from them.

Moses E. Clapp is mentioned as a candidate for governor in case Judge Collins fails to develope sufficient strength to carry the convention. While such a contigency is hardly to be expected, Gen. Clapp is a clean and able man, and would make a governor to the credit of the state.

Bryan continues to use the same arguments against McKinley's putting down the Philippine insurrection that his father used thirty-five years ago against Lincoln's efforts to suppress the rebellion of the slave states.—Warren Register.

Yes, and thirty-five years hence he will be as well remembered.

Have a care, oh, politicians, or you will have a split in the Republican party of Minnesota, which will prevent success at the polls.—Anoka Union.

You don't mean to tell us, Uncle Granville, that you are going to kick over the traces again just as we were nicely hitched up and gaily trotting along the turnpike to success?

J. Adam Bede makes the following comparisons: "Washington and Aguinaldo! The peerless patriot and the rebel for a rake off. The man who could not tell a lie, and the man that always tells one. The man who struck for liberty, and the man who strikes at liberty. The true hero of a nation, and the false leader of a tribe."

When a tramp strikes you for a "hand out," refer him to the ad—1,000 men wanted—in the Journal.—White River (Wash.) Journal.

For the first time in years the papers are running advertisements for laborers. Was this ever done under a Democratic administration?—Hoquiam Washingtonian.

Evidently Washington has it too. If Bryan really loves the working man, why don't he shut up and let it go at that? But he don't.

New Time Card.

As will be noticed by the Great Northern time card published in another column, the service on this branch has been greatly improved. The train now leaves Crookston at 9 o'clock, and people having business to transact before the land office can usually make connections.

GOT HIS CLEAN CLOTHES.

He Had No Money, but Had Nerve and an Easy Chinaman.

That there are more ways than one to accomplish a thing if a man only has the necessary nerve is illustrated by the experience of a young man. The young man tells the story himself, so there is no betrayal of confidence in printing it.

It seems that he had a big bundle of collars and cuffs and shirts at a Chinese laundry a night or two ago, some articles in which he needed very much. The night was the furthest in the week from his pay day, and he was "broke." Still he had to have clean linen in order to keep an important engagement.

"I didn't know what to do," he said in relating the incident. "I felt sure that the Chinaman wouldn't extend credit to me, for it is a well known thing that Chinese laundrymen never 'trust.' At last I hit upon a scheme. Going to my room, I bundled up all the soiled linen I possessed. Hurrying around to the laundryman's, I produced the bundle.

"'Sixty-five cents!' he exclaimed blandly, holding out his hand for the coin.

"I picked up the clean linen and, depositing the bundle of soiled on his counter, started for the door as if my life depended on my being half a mile away within five minutes.

"'That's all right!' I shouted back in reply. 'Just mark it on that bundle, and I'll pay you for both together!'

"Then I was gone, but not before I caught a glimpse of the laundryman hastily unwrapping the bundle I had left, as if he was anxious to see whether or not the contents were worth the 65 cents I had 'hung him up' for. He was evidently satisfied, for he didn't yell for the police or make any commotion, as I was afraid he might do, and I had all kinds of freshly laundered collars and cuffs and shirts to wear that night. And all on account of a bit of nerve."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

FIGHT FOR YOUR BAGGAGE.

That Seems to Be the Proper Caper on English Railways.

"No American can ever travel on the railways of England in comfort," said the New Yorker, who had crossed the Atlantic a score of times. "In the first place you've got to play hog if you get a compartment by yourself, and in the next it's an even question whether you get your baggage at the end of your journey. Everything is piled upon the platform, and every passenger must pick out his own. If you are two minutes late, there is nothing to prevent somebody claiming your baggage. I never arrived at a terminus without witnessing a big row between passengers, and I never talked with a fellow passenger who had not lost trunk or satchel at some time or other. In three months of traveling about I saw my trunk claimed by others at least 20 times for assaulting the porters. This 'assault' consisted solely in abusing the railroad companies about the baggage system. I finally got so mad about the thing that I spent two days in securing an interview with a railway magnate at his office in London. I straightway asked him if he had never heard of a baggage check.

"'I have, sir,' he replied.

"'Don't you think it a good system?'

"'I do, sir.'

"'Then why don't you adopt it?'

"'Because it's a Yankee idea, sir!'

"I told him it was also a Yankee idea to eat oysters and asked him why he followed suit, and he was as serious as a judge as he replied:

"'Oh, but that's different, you know. You Yankees swallow your oysters whole, while we always halve and sometimes quarter them!'"—Exchange.

A Blind Man's Calculation.

When Gauss became blind, his only amusement consisted in making calculations of a curious and somewhat peculiar nature. These sometimes lasted for days. When more than 80 years old, Gauss computed the amount to which $1 would grow if compounded annually at 4 per cent interest from the time of Adam to the present, assuming this to be 6,000 years. This, if in gold, would make a cubic mass so large that it would take a ray of light traveling almost 2,000 miles a second more than 1,000,000,000 years to journey alongside of it. This mental computation is so startling as to be almost beyond belief, yet the conclusions of this eminent mathematician are correct.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"Poor Excuse," Etc.

"That Slims is the most resourceful fellow you ever saw. His girl has a pretty cousin stopping with her, and he told his particular that he had hired an orchestra to serenade them Thursday night. As he had done nothing of the kind and forgot all about it, and as she had made arrangements to treat the serenaders, Slims caught it hot and heavy when he next called. How do you suppose the rascal squared himself?"

"Haven't the slightest idea."

"Told the girl that the orchestra struck on him because she sang in church and didn't belong to the union."—Detroit Free Press.

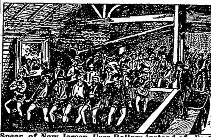
SCENE IN A PORTUGAL WINERY,

In the mountains, at the Quinto do Sexio, Portugal, a famous Port Wine district where the custom of treading the grapes for Port Wine is still in vogue. From ten to a dozen men or women for each gang in turn continue the treading, day and night, during the four or five weeks vintage. Some of the treading vats are large enough for three separate rows of ten men each, who with their white breeches well tucked up, their arms on each other's shoulders, raise and tread their feet alternately, with song and shouts to keep the lazier ones up to the work, and a band with string instruments enlivens the hours.



Speer, of New Jersey, Uses Rollers instead of Feet.

It is from this district the vines were imported over forty years ago that now fill the vineyards of the Speer Wine Co., at Passaic.

At Passaic the same kind of grapes are crushed between large rollers of rubber, revolved by steam. This is the only place in this country where the real genuine Port Wine is made from the Oporto grape—and they are grown right in Speer's Vineyards.

These vineyards extend over ½ of a mile along one of the Main avenues of Passaic, and comprise fifty six acres. The soil being rich in iron makes the wine most valuable for Medical use.

SPEER'S WINES

Are well known to be of the highest character, the oldest and most refined Wines in America, equal if not superior to any wines in the world. They consist of Port, Sherry, Burgundy, Claret, Sauterne Wines, and ★★★ Climax Brandy. Mr. Speer has some Wine in his cellars that he made over thirty eight years ago. All of Speer's Wines and Brandy are very old, rich, well-rounded, soft and delicate. Every family should have a bottle or two of each variety of Speer's Wines and Brandy always in the home, for sickness or family use

Every Sunday the boat will be in Thief River Falls and excursions will be had up the Red Lake or Thief rivers. I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

AN UNCANNY STORY.

ORIGIN OF THE "SOULLESS MONSTER OF FRANKENSTEIN."

The Interesting History of an Old Time Novel That Is Often Alluded to In Literature and at Times Quoted Incorrectly.

Everybody, or nearly everybody, has heard of the novel of "Frankenstein," though it is not probable that many persons read it nowadays. There are so many allusions to it in our literature, however, that one absorbs some sort of a notion of it so that he cannot help knowing that it is a weird and ghastly story about a monster, but whether or not Frankenstein is the monster even well informed people do not always know, showing that they never read the story.

Sometimes we hear allusions to "Frankenstein's monster," as in one of Charles Sumner's orations, where he speaks of the "soulless monster of Frankenstein, the wretched creation of mortal science without God," and sometimes the reference is to Frankenstein only, as if he were the monster. Of course Sumner, who was very particular in his use of figures of speech, was right. When Mrs. Deland, in her fine novel of "Sidney," makes Major Lee say that "Christianity is a Frankenstein," she suffers the major to talk nonsense.

The story of this weird novel and the circumstances under which it came to be written are decidedly interesting and may be told in a few words. The facts are as follows:

In 1816 Mary Godwin, afterward Mrs. Shelley, eloped with Shelley, and they took up their residence near Geneva, in Switzerland. They had Lord Byron for a neighbor, and the three passed much time together. Their conversation frequently ran on the occult and the mysterious, and Byron one day proposed that each should write a ghost story. All agreed and went to work, but it was not long before the two poets gave it up as a hopeless task. They could write poetry, but they could not write stories.

Mary persevered and completed her tale in the spring of 1817. When Byron and Shelley heard it read, they were surprised and delighted. It was bound to be the novel of the century! The name of it was "Frankenstein; or, The Modern Prometheus." It was immediately sent to London for publication and met with a great success.

Frankenstein is a Swiss youth, a student at the University of Ingolstadt, deeply interested in the study of chemistry and natural philosophy. He resolves to penetrate the mysteries of life and death and wrest from nature the secret of creation. After prolonged study he succeeds and discovers how to impart movement and animation to lifeless matter.

He then resolves to mold a colossal man, making him beautiful in form and feature and imbue him with life. He carries on his work in a studio far from the habitations of man, labors long and secretly, and at last the work is completed. There in the great room lies the form and semblance of a human being, perfect in all his proportions. Frankenstein relates the story:

"It was on a dready night in November that I beheld the accomplishment of my toils. With an anxiety that almost amounted to agony I collected the instruments of life around me that I might infuse a spark of being into the lifeless thing that lay at my feet.

"It was already 1 o'clock in the morning. The rain pattered dismally against the window panes, and my candle was nearly burned out, when, by the glimmer of the half extinguished light, I saw the dull yellow eye of the creature open. It breathed hard, and a convulsive motion agitated its limbs."

Slowly the immense creature arose, and the artist, frightened at his own work, fled away. Then he returns to find his creation possessed of life and every attribute of humanity except a soul. Nowhere can it find human sympathy. It is out of harmony with all things about it, and after searching the world in pursuit of happiness it returns again to Frankenstein and demands that he make a companion with whom it can live in sympathy and love.

Frankenstein declines, and thenceforth the monster pursues him with hatred and revenge. It slays his brothers and sister, his friend and his bride. It follows him to Russia, to Siberia and into the Arctic ocean, and there creature and artist perish together. It is a most uncanny story to read o' nights.

Sir Walter Scott reviewed the novel in The Quarterly, but while admitting its power confessed he did not like it: "Our taste and our judgment revolt at this kind of writing." All the critics agreed as to its daring originality.—Chicago Post.

POET BURNS AS A PUGILIST.

A Masonic Souvenir of His Fighting Ability Owned In Chicago.

A part of the Masonic altar that once brought the Scottish bard, Robert Burns, in dire disgrace before his lodge is now in the possession of a Chicago woman, Mrs. W. F. Funch of 4350 Sidney avenue, and is treasured by her as a family heirloom.

Mrs. Funch is by birth a Canadian of Scotch origin. In the days when her grandfather, George MacRae, was young he attended the same lodge as did Bobbie Burns and was one of the "lichts" of the town. One night before lodge meeting the poet and MacRae sat long together

Bousing at the nappy,
And gettin fou and unco happy.

And then arm in arm they sauntered slowly to the room where the Masons were wont to assemble.

All would have gone well had not Burns desired to show his Masonic brethren how good a pugilist he was, and he let go a heavy undercut at MacRae, arousing the latter's fighting blood, and the bout began, which resulted in MacRae being felled to the floor and Bobbie Burns throwing the four legged altar, or stand, at him as he attempted to rise.

Luckily he missed him aim, and the stand struck violently against the wall, shattering completely one of the legs.

At the following meeting the two friends were brought before the order for trial. A fine was imposed on them, and they were made to replace the altar. The broken one was thrown out, and as MacRae went home he carried the stand with him.

It is about two feet high and is of a style out of use today in the Masonic order. It has since been preserved in the family as an heirloom.—Chicago Tribune.

HE WAS A MASON.

Yet the Unfeeling Inner Guard Gave Him the Grand Laugh.

A well known Chicago publisher, speaking of scenes and incidents in that city in the trying days after the big fire, said: "The great fire was a thing of the recent past and the down town portion of the city a scene of the greatest confusion. About 9 o'clock in the evening, while on my way to my home in the west division, I was accosted by a man of respectable appearance, who asked me to give him the price of a lodging.

"'I'm not a beggar,' said he, 'but I'm in hard luck. A man told me that some Masons were in session over this way. If I could find them, I'd be all right.'

"I happen to know a lodgeroom on Canal street, where there is a meeting tonight,' said I. 'Come along, I'll take you there.'

"The place reached, I conducted him up a long flight of stairs and knocked at a door.

"'I'm not a Mason,' said I to a man who seemed to be acting in the capacity of a guard, 'but I've run across one of your fraternity who seems to be in hard luck. I take it you'll be glad to do something for him.'

"Congratulating myself on having done a good act, I pushed my chance acquaintance forward and retreated toward the stairway. A whispered conversation ensued, when the guard exclaimed:

"'You're not a Freemason!'

"'No,' replied my late charge, 'but I'm a stone mason out of a job.'

"The roar of laughter that issued from the half open door made me wish myself a Mason. As it was, I hurriedly quitted the place."—Chicago Chronicle.

He Saw Her Home.

On a rainy afternoon not long ago one of the pretty young matrons of Connecticut avenue left the car from which she had ridden up town and darted through the drizzle toward her home, a few doors from the corner. She had no umbrella. A Willie of the characteristic type, who was riding in the same car, noticed that she had no umbrella. He was right after her with his own umbrella up and extended.

"May I see you home, miss?" he inquired languishingly, stepping up alongside of her.

She turned to him with a dazzling smile.

"Certainly," she replied. "Watch me." And she ran up the steps of her home and entered the vestibule door without looking back.

"The rude thing!" muttered the Willie, blushing to the roots of its wavy hair, as Laura Jean would say, and then it took the next car.—Washington Post.

STATE TIMBER.

No Large Sales Will Be Held This Year.

No large sales of state stumpage will be had this year, probably none at all. That was decided last week, says the Pioneer Press, by a meeting of the state timber board, Gov. Lind, Auditor Dunn and Treasurer Koerner.

The board is especially charged to sell timber liable to waste. The danger from fire this year is at a minimum. It has been a wet season in the critical period and reports from cruisers are that there is no danger. If the reports change sales can be had in threatened districts, but there will be no large auction.

Timber is liable to waste again when adjoining tracts are cut off. The ground dries out, the brush and tops get to be tinder, and the first spark that comes makes a whiff of smoke of the isolated tract left standing. When the land is cut off alongside, the board may as well sell for what it can get.

It happens that the state has usually got the full market price or better. A lumberman may have the stub end of a contract to clean up. It isn't enough to keep a crew busy all winter. To round out the season he will figure pretty close on a quarter or full section of state pine alongside. And if there is another contractor similarly situated on the other side, they will bid between them every cent it is worth.

A good deal of the stumpage, 75 per cent., Auditor Dunn thinks for a guess, that has been sold in recent years is second cutting. It has been gone over once before when lumber was cheaper and there was more first-class stuff, and only the best was taken. Since then market conditions and freights and the demand for box timber have so changed—and the trees have been growing—that there is a profit in going over the same land again. That has been done quite thoroughly by this time, and there is little state timber left this side of the north woods.

Last year the sales were about 45,000,000 feet, of which a good lot was just so much salvage.

On the other hand the state could do better, often 50 per cent. better, if the land was bunched. Nobody will make a separate enterprise of a school section by itself. It must be handled with private land adjoining. That is especially so when the timber is reached by a logging railroad. While the tracks are there and the crews are at work, the stumpage may be worth $4 or $5. The next year when the tracks have been pulled up and the camps abandoned it wouldn't be worth anything, would be absolutely worthless if a fire should run through it.

There may be some scattering sales under such circumstances later in the season, but the general policy will be to hold the stumpage. "It never will be worth a cent less than it is now," says Auditor Dunn, "and it is likely to be worth a lot more. Sales will not be forced in any case, and except where there is danger of waste, the best investment the state can make of its timber is to hold it."

Jewish New Year.

Tuesday, Sept. 5, was Jewish New Year, and as such was celebrated in Thief River Falls by H. Lewin and family. It was the first day of the year 5,660. The Day of Atonen comes on next Thursday, Sept. 14.

THE HESSIAN FLY.

Is Destructive—Burn Stubble and Plow Fields Early.

No small amount of damage is done to wheat fields by the Hessian fly. This was quite unexpected, as it was thought that this insect was "double brooded" and could exist only where winter grain was raised. Dr. Lugger, of this state, in the annual report for the year '95, claims that this insect is "single brooded" in Minnesota. With this knowledge of their life history it is easy to see how this fly can winter in the Red River valley and do its destructive work in our wheat fields. Specimens have been sent to Dr. Lugger. He pronounced them the true Hessian fly. He writes that they infest a very large territory in the Red River valley. He states further that Hessian flies are the greatest pests we have.

There are large numbers of parasites that destroy these insects, but the farmer can not safely depend on them to protect his grain. The remedies are simple, cheap and effective. As soon as harvest and stacking is over, burn the stubble if possible. Then plow early. The insects in the stem of the wheat will thereby be destroyed. Dr. Lugger urges strongly the idea of burning and plowing. Plow early, whether there are Hessian flies in the fields or not. It will have a good effect on weeds and future crop as well as destroy insects.

Lost His Life.

A fatal accident occured late Monday afternoon on the farm of Ernest Cleem, near Argyle, where Mr. Cleem and a crew were threshing wheat. Frank Weller, one of the feeders, climbed upon the separator for some purpose or other while the machinery was in motion. While walking on top of the separator he lost his footing and fell, one leg being caught in the cylinder, which tore and mingled it in a frightful manner before the engine could be brought to a standstill. He was taken to Argyle, where Drs. Belcourt and Taylor amputated the crushed limb. He survived the operation but a short time.—Warren Register.

Fertile Blind Pigs.

Up to this year Fertile has had saloons, and for some time it was the only point between Glyndon and Crookston where liquor could be obtained. This year the town went dry, but according to Detective Sweet, the town is not as dry as it should be. Monday Sweet swore out warrants against five Fertile people, Dr. Nelson, O. E. Holmes, E. Johnson, Knut Knutson and Louis Christianson, and the cases were tried in justice court. The cases against Dr. Nelson and Christianson were dismissed, Holmes and Johnson were fined $40, and Knutson was bound over under $200 bail.—Ada Index.

Shortage in the County Treasury.

Attorney A. R. Holston is securing through the register of deeds of Polk county a list of names of those men who were bondsmen of Mr. Beaudry, late county treasurer. Some time in September Mr. Holston will call a meeting of these bondsmen in order to settle up the matter of the shortage in the county funds. As Mr. Beaudry was treasurer for four terms and there was a shortage in each term and he did not have the same bondsmen during each term, the case is somewhat complicated.—Polk County Journal.

COMPULSORY.

The State Board Says All Should Be Vaccinated.

The state board of health, at a meeting held in July, made a vaccination compulsory with all pupils attending the public schools of the state. Every pupil, before being admitted to the schools in September and thereafter, will be required to furnish a certificate showing that said pupil has been properly vaccinated. Circular letters to this effect have been sent out to the health boards all over the state.

In ordering the school children vaccinated the state board of health is simply taking a precautionary measure to prevent an epidemic of smallpox, as cold weather comes on. Some little apprehension is caused from the fact that some 50 cases have been reported since May.

Some Marshall Co. Vegetables.

The man who says that vegetables do not thrive in the Red river valley is away off. Fred Craig last week brought in from the Craig ranch in the eastern part of the county two cucumbers whose size would remind one of the wonderful products of Kansas that we used to hear so much about years ago. The larger one was about 14 inches long, 11½ inches in circumference and weighed an ounce over four pounds; the other was 15½ inches long and nearly 11 inches in circumference. He also brought in a lot of musk-melons and pumpkins, which were also unusually large. It is true that the growing season in this part of the country is quite short, but the soil is so exceedingly fertile and everything grows so rapidly during the summer that, aside from the products peculiar to tropical regions, there are few agricultural products which may properly be classed among the necessities of life that cannot be raised in the land of No. 1 hard.—Warren Register.

A Better Chance.

The secretary of the Interior has made a ruling that will be of material benefit to the residents of the northwest who take up public lands. It has been the practice, when a special agent has made investigation of alleged fraudulent land entry, location or claim, and reported in favor of the cancellation of the same, to cancel such entry without notice to the party in interest. The rules as revised provide that the claimant shall be given notice of the charges of the agent and be allowed thirty days in which to ask for a hearing, at which the government will assume the burden of proof. Appeals are also allowed as in other ex-parte cases.

Let Them Fight.

A Walker correspondent says: A White Earth Indian has come to town for the purpose of fighting the negro who whipped the soldier some time ago. He is a heavyweight and feels confident of winning the fight. We do not know how long Walker is going to continue to permit these slugging matches, but it begins to look as if someone would call a halt pretty soon, as there are a great many of our people who are opposed to such questionable sports.

Threshing Begun.

Threshing was commenced quite generally throughout this section Monday. P. Wilmes' machine is at present out west of the city threshing on S. Clark's and John Meehan's farms.

A BIG FRAUD.

Dairy Department to Open One of the Biggest Ever.

The inspectors of the state dairy and food commission have placed the wedge that will open one of the biggest frauds in the butter business that has been discovered in years. For some time past commission men have been receiving suspicious butter from country districts, and the matter was reported to the commission last week. A sample was taken to the commission's chemist, and an analysis showed that it was very poor "process" butter, and that it contained preservatives. The result was that a large number of tubs of the stuff were seized in both Minneapolis and St. Paul.

Later it was discovered that the butter contained a mixture manufactured by a Chicago firm, who claim that with its use the weight of butter can be increased one-third. Circulars to that effect have been freely distributed among the country merchants, and apparently a number of them have invested. Members of the commission state that the merchants have evidently been buying the mixture, and using it with their packing stock. It has been ascertained where a large part of the butter seized came from, and it is the intention of the commission to have warrants issued for the arrest of the shippers, as it is a direct violation of the state food laws to manufacture or sell such butter.

Fees Advanced.

The state railroad and warehouse commission met last week in St. Paul and advanced the fees for the inspection of grain 5 cents per car load. The charges, which became effective Sept. 1, are as follows:

For inspection on arrival, 20 cents per car load. For inspection from store, 20 cents per car load to cars. For weighing, 20 cents for each car load. These charges are the only ones effected by the action of the commission, the others remaining the same as last year. Charges for inspection and weighing are by law constituted a lien upon all grains so weighed or inspected, and shall be paid by the warehouseman and added to his charges for storage.

Mill Closed Down.

Owing to the opening of the gates of the dam, the saw mill of the Thief River Falls Lumber company was forced to close down Saturday night and Monday.

The water in the mill pond was lowered to such an extent that logs could not be run up the slip. The exigency of having the slip placed further out into the river had never been anticipated by the lumber company, but the improvement will be made before next season.

Purchased the Retail Yard.

While in the city yesterday, Alvin Robinson, superintendent of the Robinson Lumber company, of Grafton, N. D., closed a deal with the Red Lake Falls Lumber company for their retail yard on the corner of Main and Fourth. The new company will assume control at once, with R. R. Farell as manager.—It is rumored that this company will make other important purchases in the city in the near future.—Red Lake Falls Courier.

A SAD CASE.

Lightning Killed a Boy and Stunned a Man.

The uncertainty of life was vividly pictured last Friday afternoon, when an accident occured at Gentilly, which took the life of a boy and slightly injured a man, rendering him unconscious for several minutes. T. B. Bernou, a lad of thirteen years, was assisting in harvesting, going behind the binder, which was driven by Mr. Charon. Between 4 and 5 o'clock in the afternoon a storm came up, nothing alarming in proportions, but accompanied by some severe lightning. A bolt struck the boy, killing him instantly. Mr. Charon was stunned and remained unconscious for some time.

News reached Crookston late that night and Saturday Coroner Miller went out to the scene of the fatality. The facts in the case were clearly apparent. The case is a very sad one and the sorrowing relatives and friends have the sympathy of everybody in their bereavement.—Crookston Tribune.

Remember This.

"Here," says an exchange, "is something that is worth two dollars to every farmer in the land to know: Sprinkle lime in your stock tank, and not a particle of scum will form on the water. When the lime loses its strength scum begins to form, which may be twice during the season. Wash out the tank and repeat the dose. It is cheap, not only harmless but wholesome, keeps the water sweet and saves the stock."

Ten New and Original Songs Which Can Be Had Free.

What will the great metropolitan papers do next? This is the question some one asks nearly every day. But there is one which leads all others. It has gained the sobriquet of "America's Greatest Newspaper" by just such remarkable pieces of enterprise as the one which has just now attracted the attention of the press all over the country.

Last week the New York Sunday World announced that it would give away an album of new and original music, consisting of ten of the up-to-date class of songs that are now so popular, such as songs of sentiment, "coon" songs, "cakewalks," &c. These ten songs the Sunday World proposes to distribute one each week, with every copy of the Sunday World. When it is considered that the average price of new music, written and composed by popular authors, is from 20 to 45 cents, the unparalled enterprise of The World in giving the song away with a big Sunday newspaper, for which only 5 cents is charged, is apparent. The World requests that we publish the following announcement:

A Music Album free. From Sept. 3 to Nov. 5, the Sunday World will issue weekly a song in sheet music form, with handsome colored cover. The entire set will be mailed, postage paid, for 50c. Remittances received after Sept. 3 will get the back numbers and each new number issued. Besides the song, The World will also send its colored Art Portfolio, which is a marvel of journalism; its Sunday Magazine, which equals the monthly periodicals, and its Comic Weekly, which excels every comic weekly in the United States except two, and in its comic scope equals these two 10-cent publications.

Write a postal card to the Sunday World Music Editor, Pulitzer Building, N. Y., for a list of the songs.

SEPT. WEATHER.

Data of the Month From Records of Weather Office.

The weather bureau has issued a bulletin giving figures about September compiled from the bureau's records for twenty-eight years, and from them an idea of what may be expected in the way of weather this month may be gained. To begin with, the first killing frost may be expected some time this month, as the average date of its appearance is Sept. 20. The mean temperature of the month, during the time covered, is 56 degrees. The warmest September was that of 1897, with an average temperature of 63 degrees, and the coldest was that of 1886, with an average of 51 degrees. The highest temperature ever reached on any September day here was 94 degrees, Sept. 1, 1894, which was as warm a day as may be expected ordinarily any time during the summer. The lowest temperature reached, 30 degrees, was reached four different times, in 1879, 1883, 1886 and 1893.

The month is rather damp, on the whole, the average precipitation for the month being 3.86 inches. The month averages thirteen days with .01 of an inch or more. The greatest amount in any September was 11.52 inches, in 1881, and the least was .32 of an inch, in 1892. The greatest amount in any twenty-four consecutive hours in the month was 2.96 inches, Sept. 24, 1873. The average number of clear and cloudy days are equal, nine each, but there are twelve partly cloudy days. The prevailing winds are from the northeast. The highest velocity reached by the wind was seventy-eight miles an hour from the northeast, Sept. 16, 1881, and that is also the highest velocity ever recorded for this point.

The First Branch.

Red Lake Falls has the first branch of the Social Democratic Party organized in Minnesota, and its charter, signed by no less a parsonage than Eugene V. Debs, hangs in the office of the president, Fredrick Gesswein, where meetings are held every other Sunday. Wm. Randall is the secretary.

The local branch has about twenty members, and its officers say it is growing steadily.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

THE NEWS,

By John W. Eastman.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

The moment party feeling is dropped and evidence takes the place of surmise, Dreyfus' innocence becomes plain.

The prices of lumber and cattle—two of the principal productions of this section—are steadily advancing. Now let the price of wheat go up and we'll all be happy.

A down south philosopher admits that he prefers to live in a small town, where everyone sympathizes with a man in trouble, and, if he has no trouble, they hunt some up for him.

"We prefer to shed blood to save country, rather than to shed country to save blood."

The soldiers of the Thirteenth regiment will be very popular in the Twin Cities as long as the $150,000, which the members will have in their inside pocket, lasts. And then they will have to hustle for themselves.

Not content with the flaying he received from Gen. Shattuck, of Cincinnati, Atkinson has had the temerity to reply that peppery Ohio congressman, with the result that the general passed him a few more hot ones, and, so to speak, rubbed salt into the wounds left by the previous castigation. Of course the only argument which could effectively reach Atkinson through his pachydermous hide would be a double-bitted axe, but we hope that Gen. Shattuck will continue to voice the sentiments of the loyal public and dish out the medicine to Atkinson as often as he applies for his dose. Language has its limitations and cannot adequately express the proper degree of contempt for the treasonable copperhead ring in Boston, but there is a skillful directness, an energetic precision displayed in the Shattuck variety of roast that approaches the ideal and fills the heart of a patriot with a sense of grim satisfaction.

The Minneapolis Journal very aptly says: "The Crookston Times says the Journal cannot blind its readers by telling them that the Democrats formerly cried for high prices and now cry because they have arrived. Then the Times goes on to point out that the kind of high prices it wanted was purely to apply to the products of the soil. The Times talks as if it had in cover a system of political economy, which will keep keep the price of flour down and wheat up, wood high and furniture low, iron ore high and steel implements low, wool expensive and clothing dirt cheap. That is the trouble with the Times and also its party. Both entertain fallacious theories of economics. They want the laws of commerce and trade to alter themselves for the everlasting benefit of one class and the everlasting detriment of another. Happily those laws so operate that the pinches alternate from one foot to the other."

GAGE TALKS SOLID SENSE.

Speaking to the returning volunteers, Gov. Gage struck a chord that rings true, when he said:

"The present war is not a war of conquest, notwithstanding the treasonable utterances of a few carping critics to the contrary. The acquisition of territory is but incidental, the war itself being in defense of American rights, American commerce and Christian civilization. To yield to disorganized bands of half-civilized natives the lands won from the kingdom of Spain by the blood and valor of our soldiers, would be to forever lose our foremost place among the powers as a commercial and civilizing nation.

"The splendid work which you and the soldiers from every part of the Union have accomplished must not be destroyed by a relinquishment of the Philippines. Our nation leads the commercial expansion across the Pacific ocean, and the Philippines, gained by both war and purchase, are necessary for the maintainance of our commerce and the prestige of our flag."

THE LAW'S DELAY.

The greatest lawyers are quickest to see and point out the weaknesses of law as an agency for the furtherance of justice. Joseph H. Choate, ambassador to the court of St. James, has on previous occasions given excellent counsel to the country through the American Bar association, of which he is president. In a letter to the association, at its meeting in Buffalo this year, President Choate calls attention to the need of a reform of great importance to the people. He says:

"The law's delay, which seems to be constantly on the increase, may well engage the earnest attention of the association, and no opportunity should be lost to counteract the inevitable tendency to elaborate procedure and unnecessarily multiplied appeals, which cause a large proportion of these delays."

Such delays, in many instances, practically mean a denial of justice to poorer litigants, who are debarred by the time and the expense involved from securing their rights in the courts, where justice ought to be obtained by all simply and speedily.—Chicago Record.

J. J. Sutton, the well known Argyle attorney, while out hunting last week, accidentally discharged his gun. The charge of shot struck him in the foot, necessitating the amputation of two toes.

Charles J. Winton, D. N. Winton and W. L. Covey, of Wausau, Wis; G. A. Foster, of Merrill, Wis., and L. D. Pugh, of Minneapolis, arrived in the city last week and have been hunting for chickens and ducks in this vicinity. They have been very successful.

A party of Duluth hunters, among whom were Page Morris, congressman from the Sixth district; W. F. Bailey, president of the Minnesota Iron company, A. S. Chuse and Captain Torrey arrived in the city last Friday in Mr. Bailey's private car. Ed. Wilcox has been acting as guide for the company, and they have been hunting on the reservation east of the city. They have been successful in bagging a large number of birds.

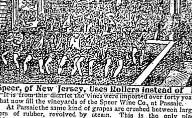
SCENE IN A PORTUGAL WINERY,

In the mountains, at the Quinto do Sexio, Portugal, a famous Port Wine district where the custom of treading the grapes for Port Wine is still in vogue. From ten to a dozen men or women for each gang in turn continue the treading, day and night, during the four or five weeks vintage. Some of the treading vats are large enough for three separate rows of ten men each, who with their white breeches well tucked up, their arms on each other's shoulders, raise and tread their feet alternately, with song and shouts to keep the lazier ones up to the work, and a band with string instruments enlivens the hours.



Speer, of New Jersey, Uses Rollers instead of Feet.

It is from this district the vines were imported over forty years ago that now fill the vineyards of the Speer Wine Co., at Passaic.

At Passaic the same kind of grapes are crushed between large rollers of rubber, revolved by steam. This is the only place in this country where the real genuine Port Wine is made from the Oporto grape—and they are grown right in Speer's Vineyards.

These vineyards extend over ⅓ of a mile along one of the Main avenues of Passaic, and comprise fifty six acres. The soil being rich in iron makes the wine most valuable for Medical use.

SPEER'S WINES

Are well known to be of the highest character; the oldest and most refined Wines in America, equal if not superior to any wines in the world. They consist of Port, Sherry, Burgundy, Claret, Sauterne Wines, and ★★★ Climax Brandy. Mr. Speer has some Wine in his cellars that he made over thirty eight years ago. All of Speer's Wines and Brandy are very old, rich, well rounded, soft and delicate. Every family should have a bottle or two of each variety of Speer's Wines and Brandy always in the home, for sickness or family use

The Cass Lake, Leech Lake and Winnibigoshish Indians have forwarded a petition to the secretary of the interior, asking him to call a delegation to Washington this fall from these reservations. They want to explain their objection to the Nelson law and the treaty by which they ceded away their land.

The editor of the News-Ledger, published at Litchfield, Minn., takes little stock in certain people of that town, who pride themselves in their ancestry. "I don't propose," he says in his paper, "to shake hands with a stranger because his great, great grandfather came over with the Pilgrims. Neither shall I lend $5 to a man because his uncle weighed a ton and shook hands with three presidents. The man who travels on nothing but the record made by some relative half a century since is as likely to land in jail as he is in good society."

A philosopher solilqaizes thus: "A poor man buys a horse from a stranger, which turns out to have been stolen. The rightful owner comes along, proves the property and takes the animal. The poor man has no recourse. Again: A rich man buys a note of hand from a stranger. It turns out that the note was obtained by fraud. The man who made the note comes along, and is compelled to pay the note on the grounds that it is in the hands of an innocent purchaser. Why this difference? Was not the man who bought the horse an innocent purchaser, too?

Accidentally Shot.

John Anderson, a farmer living 20 miles north of Thief River Falls, was accidentally shot through the thigh, close to the body, Monday. The wound was made by a bullet from a large winchester rifle, and it a very serious one. Mr. Anderson and his father were riding in a wagon, and the father, seeing a wolf, reached for the rifle and drew it toward him muzzle first. Something caught the trigger and the gun was discharged, striking the son as above stated. It is not thought that Anderson will recover.

After a Horse Thief.

Sheriff Sampson was in the city Tuesday looking for a horse thief, who had stolen a horse from the barn of Henry Osterlo, of Red Lake Falls, that morning. The animal was tracked out of Red Lake Falls on the road leading north, but the thief can not be found. It was a large work horse, weighing about 1,400 pounds.

New Rules.

The Great Northern has issued a demurrage circular, giving rules reguating the movement of cars in anticipation of fall business. The new rules went into effect on Sept. 1, when a charge of $2 per car, whether system or foreign, will be made for each day or fraction of a day over the twenty-four hours allowed for loading. The rule applies to all stations except in the territory of the Terminal Dispatch association. All unfilled orders for cars expire on Saturday of each week and must be renewed.

THE MARKETS

The Latest Quotations.

Very few farmers have been in the city lately, most of them having a large amount of work to do upon their farms, and consequently trade in town has been very dull. Little, if any, wheat is being marketed, and although the price at present is very low, the indications are that there will be a steady advance, as the wheat crop in the United States this year is much smaller than that of the previous year. Beef and hogs continue to advance in the markets of the world. Oats is at present very scarce in Thief River Falls, and although this will not be the case in a few weeks, still the demand will probably be greater than the supply, owing to the fact that a large quantity will be shipped into the woods. The local yield of potatoes has been very good, and the price will probably be about 25c a bushel this fall. Hay will be in demand, and the price of wood will be about the same as usual. The Affairs of Europe are faithfully portrayed in the original and exclusive cable dispatches which THE CHICAGO RECORD prints daily from the leading capitals of the old world. This magnificent special service is in process of being greatly extended so as to include every important city in Europe; and it is supplemented by the full regular cable service of The Associated Press.

I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

WANTED.—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. R·I·P·A·N·S, 10 for 5 cents or twelve packets for [illegible] cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

FUN FOR THE BIRD.

How a Raven Tormented and Punished a Greedy Pug Dog.

The greediest and most conceited pug that ever lived, according to his owner, was Suto. The sight of anything eating (except himself) was agony to him. A large raven was kept in a cage in the garden of Suto's owner—a raven gifted with sardonic cunning and love of mischief. The pug was the butt of his malicious humor.

Daily at 3 o'clock the raven was given a lump of steak, and Suto would always be hovering about at the time—he hovered near everything eatable. The raven knew his shameful greediness and made fine sport of it. At first Suto, though in torments of gluttony, would feign indifference. The raven would put the stake close against the wires, and Suto's agony would get past bearing. Then the raven retired with a chuckle. At this all Suto's self control was gone, and he plunged at the wires in a mad attempt to snatch the meat.

Of course the thing was hopeless; his blunt nose could never penetrate the wire netting. But the raven's beak could. Instantly the bird would swoop on him and drive in one on that greedy pug's nose. With that Suto would hurl himself furiously at the raven—hopelessly ever, for he could never touch the tormentor. The tormentor, in fact, danced and jumped in an ecstasy of delight, driving in dig after dig at the dog's unhappy countenance and getting well home at every dig, till at last poor Suto retired, pecked and beaten. Then the raven, happy and content, his appetite well whetted, swallowed his steak at one gulp, while Suto hid behind a tree or anything else opaque, that he might not have the pain of witnessing the operation. Day after day the performance was repeated in every detail, and the dog must have known what would happen every time, but his master passion of gluttony was too strong for him—he could not keep his nose away from that meat.—Chicago News.

CURED BY LEOPARDS.

The Dying Man Suddenly Recovered His Health and Speed.

In "Lumsden of the Guides" there is an interesting story, says the London Chronicle, of the rescue by Lieutenant Peyton of her majesty's Eighty-seventh of a young Pathan who had fallen into the Kabul river. The lad's father, in his gratitude, came down from his home in Independent Territory, and as a thank offering presented Peyton with two young leopard cubs. Peyton, being an executive engineer and constantly on the move, could make no home for them and gave them to Lumsden, who himself told me what follows, and it seems to me worth preserving, as leopards seldom have an opportunity of assisting in a criminal investigation. The animals were too young to be dangerous and were allowed their liberty.

One day Lumsden was holding his court in Yusufzai, when in the middle of a case there was an uproar, and the two sides in an affray case poured into the court, and, as always happens, each side accused the other of being entirely in fault. One party, to improve its case, brought a dying man on a native bed. A blood stained sheet was removed, showing a much belabored man, who appeared to be at the last gasp. Lumsden had the bed put down in court and went on with the interrupted case. Just then the young leopards sauntered in, probably attracted by the scent of blood, and, moving gently around the court, approached the bed and began sniffing at the wounded man, who, miraculously recovered, jumped from the bed and fled rapidly.

Made For the Place.

While traveling in a coal mine district, says Dr. Cuyler, I noticed how very dingy the town appeared. The coal dust seemed to blacken buildings, trees, shrubs, everything, but as a foreman and I were walking near the mines I noticed a beautiful white flower. Its petals were as pure as if it were blooming in a daisy field.

"What care the owner of this plant must take of it," said I, "to keep it so free from dust and dirt!"

"See here," said the foreman, and taking up a handful of coal dust threw it over the flower. It immediately fell off and left the flower as stainless as before.

"It has an enamel," the foreman explained, "which prevents any dust from clinging to it. I think it must have been created for just such a place."

Legends of the Apple.

The apple enters more largely into folklore and legend than almost any other fruit. In England there was of old a peculiar dance in honor of the apple tree, and various songs were sung and bowls of cider emptied to secure a good apple harvest from the fates. In Germany the girls "snap apple seeds" on New Year's eve to see from which direction a lover is coming. In Austria a girl cuts an apple in two at one blow and counts the seeds. If there are as many in one half as in the other, she will marry. If they are odd, she will be an old maid. If a seed is cut in two, she will quarrel with her husband and be separated from him.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Not a Real Count.

Myrtle—Why do you think the count is a fraud?

Alice—Because of the way he acted when I showed him the paper containing an account of papa's failure.

Myrtle—What did he do? Break the engagement?

Alice—No. He threw his arms around me and said, "Never mind, darling; you and I can be happy as long as we are left to each other, no matter whether we have money or not."—Chicago Times-Herald.

THE INTERMEZZO.

The light shone soft on you, my own,
With your violin pressed to your chin,
And as the room was filled with each throbbing tone
The angels seemed crowding in
The intermezzo, so soft and sweet
That it drew from my eyes the tears.
Ah, the echo still, so faint and fleet,
I catch o'er the space of years.

You wore a gown so pure and white,
At your throat a glimpse of blue,
And the stars outside, the eyes of night,
Seemed looking in at you.
Your arm moved slowly up and down
As each throbbing string you pressed,
And I envied so that violin brown
Its precious place of rest.

Each note was played so pure, so true,
But full of sorrow, great and wild,
And, pray, what grief had come to you,
Then scarcely more than a little child?
'Twas the mystic grief that music brings
From a violin's wail to an organ's roll;
'Twas that which trembled on those strings
And passed from them to my list'ning soul.

I am carried back to that night, when I hear
The "Ave Maria," so sweet and slow,
And my heart beats fast for you, my dear,
As it did that night, so long ago.

TEACHING DOGS TRICKS.

One That Would Be Amusing if Tried Upon Yourself.

Although it is by no means an uncommon thing to see dogs throw somersault after somersault in stage performances, it is a somewhat remarkable fact that few people know how such animals can be taught such a difficult feat.

Ask a friend how he thinks a dog can be initiated into the mysteries of somersault throwing, and you will receive some very curious suggestions.

As there is more than one way of cooking a goose, so there is more than one method of teaching a dog to throw somersets. But the most practical and thorough manner is to fasten a cord around the body of the animal, close to the fore legs, and two people should hold the ends of the cord on either side of the unfortunate dog. A third party, armed with a stout rope, takes a position immediately in front of the canine acrobat and, with a measured and masterly stroke, flogs the floor at close quarters to the dog's nose.

At each stroke of the rope the dog springs backward, and that movement is the trainer's golden opportunity. As the dog springs backward the rope passing under its body is jerked upward, and, although the first few attempts may prove futile, the somerset is acquired in course of time. An intelligent dog soon sickens of this order of things and throws somersets without the assistance of ropes.

For the sake of your dog in particular and your patience and future welfare in general, we do not commend you to teaching your dog to turn somersets. If, however, you think there is no harm in it, just get a few friends to put you through the exercise and see how you like it. It will prove immensely amusing—for your friends.—Exchange.

Boils.

A boil is due to the action of a microbe called a pus coccus. This is almost always present in the skin, but does no harm while the system can combat the necessary conditions of its growth and multiplication.

Sufferers from boils are usually in poor health. They are pale, pasty looking, emaciated, with a poor appetite and bad digestion. People say their blood is too thin. Others, however, may be in apparently perfect health, yet hardly is one boil over before another comes. Of these persons it is said that their blood is too rich.

Both these popular terms are nearly expressive of the true condition. In the first case the tissues are not well nourished and so cannot resist the microbe. In the second case the tissues are nourished, but are poisoned by excess of waste material in the blood, caused by the taking of more food than the body can properly dispose of.—Youth's Companion.

Decline and Fall of Corn Bread.

It seems to us that our own people are not the great corn bread eaters they used to be. Batter or egg and certain cakes are still in vogue, but the honest and homely corn pone, the corn dodger and the hoecake are not as popular as they used to be. As for the ash cake, the cooking of it has become a lost art almost.

We charge this change, in part at least, to the introduction, even in most country homes, of the modern cooking stove and range. It takes a great big open fireplace and a southern negress, with a red bandanna on her head, to make prime corn bread. Nor will any meal but water ground meal serve the best purpose. Steam power meal is tabooed.—Richmond Dispatch.

Hunting a Celebrity.

"So you've traveled in the south of Europe?" said the young woman.

"Yes," answered Derringer Dan.

"Did you see Monte Carlo?"

"No; I asked fur him, but he didn't show up. And, what's more, there wasn't a game of monte in the whole place. I don't believe there is any such person."—Washington Star.

It Has Been Noticed.

"There's a rather queer thing that I have noticed about people who follow the profession of letters."

"What's that?"

"The man who writes just to keep the pot boiling is not the one who produces the hottest stuff."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Dean Swift, when invited to dinner by his friend, Lord Bolingbroke, was shown the dinner bill as an inducement to accept and replied, "A fig for your bill of fare; show me your bill of company."

Great souls are not those who have fewer passions and more virtues than the common, but those only who have greater designs.—La Rochefoucauld.

VOL. XVI. NO. 36. THIEF RIVER FALLS, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, SEPT. 14, 1899. TERMS: $1.50 IN ADVANCE

A MAMMOTH ONE.

A Big Excursion to the Proposed National Park.

The committee for the expedition to the headwaters of the Mississippi, appointed by the Minnesota National Park and Forestry association last month, held an important meeting in Chicago last week. The meeting was largely attended. It authorized an invitation to the president and each member of his cabinet and to each senator and representative-elect to the congress to meet in December to be sent.

The committee also authorized members of the committee on invitation from Minnesota to take charge of the matter of inviting those representing the state government of Minnesota to join the expedition.

It was arranged that the expedition leave Chicago on the night of Sept. 29, arriving in St. Paul on the next morning and during that day and night to be the guests of the Commercial club and other organizations of St. Paul; leaving St. Paul that night and arriving at the headwaters of the Mississippi, in Northern Minnesota, next morning, where the party will spend several days in exploring, hunting and fishing in that new region, which has just been opened by rail. The expedition will return by the way of Duluth, where it will be entertained by the citizens, thence to Minneapolis, where the prominent social and business organizations of Minneapolis will entertain the party at a banquet. From there the party will return by a special train to Chicago. Between Chicago, St. Paul and Minneapolis the party will be cared for by the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy. From St. Paul through the wilderness on the exploring, hunting and fishing trip the Great Northern will furnish dining and sleeping cars, etc. The governor of Minnesota has ordered tents and other camping facilities.

St. Hilaire Notes.

From the Spectator.

John Morgan, of the firm of Morgan & Brink, left Saturday for St. Paul to purchase new fixtures for their saloon at Thief River Falls.

P. G. Paradis returned Friday from Mt. Clemens, Mich., where he has been for the past thirty days taking treatment. He reduced his weight twenty-one pounds in that time and speaks well of the place and promises to make the trip again.

Dr. Francis spent yesterday in St. Hilaire and was kept busy shaking hands with his old friends who were glad to see him back, even for so short a stay. The genial doctor comes down but seldom, being obliged to keep close at home to take care of his practice.

A party of boys and girls had a picnic and supper across the river Tuesday afternoon. A very good time was enjoyed by the young folks, and the mosquitoes were given the benefit of a jolly camp fire. Misses Quande and Nelson came down from Thief River Falls on bicycles to enjoy and assist in the occasion.

The Stranahan boys and several families of prairie chickens have been holding a reunion at the Stranahan home since Friday last. Messrs. Levi from Thief River Falls, Will from Duluth, and Elmer from Fargo, the latter accompanied by his wife, have all again returned to their homes, to the regret of their friends and to the relief of the surviving prairie fowl.

THIEVISH INDIANS.

The Warren Register last week contained the following item, which is of local interest:

"The camping party composed of Rev. and Mrs. T. F. M. Clark, Mrs. J. P. Easton and three children, Mrs. T. Morck, Misses Helen Russel, Irene Jurrue and Louise Peck, of this city, and Mr. John Guise, of Long Lake, returned Saturday from a two weeks' outing in the reservation. From Thief River Falls to the Indian agency they made their trip on a steamboat that plies between those points. They expected to make the return trip by the boat early last week, but were delayed by the great number of logs in the river. While the party were awaiting the departure of the boat, the Indians made stealthy raids upon their supplies, and so reduced their stock of provisions that they were compelled to subsist on pretty short commons for a day or two. When they finally reached Thief River Falls they were a tired and hungry crowd, and thoroughly disgusted with the thieving propensities of the government's red-skinned wards. Mrs. Easton was to read a paper at the W. C. T. U. state convention at Crookston last week, but her enforced stay at the agency made it impossible for her to attend that gathering."

Dirt in Wheat.

The Duluth Board of Trade has sent out the following circular for the benefit of the farmer:

The farmers of the Northwest little realize the enormous sums of money contributed to the yearly railroad receipts by shipping dirty wheat and other dirty grains to market.

It would seem that if they did, steps would be taken to clean grain at the farm, and even though it were not possible to feed the foul seeds, it would appear as though it would pay to clean the grain and burn the screenings.

During the year ending Aug. 31, there were received at Duluth 3,673,000 bushels of wheat dirt and 670,000 bushels of flax dirt, at which, on an average freight rate of 14c per 100 lbs., there was paid in freight $360,000.00.

More than two-thirds of this stuff was burned here to get rid of it; the balance, about 2,000 cars, or 40,000 tons, was sold to feeders as screenings, netting, about $150,000.

Here is a value of $500,000 yearly contributed by the country to waste. Probably the figures for Minneapolis would run up as much more.

$1,000,000 seems too large a sum to be wasted in that way.

Palaces on Wheels.

The Burlington's new Minneapolis and St. Paul-Chicago and St. Louis Train consists of, a buffet library car, a combination sleeping car, a standard sleeping car, compartment sleeping car, a dining car, a reclining chair car, a day coach (high back seats.)

The most costly, beautiful, luxurious cars on earth. Steam heated; Electric lighted; Wide Vestibuled. No extra fares.

GOES TO BEMIDJI.

Joseph Markham to Build a Hotel at that Place.

J. M. Markham left last week, says the St. Hilaire Spectator, for Bemidji, where he has decided to build a large and commodious hotel. The people of that thriving village have reached out—offered good inducements and inside of two months they will have a first-class hotel, with all modern conveniences. Bemidji has become a noted summer resort and no doubt a first-class hotel will be a paying investment.

M. McAudress, a confectionery dealer in St. Hilaire, has leased the Markham hotel and took possession the first of the week.

LEASED POWER

And Will Operate a Hardwood Saw Mill.

John Anderson and Robert Kittelson last week leased of Carl Kretzschmar the saw mill formerly operated by A. Wright and power for the same. It is for a term of five years, with the privilege of extending it to ten.

The new proprietors intend to operate a hardwood saw mill, and left last week for the Red lake to make arrangements for the cutting of some birch and oak logs. They will raft the timber down river.

His Questions Answered.

Five weeks since the publisher of this paper made several timely suggestions as to reform and retrenchment in the management of city affairs, which met with the hearty approval of the progressive business element. Mr. P. O. Bergh, of the Burkee-Bergh-Anderson triumvirate, which is at present running the city, seems to have dissented from these opinions, and, in the columns of another paper, attempted to pass the important issue by making mysterious hints of charges against the writer. Just why these sensible suggestions annoyed Mr. Bergh does not appear. He does not try to controvert them, but simply begs the question. Possibly he begrudges the $25 per annum salary as councilman. If so, plenty of good citizens can be found in the First ward who will be willing to sacrifice that amount to the public welfare and assume the enormous duties of his office. We have had previous experience with the class of office holders who prefer to throw out mysterious hints then to "consider the profound logic" of a plain proposition to save the people's money. And so the matter was ignored. Mr. Bergh evidently misconstrued our attitude into fear of publicity, and, last week, again took occasion to make public one of his remarkable communications. We will pass over the manner in which the English language was mangled by the honorable gentleman in his attempts to make himself understood, (although in these days of free education it was little less than criminal) and dispose briefly of the questions asked.

No, the publisher did not take an agreement to a brother printer to sign, binding them mutually to charge nearly double rates for city printing, and Mr. Bergh knows it. No, the publisher did not offer to support Van R. Brown in the last campaign for $50, or to remain neutral for $25, and Mr. Bergh knows it. Furthermore, if he pretends to believe any such things, let him put his ideas in the form of charges, not questions, and we will take pleasure in taking the matter up with him through the courts.

We do not intend to indulge in a wordy war from week to week with the gentleman, but if he does not wish to stand convicted as a political fakir, let him follow the above suggestion. We refuse to pursue the personal quarrel, which he seeks to fasten upon us, farther editorially, but will, in spite of the city hall ring, keep our eyes on the important issue and continue to labor for the good of the whole city, Mr. Bergh to the contrary notwithstanding. And this is not poetry.

A GOOD ADVICE

From Two Different and Reliable Sources.

The outlook indicates that wheat will be higher in a few months, and we hope the farmers will not rush the market and beat themselves. If the whole output of any manufactured product were thrown upon the market in a single season of the year, such action would depress the price of that product. And so with wheat. Its sale should be gradual throughout the year, in order to maintain a normal price. And with hail and short crops in various places, the normal price should be good. So don't hurry to market unless you have to. And with cheap money it might be better to borrow for a while than to rush.—Bede's Budget.

The outlook indicates that wheat will be higher in a few months. If farmers can hold on, a waiting game this year will more than likely prove most profitable. However, short the crop, if the market becomes congested for a short time, a lower price is sure to prevail. If wheat is housed for a while and marketed gradually later a higher price will unmistakably be the result, for with hail and short crops in many places, the normal price this year should be good. So don't hurry to market unless you have to.—Renville Star-Farmer.

The Theatre From the Inside.

That there are five thousand theatres in America and that one million and a half people attend them each week-day night, spending seventy millions of dollars a year on theatre-going, are the surprising facts with which Mr. Franklin Fyles, the dramatic editor of the New York Sun, will open an important series in The Ladies' Home Journal. The series will be called "The Theatre and its People," and will run through seven numbers of the magazine, lavishly illustrated with pictures made by twelve different artists. The articles will treat of every phase of the theatre, the play and the actor, from the inside, and will tell how the theatre is managed; the actual money which plays have made; how an actor is trained and what the actors are actually paid; how a play is written and what the authors receive; how a play is rehearsed; the first night of a play; how he actresses "make up" and what they use; and in a minute way the two last articles will show what goes on behind the scenes on the stage during a performance. It is a curious fact that this will be the first time that the theatre and the actor have ever been exhaustively treated in a magazine, and that there is no book on the subject in existence.

Threshing Machine Accident.

While working around a threshing machine on the Pouliot farm, south of the city, Monday, Carl Kruse met with a serious accident. A bur on the cylinder shaft caught in his coat and he was whirled around the pulley several times before the machine could be stopped. His shoulder blade was crushed between the drive belt and pulley; the collar bone was also broken, besides receiving numerous other bruises. Dr. Lemieux attended the sufferer and at last reports he was doing as well as could be expected.—Red Lake Falls Courier.

MINN. FARMING.

A Writer to St. Paul Dispatch Tells About It.

The farmers of Minnesota have long since learned the lesson of profit in diversified farming, and each year finds them less dependent on the wheat crop than did its predecessor. Wheat is a good crop, an easily produced crop, and a profitable crop—when you get it. Unfortunately, however, it is not a reliable crop, either as to the certainty of results or the price obtainable. The extent of the crop must depend almost solely upon weather conditions, while the price is often fixed, not by the proper law of supply and demand, but by manipulators in the stock market and dealers in "futures." Mainly for these reasons the farmers of Minnesota are raising less wheat than formerly, as compared to other products, and the stock and dairy farm is taking the place of the bonanza farm.

It is only necessary for one to make the rounds of the agricultural building at the state fair for one to be shown the vast agricultural resources of Minnesota. Anything that will grow in any soil in a northern climate will grow in Minnesota, and grow, too, in such abundance as to make its production profitable. The display of fruits, for instance, shows that fruit growing, contrary to all preconceived ideas, can be carried on profitably here. With the prices now obtainable, and with the specimens of live stock on exhibition, it is clear that the man who has a well equipped Minnesota stock farm has a better fortune than he who owns a Klondike gold mine. And even the humble, clucking hen must not be ignored. She produced $10,000,000 of the wealth of the state last year.

But the dairy is Minnesota's best property today. With the best butter, bringing 25 cents a pound—and Minnesota butter is always the best—a small farm, well stocked, with a little patch of meadow land, is a fortune for its owner, and one which is made with little labor and almost no investment of capital.

And the area of Minnesota's productiveness is increasing, too. As the timber is removed from the former great pine belt, the land denuded of its natural shelter becomes perpetually productive, and is being settled up by an industrious class of farmers, who will in time make it as rich and fruitful as the rolling prairies and rich valleys of the southern counties.

A $15,000 Personal Injury Suit.

An action has been begun in the district court by Albert Gray, of this city, against the Red Lake Falls Lumber Co. for $15,000 damages for personal injury received in January, 1898, while in the employ of that company in a camp on Black Duck. Gray claims that at one time mentioned he was employed as a deck loader under A. J. Crawford, one of the company's foremen, and that he declined to work with the man whose business it was to send the logs up to him, on account of his lack of knowledge of the work, and that Crawford insisted that he continue, which he did until a log was sent up in such a manner that it swung when it struck the load, caught his foot and crushed it to such an extent that amputation at the instep was necessary.

Halvor Steenerson, of Crookston, will represent Mr. Gray, and F. A. Grady, of this city, will appear for the mill company. The case will be tried here during the October term.—Red Lake Falls Courier.

By John W. Eastman.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

The Cass Lake Times says Bryan is not so popular with rank and file of the Populist party since he has been endorsed by the gold wing of the Democratic party.

Polk county's exhibit of agricultural products at the state fair has been deemed so good, that it will be taken to the world's fair at Paris by the United States government.

The St. Paul Globe, in its newly awakened thirst for Liberty, with a big L, has thrown a protecting arm about the Boer republic—and the baffled British lion is robbed of its prey.

The Dreyfus trial is done, the Thirteenth regiment will soon be only history, but the Boer-British argument promises to furnish a daily scare-head for the metropolitan press for some time to come.

Tom Lowry says he must have the president at Minneapolis when the 13th returns. Tom has a habit of getting what he goes after, and if he goes after Mr. McKinley, we should judge that McKinley is "it."

The spectacle of five men locking themselves up in a Paris club house and successfully resisting arrest for three weeks seems highludicrous to the American public. The average municipal policeman may have a hard time trying to shoot a mad dog, but we can, with the naked eye, see the finish of such an attempt to defy the authorities in any American city.

Although Comrade Lind did not get there in time to to welcome the returning volunteers, our brave boys, heroes that they are, managed to worry along somehow until his arrival. In the old days, before they were heroes, when they were only tin soldiers in fact, the governor with his glittering retinue of generals and colonels and things was their regular annual source of merriment, so that now, after a twelvemonth of hardships and privation, it would be a pity to deprive the boys of their harmless little amusements.

Editor Caswell, of the Anoka Herald, had the temerity to advocate the candidacy of Robt. G. Evans for the gubernatorial nomination without taking the precaution to consult the little clique of Washington politicians, who think they are the arbitors of Republican destiny in Minnesota. The Northfield News, personal organ of Joel P. Heatwole, promptly called down the rash young man and informed him that the candidate is already selected—and Evans is not it. No doubt the Herald will be more careful in future, but why keep the rest of us in suspense, Joel? Have pity on the poor fellows painfully roosting on the fence and let us into the secret. We yearn to board the band wagon.

J. S. Stadvold is highly pleased over the result of an operation performed today by Dr. Morley, the eye specialist, upon his 6-year-old son, to correct a case of strabismus or cross eye. The little fellow has been afflicted since early childhood, as the result of a blow received while playing, and the operation proved thoroughly successful.—Crookston Times, Sept. 8.

The Beltrami County News is authority for the following: "Dr. J. H. Thomas, the dentist, is clearing ground for the erection of a handsome cottage on the lake front, and will make his permanent home here."

SUDDEN DEATH.

Gilbert Gilbertson Died Tuesday Evening.

The sudden death of Street Commissioner Gilbert Gilbertson, which occured Tuesday night, was a shock to the citizens of this town. He died in the card room in the rear of Phil Zeh's saloon, alone and apparently without pain.

Mr. Gilbertson had been drinking heavily all day, and to several friends had complained of not feeling well. He slept all the afternoon on the floor in the rear of Phil Zeh's saloon, waking up at about 6 o'clock in the evening. He took several drinks and some friends tried to induce him to go home, but he refused and went back in the card room, where he again laid upon the floor—going into a sleep from which he did not awake. At about 11:30 in the evening, when the bar tender, Paul Holzknecht, was getting ready to close up, he went into the room and endeavored to awaken Gilbertson. It was then discovered that the man was dying. Chief Benzie, who was present, felt of his pulse, and states that it was beating very faintly. Dr. Grundy was summoned at once, but, when he arrived, Gilbertson was dead. Mr. Gilbertson evidently died without a struggle. No one in the saloon at any time during the evening heard any noise in the room. When dead he was lying on his back, a position in which he had been all the evening. The remains were taken to the undertakers that evening. Mr. Gilbertson was a man who seldom entered a saloon, and was very temperate in his habits. This fact caused the shock to his friends to be all the greater.

The county attorney and coroner have been summoned and an inquest will be held over the remains of the dead man this forenoon. The funeral will be held Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Gilbertson and family will have the sincere sympathy of all the citizens of Thief River Falls in their sad bereavement.

WHERE IS HE?

Lawrence Cunningham Has Been Lost Since Saturday.

Where is Lawrence Cunningham?

The above interrogation has been asked by a number of Thief River Falls citizens, but has not yet been satisfactorily answered. The boy, who is the nine-year-old son of Mrs. Jennie Cunningham, has been missing since last Saturday afternoon at four o'clock. He was last seen by his older brother, who left him sitting upon the bank of the Red Lake river, near the landing of the steamer Ethel, and since that time no resident of Thief River Falls knows of his whereabouts. It was at first thought the lad had stolen aboard one of the boats leaving for the Red lake that afternoon, but this has proven to be untrue. The river has been dragged without avail, although it is generally believed that he has been drowned. Should this be the case, the body will probably be found floating in the river in a few days.

The report was in circulation yesterday that the boy was living with some Indians about four miles north of town, but this story is not believed to be reliable. Mrs. Cunningham, the boy's mother, is distracted by the absence of her son.

A Queer Payment.

A Yorkshire clergyman married a couple in his church recently, and after he had pronounced them man and wife the groom took him to one side and asked what the damage was.

The parson told him that there was no fixed amount. He might give whatever he chose.

"Parson," said he, "I've got five greyhound pups at home, for which I am asking a sovereign apiece, and I'll let you have one for half a sov."

Of course the clergyman declined so ridiculous a fee, as he had no use for a greyhound pup.

When he got home he must have found his wife better than expected, for he sent the parson one of the pups, accompanied with a letter saying that he was so happy with Maria that he would give him a dog for nothing.—Spare Moments.

Wine Making in Portugal.

In great emergency when all the men are demanded in the vineyards, women are called to assist in wine treading. Our correspondent saw young women wearing their own garments which they skilfully gather up around them until they assume the biggest and most abbreviated of Dutchman's "britchen" costumes, while in the winery.

THIS IS A SCENE IN THE VILLAGE OF QUINTAS, PORTUGAL.

An improved method of mashing by machinery is adopted At the Speer Oporto Grape Vineyards, PASSAIC, N. J. by which a barrel of grapes a minute is dumped in the hopper, that feed two large rubber rollers, between which the grapes are crushed.

The Port Wine from Speer's Vineyards beats the world for its valuable medicinal qualities. None put on the market now, until nine years old. Weakly persons, Invalids, Females, and Aged persons, should always have a bottle in the house. If properly used it will restore health and prolong life. It is by all odds the Wine for weddings, social entertainment and family use.

are faithfully portrayed in the original and exclusive cable dispatches which THE CHICAGO RECORD prints daily from the leading capitals of the old world. This magnificent special service is in process of being greatly extended so as to include every important city in Europe; and it is supplemented by the full regular cable service of The Associated Press.

I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

WANTED.—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. R·I·P·A·N·S, 10 for 5 cents or twelve packets for 48 cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

HUMOR

A BIT ABSENTMINDED.

A Little Yarn About a Very Forgetful Man.

There have been a great many stories about absentminded men, where one forgets his house address, another what business he is in and where another has to refer to the mark on his handkerchief before he can remember his own name.

There is a farmer named Rogers in the north who possessed a Jersey cow which he used to drive, morning and evening, to and from the pasture, not far from his home.

One morning, as one of his neighbors was passing along the road, he met Mr. Rogers walking in the middle of the lane, his mind apparently engrossed with some weighty question. The neighbor called out:

"Good morning, Mr. Rogers. Where are you going?"

"Why," said Mr. Rogers, in a surprised way, "I'm driving the cow to pasture." And he waved his hand toward where the cow ought to have been.

"Well, where is the cow?" asked his friend.

"I suppose I forgot to let her out of the barn," answered Mr. Rogers humbly, as he realized his position. And he had.—Columbian.

FOUND AT LAST.

Lawrence Cunningham's Body Found Floating.

While at work upon the river last Friday forenoon at about 11:30, some men found the body of Lawrence Cunningham floating in the river near the city dock. It was in a very bad state—decomposed almost beyond recognition. The coroner was summoned from Red Lake Falls and it was decided that an inquest was unnecessary. The body was burried last Saturday afternoon.

Just how or where the young boy fell into the river will probably never be known. There were a large number of men at work all along the river the afternoon he is supposed to have been drowned, and it seems strange that no one saw him fall in or heard his screams.

A Good Showing.

County Supt. Jeffers has just completed his annual report to the state superintendent and a few figures from it show a considerable increase, not only in the population of the county, but in financial condition as well.

The total number of scholars enrolled during the year was 3,220 against 2,981 last year. 2,693 of these will share in the public school fund, which, according to the state auditor's report, will be the largest for years.

The aggregate indebtedness of the districts was decreased over $5,000 during the year while the assets of the county schools have increased nearly $10,000.

Five new districts have been added, making a total of 74. The total number of male teachers in the county is 23. There are also 58 ladies who follow the teaching profession, seven of whom were Normal graduates. The average wages for males was $38.60 per month, and for females, $33.00 per month.

There was an average of 5.93 months of school held last year, which will be increased next year to 6.46.

The sum of $22,735 was paid for teachers' salaries during the year and the cash balance of the districts was over $10,000.—Red Lake Falls Courier.

Defends His Countrymen.

Editor NEWS: Last week the Press, in its report of the death of Gilbert Gilbertson, went out of its way to insult the Scandinavians, and I would like to know the reason why. In its report it said:

"He (Mr. Gilbertson meaning) * * (like all foreigners, SCANDINAVIANS ESPECIALLY, took a social glass occassionally."

Thus does he wish to create the impression that the Scandinavians are more adicted to the use of intoxicating liquors than any other class of people. This is a lie and it can be proven. Statistics show that as a class the Scandinavians are the most temperate people in the world.

A SCANDINAVIAN.

Good Shooting.

George Ralph has just returned from a surveying trip up to Thief lake, about thirty-five miles north of Thief River Falls. He says that that is the place at which to shoot ducks, geese, etc.; few moose, however, are found in that vicinity. It has been very dry up there, it being possible now even to walk through the swamps without danger of getting wet. While in that region, Mr. Ralph collected some samples of cranberry bushes, which he will send to the Grand Rapids Michigan, nursery. — Crookston Journal.

NATURAL CAUSES.

The Death Caused by Congestion of the Brain.

The verdict of the jury in the inquest over the remains of the late Gilbertson, held last Thursday afternoon, was as follows:

"Paralysis of the heart or apoplexy, with no blame attached to any party or persons."

This verdict was rendered based on testimony given by two local doctors. They did not dissect the body, and of course their testimony was a matter of conjecture. At the request of the deceased's wife a Crookston doctor made a postmortem examination Friday forenoon and found that death was caused by congestion of the brain, caused by alcohol. The funeral was held Friday afternoon.

Avoids Leaks.

The farmer who is most successful in making money off his farm is the man who looks out for little things as well as large things. Some of the most well-to-do farmers attribute their success quite as much to what they have saved as to what they have made in special ways.

The thoroughly practical and progressive farmer—the farmer who plans to make everything count—will allow no element of fertilization to go to waste about his place, because he knows that the proper use of it greatly increases his crops in quality and quantity, and not to make use of it is wanton wastefulness. It is foolish to leave manure unused in the barnyard that can be converted into dollars.

The most successful farmers are those who fully understand the importance of making use of all that goes to the benefit of the farm, by rendering it more productive. They are alive to the fact that if one would make the farm pay, it has to be fed, and they see that they cannot afford to let anything that will answer as food for it to go to waste. A man cannot go on working year after year unless be is given substantial food on which to support his body while the work is being performed, and what applies equally forcibly to a piece of land.

Feed it well and it will continue to do its share of the work well. Starve it, and it will soon become exhausted and unable to do the work demanded of it in a satisfactory manner.—The Furrow.

P. Moylan has now a crew of men and five heavy teams at work. He expects to bank and drive to the lake a million feet yet this fall.

MAY GO TO WAR.

That Is What Our Chippewa Indians Want to Do.

Joseph H. Woodbury, of the White Earth Indian Agency, is desirous of organizing a company of Chippewa Indians and taking them to the Philippine islands. The Washington correspondent of the Pioneer Press has the following to say regarding the matter:

Joseph H. Woodbury, of White Earth, who has been here the past few weeks engaged in looking after matters of interest to the Chippewas, has been ordered from his present position in the office of the White Earth Agency to the agency at Fort Hall, Idaho. Woodbury was at the Indian office today to ask the commissioner to vacate the order, as he desires to remain at White Earth, but the Indian office wants the services of one at Fort Hall who has experience in land values and farming among the Indians, and Woodbury says he expected to be obliged to take the Fort Hall assignment.

Through the efforts of Woodbury, associated with one of the fighting Tillmans, of South Carolina, a proposition has been submitted to the war department for mustering into the service for the Philippine campaign a company of Chippewa Indians. Tillman is a nephew of Senator Tillman, and was colonel of the First South Carolina regiment during the Spanish war. It is proposed to utilize the Chippewas, if the company is accepted, as scouts in running down the Tagals through the swamps of Luzon. Tillman is mentioned for captain of the company and Woodbury is one of the lieutenants, with another lieutenant to be selected from among the rough riders. Woodbury says he has no doubt, if the war department will accept the proposition, that an excellent company of scouts can be raised on short notice from among the Minnesota Chippewas. He also believes that many experienced men can be found among the Indians who have seen military service in the United States army. The war officials have not expressed an opinion as to the feasibility of the scheme.

MUST GIVE BONDS.

Conductors Will Be Required to Do so Hereafter.

The Great Northern has made a new ruling with regard to its conductors. Hereafter each one will be required to give bonds in $1,000 to insure the company in the matter of incompetent service and against loss from misappropriating money handled by the conductors. A bonding company has been arranged with, which takes the risks at $10 per year for passenger conductors and $5 for those running freight trains. The ruling takes effect October 1st, and personal records will not be required from those now in the company's employ, but will be required from newly appointed men thereafter. One half of the premium will be taken from the October salaries and the remainder from those earned the following month.

State Board of Health Cannot Enforce Vaccination.

The Minnesota state board of health's rule requiring vaccination certificates in every district before admission to school cannot be enforced. Appeals to State superintendent Lewis have been referred to Attorney Gen. Douglass, who holds that no authority can be found for it. In view of the scare last winter and the scattering cases ever since, the state board adopted, at its July meeting, this rule to apply all over the state. Many districts have complied, but there has also been a good deal of opposition, as is shown by the inquiries of the state superintendent. Where parents have refused to have their children vaccinated the local boards were in a quandary. They did not wish to oppose the state board of health; many of them agree with the state board as to necessity of the precaution. On the other hand, there is a penalty for turning away from a school any child qualified for attendance, and they did not want to incur that penalty.

The question was whether the ruling of the state board had such validity that they could refuse admission to the schools under it. Gen. Douglass finds that the right to require vaccination as condition precedent to admission to school is not expressly conferred to the statues and does not exist except by express grant.

U. S. Mail Service.

Some idea of the wonderful increase of this branch of governmental business is had from the fact that an expenditure of $30,393,209.53 for carrying the mails in 1888 had swelled to $52,294,382.23 in 1898, an increase to nearly double in ten years. In 1879 the total length of our postal routes was 79,991 miles; the last report shows it to be now 174,777. The annual transportation over these routes in 1879 was 97,497,463 miles, the last report showing a mileage of 281,595,612. In other words, less than twenty years has seen an increase of 116 per cent. in the total miles of route, and of 191 per cent. in the gross of annual mileage.

A partial idea of what this whole system of the transportation in bulk of our mail matter has grown to under enlightened management, and, owing to the great increase in general literacy, is derived from the following statements taken from figures in the last annual report of the postmaster-general: Of traveling post-offices, on railway, steamboat, electric and cable tramways, we have 1,268 lines, covering 167,755 miles, with a grand total mileage of 285,565,343. Over these and throughout the service were handled 6,349,662,320 pieces of first-class matter, 5,876,043,900 pieces inferior classification, and 591,492,490 pieces of purely city handling, a grand total of 12,817,198,710 pieces. These, if only averaging the length of a medium-sized envelope, would stretch 1,213,750 miles, or a little over forty-eight and one-half times around the earth. — Scientific American.

ISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

Gov. LIND couldn't use the state's money to bring the Thirteenth regiment home, but he could use it to take himself and his staff and outside delegates to California and return, an utterly useless trip, since the boys were landed and in camp before he got there.—Alexandria Post-News.

HON. C. A. PILLSBURY, the well-known miller, died suddenly Sunday afternoon at his home in Minneapolis. Mr. Pillsbury has been one of the most prominent factors in the developement of the Northwest, and his death is greatly to be regretted. He was thorough, honest and energetic, and socially one of the most genial men in the world to meet.

THERE is a business like system about Lieut. Peary's Arctic exploration methods that promises a greater meed of success than those wild and desparate rushes for the pole that have always resulted in failure and generally in death. Though the necessity for finding the northern axis of the globe is not just apparent to most of us, if it is ever to be found, Lieut. Peary's plan of establishing supply stations, with large stocks of provisions, (which, in that cold climate, will never deteriorate) along the proposed route, seems to be the only practical way of reaching the North Pole.

MR. BRYAN has put himself very much on record in the anti line. He is anti-expansion, anti-trust, anti-monopoly and anti gold. This anti business is getting about, played out, it used to be that a man could get up a good deal of an audience by climbing on a dry goods box and separating himself from a loud yell addressed to something which he proposed to down. Bryan has been doing a great deal of this "down with" business, but what the people of this country want now is something that will build up.—Princeton Union.

Just so. And with high wages and cheap money at every hand, the people are not losing sight of the fact that they have what they want right now.

THE government has been months getting 35,000 men. Out of eighty million population it ought not to take a single day for volunteers to fight for the old flag and liberty and humanity.—Long Prairie Leader.

Some folks know as little about some things as others—if not less. The government has not been "months," in fact less than two months in raising the new volunteer army, and, in spite of the fact that no special appeal to patriotism was made, and that the public has been carefully warned of the hardships of the proposed service, two hundred thousand have presented themselves for examination in that time. Out of this large number the army officers have been slowly and carefully selecting the picked thirty-five thousand to do duty in the tropics, and who dare say this is not the wisest course? Should an emergency arise and the flag be seriously threatened, two million men would spring to arms in twenty-four hours.

THE Grand Forks Plaindealer, in an "anti" editorial, says in part: "But then lots of things are happening these days contrary to the teachings of the American republic for the past century and a quarter. In the Sulu islands, populated by Mohammedan polygamists and slave holders, our flag has been raised and the institutions of polygamy and slavery officially sanctioned, in spite of the thirteenth amendment."

This is a fair sample of the chuckle-headed rot now being scribbled by the Demo-Pop press, in its wild attempts to scare up an issue for campaign purposes, which will divert attention from the fact that the Republican administration has built up an era of prosperity and plenty, in spite of the calamity howls of the Bryanite shouters. Does the Plaindealer mean to say that the condition of slavery and polygamy existing in the Sulu islands is in any way consequent upon American occupation? Does it mean to insinuate that this condition would be in any way ameliorated by hauling down the flag in those islands? Both these evils existed all too recently in this country and neither was supressed without a bitter struggle. How, then, in reason, can the mere raising of the flag in these lands be expected to accomplish reforms when for years the same abuses flourished, unmolested, under its shadow here at home? The problem of the ultimate disposition of our newly acquired islands is one which the American people have yet to solve, but certainly between the alternative urged by the "antis," of abandoning them to their sins, and the policy of the executive, a gradual and intelligent education and uplifting of these peoples into a healthy and progressive civilization, it will not be hard to choose the most honorable.

"The teachings of the American republic for the past century and a quarter" have been of progress, expansion and the suppression of ancient evils, and even the immortal Loincoln, to whom the Plaindealer appeals for a precedent, undertook and accomplished a larger job of "governing people without their consent" than the one which shocks the sensative Populists so badly.

No, Brother Carruth, there may be wise reasons for relinquishing the islands, but one of these is not that American principle and precedent is violated by their retention.

Threshers, Attention.

Now that threshing has commenced it will be well for the owners of traction engines to remember that the laws of 1895 relating to them are strict. According to their provisions, the whistle of a traction engine must not be blown while on any street or highway within 500 feet of any team passing thereon. Also such traction engine while being moved along such street or highway must be stopped at least 100 feet before meeting any horse or team of horses traveling thereon, and not be started again until such horse or team has passed the engine. A willful violation of the above provisions is punishable, upon conviction, by a fine of not exceeding $100 or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding 90 days. A disregard of the above law also renders the offender liable for all damages caused by such disregard. The owner of any traction engine, who neglects to furnish plank to protect any bridge or culvert upon the highway when crossing the same with a traction engine, will pay one-half of the expense of replacing or repairing such bridge or culvert, providing that the cost does not exceed $50.

SHAKING DICE FOR A MINE.

Joint Owners Settle an Old Quarrel About Working a Claim.

General Charles S. Warren, a pioneer of Butte, but now a resident of Spokane, and Miles Finlen shook dice in the summer of 1882 for a copper mine then valued at $750,000 and now at a cool million. The mine adjoined the Anaconda and was held jointly by Warren and Finlen. The latter is at present a wealthy mine operator at Butte and is noted everywhere as a plunger in stocks, on horse races and in a political campaign. In the latter amusement he makes the millionaires of Butte hold their breath when he offers to wager reckless sums on his favorite candidate.

Warren and Finlen had owned the property for some years, but had been unable to agree upon the method in which it should be worked. They met one day in Lynch Bros.' saloon, and the old wordy quarrel was at once renewed as to the relative values of different methods of working the mine.

"I'll sell you my interest for what it cost me," said Finlen.

"I don't want your interest," replied the general.

"Well, I'll buy your interest," said Finlen.

"Don't want to sell," retorted the general.

"Well, I'll shake dice with you to see whether you or I own the mine," Finlen rejoined with some warmth.

Warren hesitated a moment. His friends believed Finlen was bluffing, but Warren knew the man. The mine was a valuable one. After considering a moment Warren took his hands out of his trousers pockets and remarked: "Miles, I'll go you."

"Give us the dicebox!" yelled Finlen to the bartender. The ivories were produced.

"What do you want to shake?" asked Finlen.

"Any way will do me," replied Warren.

"Any way will suit me, too," said Finlen. "Now name your game."

"Name yours," curtly replied Warren.

"One flop, aces high, then," said Finlen, as he rattled the dice in the box.

"Aces high goes," said Warren, "the winner to set up the wine for the house."

"That suits me. Here goes," said Finlen, as he spilled the dice on the bar.

"Two sixes. I got you, charlie, this time," as he passed the box over to Warren.

"That looks good, but I think I can beat it, Miles," said Warren, as he tossed the dice out.

There was not a pair in sight.

"Ace high is a good hand, sometimes, but it loses this time, Charlie," remarked Finlen as he threw a $100 bill on the bar, and added, "Give the boys what they want, bartender."

The next day Mr. Warren made out the deed.

The mine was later sold to the Anaconda company by Mr. Finlen. Three years ago the adjoining claim was sold for $760,000 to Marcus Daly.—Spokane Spokesman Review.

No Women Admitted.

From Sunnyside, a new town just founded in Utah, all women are to be rigorously excluded. The scarcity of water from which the new town suffers is not, as might be supposed, the cause of this regulation. It is due to the fact that the managers of the town have not yet acquired clear titles to all the mining ground in the vicinity, and they fear that if the miners are allowed to bring their wives in complications might arise through taking up claims by families.

Holidays.

No man can be thoroughly depraved so long as he takes a holiday. It is something the thief cannot steal, the tax collector cannot appraise, the portly usurer cannot shave and the avaricious landlord cannot pluck. Like virtue, it is its own reward. It shows the beneficent side of that law by which time once lost can never be restored, for a holiday once enjoyed can never be entirely lost.—Toronto Globe.

Lobster Kills a Rat.

A hungry rat got into a Bath kitchen the other day, and espying some live lobsters seized one and started with it for his hole. The lobster, in turn, seized the rodent, and the next morning the lobster was found on the kitchen floor, and the rat was there also, the lobster alive, and the rat—dead. There are dangers in the lobster business for one who doesn't fully understand what he is about.—Kennebec Journal.

The Richest Farmer.

David Rankin of Tarkio, Mo., who is said to be the richest farmer in the world, made his beginning with no other capital than a horse. This he sold for $52, invested the money in calves and bought an 80 acre farm. He is now, at the age of 74, tall, athletic and rawboned, with gray hair and beard and keen blue eyes. He owns 23,000 acres of land worth from $50 to $100 an acre.

Deaths of Congressmen Elect.

Five members elect of the Fifty-sixth congress have died since they were chosen. Nelson Dingley of the Second Maine district died Jan. 13, 1899; William E. Greene of the Sixth Nebraska died March 11, 1899; Samuel E. Baird of the Fifth Louisiana died April 23, 1899; Richard P. Bland of the Eighth Missouri died June 15, and Lorenzo Danford of the Sixteenth Ohio died June 19, 1899.

THE MARKETS

The Latest Quotations.

The price of wheat in Thief River Falls has remained the same during the past three weeks, and, although the world's visible supply is on the increase, the indications are that there will be an advance before many weeks. Very little wheat is being marketed at present, and this is accounted for by the fact that very few farmers have threshed. There is a scarcity of men and some predict that the farmers in this vicinity will be threshing long after it freezes up. The average yield in this section will probably be over 16 bushels to the acre, which is not as much as was expected. The grade, however, is good.

Chicago and the Twin Cities have been in receipt of large shipments of live stock during the past week. Although the supply has been greater than the demand, the prices have been good and promise to remain so. Average sales are from $4 to $5.05 per hundred in St. Paul, correspondingly higher in Chicago. Hogs have been bringing good prices and the market is steady, the average prices in St. Paul being $4.50 to $5 per hundred.

Watch and see if it is true.

On the 12th day of October, Mr. Robbecke, Sr., will have been a resident of Meerane, Saxony, Germany, for fifty years, and during all that time he has resided in the same house. He writes to his son that he does not expect him to be present at the celebration, but will send him $50 so that he can celebrate the day in this country.

The traveling gambler is an unfailing attendant to the army of harvest hands, and as soon as the men begin to receive their full pay, the gambler begins to get in his work. Last night the police interrupted a very nice little game, in which one man had several cards up his sleeve and the other sat on several more, and the other two men at the table innocently supposed that they stood a chance of winning a dollar or two. There was hardly enough in the affair to make a police court case of, but the two fakirs were treated to a gentle lesson, which will probably last them for some time.—Grand Forks Herald.

W. S. Lycan and J. B. Kendall returned last evening from a hunting trip north of Thief River Falls, near Little river. They spent three days in hunting and secured 200 chickens and 20 jack snipes. They speak very highly of the advantages of that country for the sportsman, and thoroughly enjoyed their trip. A peculiar feature of Little river is the fact that at intervals the river flows underground, leaving a place, sometimes over a mile in length where the hunter may travel upon the ground, with the river underneath. Several accidents have occured at this point in the years gone by, when people and even teams have broken through the upper crust of earth and sunk to the water below.—Crookston Tribune.

are faithfully portrayed in the original and exclusive cable dispatches which THE CHICAGO RECORD prints daily from the leading capitals of the old world. This magnificent special service is in process of being greatly extended so as to include every important city in Europe; and it is supplemented by the full regular cable service of The Associated Press.

I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

WANTED.—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. R·I·P·A·N·S, 10 for 5 cents or twelve packets for 48 cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

OCEAN CABLES IN WARTIME.

Talk of Their Neutrality Which Has Never Been Acted Upon.

During the late war the Americans cut the cable connections with Hongkong and the French cable in Cuban waters off the port of Caimanera. This was at once denounced, by the French press especially, as unwarranted by the law of nations and as being a positive violation of the rules of modern warfare. The charge is absolutely groundless. A belligerent certainly cannot be denied the right to prevent his enemy from communicating with the outside world. The suggestion has been often made that ocean cables should not be interfered with in time of war, but should be neutralized by agreement of the nations. President Buchanan made such a suggestion as early as 1858, when the first Atlantic cable was laid. In his reply to Queen Victoria's message of good will Mr. Buchanan said, "Will not all nations of Christendom spontaneously unite in the declaration that it (the cable) shall be forever neutral, and that its communications shall be held sacred in passing to their places of destination, even in the midst of hostilities?" But this agreement, which Mr. Buchanan 40 years ago supposed the nations would so spontaneously enter into, does not yet exist.

The war with Spain is the first war, so far as the writer is aware, in which a belligerent has found it necessary to cut an ocean cable. That the cables were likely to be so interfered with appeared probable at the very outbreak of hostilities. Mr. Balfour was questioned on the subject in the British house of commons as early as April 26, the day after the United States declared war. He replied that he was not prepared to deny that belligerents, on the ground of military exigencies, would be justified in interfering with the cables. A few days later, on May 2, Dewey had cut the Manila cable.

The nations have a convention for the protection of submarine cables, which was entered into in Paris in 1884 and ratified and proclaimed in 1885. The United States and Spain are among the signatory powers. That convention, however, simply provides protection for cables in time of peace. In article 15 it is expressly stated that "It is understood that the stipulations of this convention shall in no wise affect the liberty of action of belligerents." But it is interesting in this connection to recall that in 1869 the United States proposed the neutrality of cables in time of war and called a conference to meet at Washington. But before the conference could be held the Franco-Prussian war occurred, and the meeting had to be abandoned. The Italian government subsequently sounded the powers, and it was found that it would be impossible to secure their assent to neutralization. In 1864 an attempt was made to lay an Atlantic cable, and at that time France, Italy, Portugal and one or two other states actually entered into an agreement for its protection in war as well as peace. The effort to lay that cable failed; with the failure the treaty lapsed.—Forum.

To Prevent Counterfeiting.

The art of engraving by means of photographing and kindred aids has now reached such a degree of perfection that the government has been forced to redouble its vigilance to prevent frauds in that direction. An old engraver said yesterday, in speaking of this matter: "The exposure of the recent big counterfeiting conspiracy has worked a change already in the system by which the government has heretofore kept track of dangerous counterfeiting methods.

"Chief Wilkie, I see, says that Taylor and Bredell employed a new system in imitating the $100 Monroe head counterfeit. He is wrong. The system has been in vogue for many years, and is common to all experts in our line. There are, no doubt, hundreds of engravers who would scorn to do a dishonest act who could make counterfeit plates far better than the ones turned out by Taylor and Bredell. As a matter of fact, the plate that was used to print the counterfeit internal revenue stamps was a very imperfect piece of work, and there are apprentices I know of who could do better. However, they were good enough to fool the ordinary person.

"In the near future the government will require all engravers and those connected with engraving establishments to register at least once a month and to present a list of the work performed by them."—Philadelphia Record.

Don't Like to Saw Wood.

A returned Klondiker says that Dawson City has adopted a novel and effective cure for crime. It is a monster wood pile, and it is enough to awe the most hardened offender. A man convicted of any offense is compelled to saw wood. He saws ten hours a day steadily, day after day, until his sentence expires. He must saw regardless of the weather. In the most intense cold, the hardest rain, the fiercest snowstorm he is compelled to continue his sawing, and, if the day has not ten hours of light, lanterns are provided to enable him to put in a full day. When the pile of sawed wood begins to get low, the authorities sentence men to sawing for very light offenses, and the result is that everybody behaves for fear of getting a dose of sawing.—Detroit Journal.

Beats the Record.

One man, with the assistance of two "shockers," in Decatur township, Ind., recently cut 40 acres of wheat in two days. The work was done with three horses and a six foot binder, and two pounds of twine to the acre were required to bind the wheat. This is believed to beat the record.

TOPICS OF THE TURF.

Ruby, 2:11½, is now 10 years old and has been racing since she was a 3-year-old.

E. S. E., 2:21¼, derives his name from that of his owner, E. S. Easton, Peoria, Ills.

The fast Cleveland mare, Temper, 2:12¾, by Elyria, stands but little over 14 hands high.

When John Coakley drove Nelson in the 2:21 pace at the Rigby meeting, it was the first time he had been in a race in two years.

Miss Ada Tenny, Houlton, Me., has achieved a state reputation as an expert in harness horse pedigrees. She owns a number of fast colts.

Central Girl, 2:22¼, by Nutwood Wilkes, is considered about the best trotter at the Alameda (Cal.) track. She recently stepped a workout mile in 2:17.

Sclavonic, who took a record of 2:09¾ in the third heat of the 2:11 pace at Rigby, gives Miss Russell another in the 2:10 class. His former record was 2:10½, taken at Providence last September.

Star Pointer will try to lower his record of 1:59¼ at Charter Oak park during the grand circuit meeting. The sum of $2,500 is guaranteed for the pacing king's effort and $5,000 if he lowers his record.

In the first heat of the 2:13 trot at Hamilton, Ont., John Rombaugh was fined $25 for not driving to win, as the judges thought. After that Helen A. reeled off the next three heats fast enough to win the race.

Octavia, winner of the 2:30 trot at Portland, Me., took a record of 2:18. Up to that time she had a tineup record of 2:20¼. She is a daughter of Baron Wilkes and Sapphire, dam of Nominator, 2:17¾, and Nominee, 2:17¾, by Jay Gould.

The bay gelding Uncle Tom, who figured in the money in the 2:15 pace at Portland, Me., is comparatively unknown on the turf. It was his third start for money, but has been cut loose over the speeding path of Worcester, Mass., by his owner, Mr. Pierce.—Horseman.

THE GLASS OF FASHION.

Three-quarters of a yard is enough for an ordinary stock. The ribbon should be about three inches wide.

Crepe de chines will be used for evening wear this winter, owing to their adaptability to the prevailing style of clinging effects.

Chiffon and taffeta coats are seen at the roof gardens, concerts and various places of amusement. They are one of the prettiest of the season's fancies.

Never was lace in such demand as it is today, every kind and description for every possible use. It is the keynote of a young girl's attire, and she never was daintier than she has been since the avalanche of lace descended upon her.

For dinners, theaters or evening wear, if the shirt waist is worn at all, it should have the dress sleeve and an elaborate stock. The regulation shirt sleeves, with stiff cuffs, are only in good taste when worn in washable materials.

The satin stock is steadily crowding out the usefulness of the linen collar. Double faced satin ribbon can be washed and ironed at home without cost, and that fact alone deals a deathblow to the linen collar, with its necessary laundry bills.—New York Tribune.

MARRIAGEABLE AGES.

In Germany the man must be at least 18 years of age.

In Portugal a boy must have seen at least 14 summers and the woman 12.

In France the man must be 18 and the woman 16; in Belgium, the same ages.

In Spain the intended husband must have passed his fourteenth year and the woman her twelfth.

In Switzerland men from the age of 14 and the women from the age of 12 are allowed to marry.

In Austria a "man" and a "woman" are supposed to be capable of conducting a home of their own from the ages of 14.

In Hungary, for Roman Catholics, the man must be 14 years old and the woman 12; for Protestants, the man must be 18 and the woman 15.

In Turkey any youth and maiden who can walk properly and can understand the necessary religious service are allowed to be united for life.

In Russia and Saxony they are a little more sensible, and a youth must refrain from entering into matrimony till he can count 18 years and the woman till she can count 16.

STAGE GLINTS.

Frederick Warde will open his starring tour at Richmond, Va., early in September.

Timothy Adamowski has composed an opera for the Bostonians. The name of it is "The Smuggler's Bride."

The carpe diem chap has made a play out of the unpleasantness in the Philippines. He calls it "The Siege Against Aguinaldo."

Jennie O'Neill Potter, the well known elocutionist, goes to Paris in the autumn to study for the legitimate stage and will star next year in a foreign comedy.

John P. Slocum, a former Detroiter and a gentleman of wide and varied "front" experience in theatricals, will manage the Jefferson De Angelis tour the coming season.

The principal scene in the new London melodrama in which Ada Rehan is to have the leading role will be a private view at the Royal academy, Burlington House, with the customary crowds of distinguished persons that gather there.

BROKE HIS LEG.

A Building Falls Upon an Indian Monday.

While at work raising Casper Weiner's house on the East side, preparatory to turning it around, Monday forenoon, one end of the building fell upon an Indian—who is a step son of Chief Moose Dung—and broke his leg. The work was being done under the supervision of Charles Klaus, and a number of Indians were employed on the job. The building was being raised by jack-screws and instructions had been given the Indians not to screw them higher than eight inches. This advice was not heeded, however, and the screw turned out, letting the building fall upon the legs of the Indian. He was held a prisoner for about ten minutes and suffered a great deal of pain. Upon his being removed it was found that one leg was broken. He was taken to Chief Moose Dung's house and the injured member was repaired. It is said that the Indians were all intoxicated.

The house was quite badly damaged and a little girl of Mr. Weiner's, who was in the house at the time, was quite badly scalded.

GOLDEN JUBILEE.

The Semi-Centennial Number of the Pioneer Press.

The St. Paul Pioneer commenced its publication in 1849, and in the latter part of October, 1899, the St. Paul Pioneer Press will fittingly commemorate the completion of fifty years of newspaper existence by issuing a mammoth number, containing not less than fifty-two pages, including a magnificant cover illustrated with four colors. Newsdealers will be supplied with these papers only as they are specially ordered for that day. Every person desiring to secure and preserve a complete, interesting and illustrated history of Minnesota should place their orders with the local news dealers without delay.

A Minister Weds.

Rev. Bjornson rather surprised his congregation here last Saturday by marching in with his eighteen-year-old bride, whom he had brought from Wisconsin last week. After recovering somewhat from the surprise, we all vied with each other in trying to make her welcome to this somewhat wild country, which is to be her future home. We all thought she was just perfect, and may God's richest blessing rest on their union so as to make their lives both happy and useful, and, as John wrote to Gaius, may they prosper and be in health, even as their souls prosper. III. John 2.—Rollis correspondence in the Warren Sheaf.

Jim Gets a Raise.

A letter received this week from our old fellow townsman, Jas. A. Mead, announces that October 1st he will be given a position as deputy wheat inspector at Superior. It will be remembered that Jim left here early in the summer to accept a position as helper. The promotion was made from a practical test in the work of inspection and there were only two of the old force who made a better showing than the Red Lake Falls man. The raise is very gratifying to Jim's friends here, as it usually takes about two years' experience before helpers are given an inspectorship.—Red Lake Falls Courier.

OUR CONGRESSMAN

Is Humorous in Discussing the Philippine Question.

A Washington, D. C., paper publishes the following interview with Frank M. Eddy:

"In my section we have few followers of Atkinson and Aguinaldo. They talk about the terrible war of extermination being carried on in the Philippines, and allude to Aguinaldo as a second George Washington. Whenever I hear one of those curbstone orators talking up in my district, I immediately challenge him to joint debate. The terms I make are most liberal. I offer to allow him to do all the talking, and abuse and traduce the American arms and flag all he desires. The only condition I exact is that when he talked himself out, and providing there is still an audience who have listened to what he had to say, he proposes three cheers for Aguinaldo, the 'second George Washington.' After he has done this, my proposition is to propose three cheers for the president of the United States and the army and navy of the United States. A count of noses is to be taken as to the number in the audience who side with Aguinaldo and those who vote to sustain this government, and that will settle the debate and the the Atkinson disciple."

Wheat Checks.

Deputy Collector Johnson, of Crookston, is in receipt of a ruling from the department that will be of interest to all who own or handle wheat tickets. It is to the effect that all such receipts or tickets that are cashed for the party disposing of the grain by a regular employe of the company which issues it, do not require a revenue stamp. If they are cashed by a bank or otherwise negotiated to be paid to a party other than the one to whom drawn, then they require the stamps. The decision holds that no bank, banker or bank clerk can be considered a regular employe of the company, but that a merchant be arranged with to cash the checks, and come under the regular employe class.

A Pioneer Dead.

J. F. Remore, ex-judge of probate of Beltrami county, died of heart failure at Bemidji on Tuesday morning at the age of 76 years. He was seated on the steps of the courthouse getting ready to smoke his pipe, when he suddenly fell backward and expired. The judge was one of the pioneers of Northern Minnesota and was well known throughout this part of the country. He erected the first frame building in the now busy village of Bemidji.

WENT UP A TREE.

A Timber Cruiser Saw Too Many Bears.

Ed. Barker, one of the good sort of fellows that live even in wicked East Grand Forks, was cruising the Beltrami county woods recently, and while looking for a quarter post in the country near where a couple of Crookston lady school teachers have claims, he saw a bear up a tree. Ed. wasn't looking for bear, albeit he had a rifle along; and beside it was only a young bear, so he made a detour through the underbrush to avoid trouble. Some times, though, trouble is found where least expected. In going through the bush Mr. Barker didn't do a thing but run slap onto an old she-bear and a couple of cubs that were eating cranberries with one paw and looking for trouble with the other three.

The mother bear considered that the intrusion was a challenge, and immediately put the run to Barker, who, after a series of quick dodges, "shinned" up a tree, a large juicy Norway, the tallest and straightest in four townships, measuring 60 feet to the first limb.

The time made in climbing would, it is said, make Mr. Barker a winner in any contest of speed to be pulled off at the forthcoming carnival here, notwithstanding he was loaded with a Winchester rifle.

The bear sat down at the foot of the tree and waited developments. There came along soon in the person of Mr. DeWolf, Mr. Barker's companion, who appeared on the scene and let a yell out of him that started the bear on a hurry-up trip over into the next township. When the trouble was over Barker descended, and when DeWolf called attention to his gun and asked him why he didn't use it, he acknowledged that he forgot all about it, and didn't have time to use it, if he'd thought of it. He is now under a doctor's care for palpitation of the heart.—Crookston Times.

"Mr. Dooley" Creates a Girl.

The author of the famous "Mr. Dooley," Finley P. Dunne, has joined the literary forces of the Ladie's Home Journal, and will create this fall in that magazine a new character, called "Molly Donahue: who lives across the street from Mr. Dooley." Her creator says that Molly is a bright, pretty girl of nineteen, who has ambitions for the great world of woman's clubs, Browning societies, golf clubs, woman's rights organizations, and the "high-toned literary and social life" which thrives on "the elite side of Chicago." Her mother and brother sympathize with her, but her father, who works in the mill, is hard to deal with in that he will insist on sitting at table in his shirtsleeves and in his stocking-feet. "Mr. Dooley" is the family's most intimate friend and is called upon frequently to run across and set matters straight.

A MASONIC LODGE

May Be Organized in Thief River Falls.

An effort will be made to organize a Masonic lodge in this city in the near future. There are at present about a dozen Masons in the city and it is thought that about twenty charter members can be secured, as a large number have signified a willingness to join the order. A meeting will be held in the First State bank, Saturday evening at 7:30 to consider the matter, and all Masons living in this section are requested to be present.

Killed By Fright.

The Wadena Pioneer-Journal tells of the death of a boy from fright. Asher Merwin, in company with a younger brother and two other boys, went out to gather hazel nuts. They met a party of men in an emigrant wagon and one of them, a rough, burly fellow, sang out that he was going to take one of the boys with him. Asher, who was only 9 years old, was nevertheless the largest boy in the party, and took the men to be gypsies, and presumed they were going to steal one of the boys and carry him off, as he had often heard they did. He became very much frightened, as he reasoned that he was responsible for the safety of the whole party. The man in the wagon brought out a rope and threatened to lasso them, and afterwards, it is said, pulled out an old gun and pointed it at them. The little fellows ran towards the woods for a long distance, and were much excited over the accident. They afterwards came home and Asher was taken very sick at once. During the night he raved continually about the man who was going to steal them. He gradually grew worse, and suffered extreme bodily and mental pain and in three days the little fellow passed away.

Bryan says the president is a traitor. Tut! tut! William, don't you think that is a little strong?

The Alexandria Post-News is trying to spring it on the state as news the fact that Sam Langum seeks an office.

It is expedient that one man should suffer for the people. It's a little hard on Dewey, but just think of the fun New York is having.

Sam Langum probably is of the oppinion that C. S. Mitchell could make his paper more interesting by discussing the weather and other similar topics.

When Congressman Eddy gets after an anti-expansionist it don't take him long dissapate the moonshine and get down to the hard common sense of the matter.

The American Bonding and Trust company has canceled its surety bond furnished the state for E. M. Pope as public bank examiner. If this company is not longer willing to be responsible for Mr. Pope's public actions, wouldn't it be a good idea to look up his past record?

Your Uncle Samuel has caught the spirit of the times and has become an advertising agent in at least one instance. Persons receiving mail from Philadelphia will note with surprise that the cancellation mark stamped thereon by the postoffice department reads, "National Export Exposition, Sept. 14, Nov. 30, 1899." The patent medicine people will be after that space in jig time.

Judge Ives, a late leader of the Populist party in this section, and at present the editor of the Cass Lake Times, does not wish to affiliate with any political party in the future. In reply to the charge that he is a Populist he says:

"No use to call us names and rant when we rub old sores on the raw, but remember that we have been a free-spoken citizen only four months, and we enjoy the freedom too highly to think of returnig to the fold of any political party to be bossed by a lot of fellows whose only accomplishment is, how can I get an office?"

OUR POSITION REVERSED.

This country two years ago was a debtor nation. It owed money and the annual settlement of its balances was an expected drain upon its resources. Tho is changed now, and we are the world's creditor. The most astonishing commercial revolution in history has been accomplished, and, as a result, economic conditions are materially changed. In 1896 not a few campaign orators declared that, being a debtor nation, we ought to favor the acquittance of claims in cheap currency. If the argument was any good then it is just as potential today, and conversely demonstrates that collections should be made in the best money known to exchanges throughout the world. Less than ten years ago our imports of manufactures amounted to more than $300,000,000 and our exports to about $150,000,000. The fiscal year ending June 30, last, showed exports of $338,667,794 and imports of $259,570,293. The Export Exposition, now under way at Philadelphia, is an outgrowth of expanded international trade and the attention it has attracted from all over the world should encourage every American enterprise. There is no longer a doubt that in the future this country will lead all others in every essential that tends toward civilization. —Grand Forks Herald.

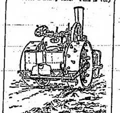
DRAINAGE OF ROADS.

Durability Depends on Speedy Removal of Water.

In road building the chief effort should be toward securing the best drainage, as water and dirt are bound to make mud. A dry road is usually a good road or will become a good road in time by constant usage. The exception which proves the rule is the sandy road. A sandy road is a dry road, but not often a good road, says S. D. Tallman in The Pneumatic.

To assist the drainage the road should be first crowned and then about four to six inches of crushed stone, depending upon the amount of travel, put on, gradually decreasing a little in thickness as it approaches the gutters; then a heavy steam roller passed over it two or three times to set it; upon this about three or four inches of finer crushed stone should be placed and a steam roller passed over it again. A great deal of care should be taken not to have the road flat on top. This hard stone dressing forms almost a waterproof covering that will last for years if properly taken care of each spring by putting on some fine crushed stone. This covering will let the water drain freely to the gutters and leave a comparatively dry road in a few minutes after a heavy rain. This is very important in another way, as it keeps the ground underneath the road free from saturation and thereby makes a strong foundation. It is the natural earth underneath the covering that must bear the weight of the road. It really sustains in addition the weight of stone, etc., as well.



MACHINE FOR LOOSENING MACADAM.

If this natural soil or foundation of the road, is permitted to become saturated with water, either by water percolating down into it from the surface or from water rising into it from below, it has not strength to resist the wheels which at once sink into it, and ruts are formed. But if this soil foundation is kept dry or nearly so it is strong and will support any load likely to pass over it. If the water is shed from the road to the gutters and there remains, the water works its way into the earth at the foundation of the road and causes the injury above spoken of.

Speaking of the great importance of keeping a road in repair, let a wagon track, scarcely perceptible at first, after a shower stand full of water and soften the road at that spot, another wagon passing along later sinks further into the softened track, here is a deeper hole to hold water, soon it becomes a rut, then the rut develops into a pitch hole. The soil underneath is brought up and mixed with surface covering, the surface covering is broken down and forced into the soil.

Here, then, is a bad road and a permanent weakness, the result of a neglect to repair the road at the proper time and a neglect to keep the drainage of the road in perfect condition at all times.

New Jersey's Roads Models.

According to bulletin No. 95, issued by the department of agriculture, New Jersey is building more roads and better roads for the money than any other state in the Union. The roads being built there will last and can be kept up to a high standard at a minimum expense.

Bulletin No. 95 is devoted exclusively to good roads. In it the opinion is expressed that all the important roads in the United States will be macadamized or otherwise improved within a few years. The bulletin advises the building of stone roads wherever it is possible and condemns dirt roads as much more expensive in the end.

Get Rid of the Mud.

Mud can imprison and enslave thousands of people. I know certain seasons of the year where families have been bound and shackled by the mud, been prevented from the enjoyments and privileges of free transit and utterly isolated from their neighbors. When we see what a great enemy mud is, the first thing to take into consideration in road building is some plan to avoid mud and build roads that will be free from mud.—S. D. Tallman.

Good Roads In Egypt.

Twenty years ago there was scarcely a mile of good wagon road in Egypt. During the last six years more than 1,000 miles of fine roads have been constructed.

Wide Tires In Kansas City.

In Kansas City wagons drawn by one horse are required to be equipped with three inch tires and those drawn by two horses with four inch tires.

Wouldn't You?

If I were a mule,
And some blame fool
Would dare to lash me through
A "dead tough" road,
With a great big load,
I'll tell you what I'd do;
I wouldn't crow,
But I'd just lie low
And keep most mighty "mum"
Till I got a chance,
When I'd kick his pants
Clear into the kingdom come.

The Hubbard County Enterprise last week gave an extended account of what was perhaps the first race between a black bear and a bicycle, and the bicycle appears to have won easily. It seems that while riding home at dusk one evening last week, a boy named Harry King almost ran into a black bear and her two cubs that were standing in the road about four miles from the Rapids. The bear pursued the wheelman for quite a distance, but she proved no equal for the bicycle, propelled by a badly scared youth, and was soon left far astern.

A very fine collection of birds shot here in Polk county has been arranged by George Purvis at the G. N. land office. It is surprising what little one knows of the products of his own county, when taken as a whole. Among the birds Mr. Purvis has, are the sand hill crane, wild turkey, pin tailed duck, ruffled grouse, blue heron, several varieties of ducks, the prairie chicken, pelican and double crested cormorant. The pelican is unlike anything ever seen here before. It has a horn on its bill and a topknot on its head. The last named bird is very rare and is the same as the Japanese use in fishing. Mrs. Purvis is very familiar with all the different products of Polk county; and talks interestingly concerning them.—Crookston Tribune.

Wine Making in Portugal.

In great emergency when all the men are demanded in the vineyards, women are called to assist in wine treading. Our correspondent saw young women wearing their own garments which they skilfully gather up around them until they assume the biggest and most abbreviated of Dutchman's "britchen" costumes, while in the winery.

An improved method of mashing by machinery is adopted At the Speer Oporto Grape Vineyards, PASSAIC, N. J. by which a barrel of grapes a minute is dumped in the hopper, that feed two large rubber rollers, between which the grapes are crushed.

The Port Wine from Speer's Vineyards beats the world for its valuable medicinal qualities. None put on the market now, until nine years old. I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

MAKING DIRT ROADS.

MODERN ROAD MACHINERY HAS SOLVED THE PROBLEM.

Graders and Rollers Properly Used Produce Hard and Durable Highways—Road Taxes Should Be Paid in Cash.

The greatest enemy of good roads is water. A road may easily be kept good if the water can be kept off. Hence, the first thing to consider in constructing a road is to build it so that the water will run off. This is accomplished by building it high in the middle or "crowning" it and giving the entire road surface a hard, smooth finish.

Water always runs down hill, and it will readily run off of any road if it be but given an opportunity to do so. The fault with too many of our roads is that the water cannot run off. Passing wagons and horses' hoofs are permitted to wear them down until ruts are formed. These hold the water and allow it to sink into the ground, which becomes softened, so that continued travel makes matters worse and worse.

The problem of building roads which will shed water has been solved by the road grader or road machine. The American farmer is quick to realize the value of machinery, and the rapid growth in the use of the reaper, the binder and the separator is an eloquent tribute to the practical genius of American agriculture. The growth of the use of road graders has been wonderful during the last few years and indicates that the farmer has discovered a practical solution of the problem how to build his local dirt roads.

But something more is needed to make a thoroughly good road besides a road machine. To properly finish a dirt road made with the use of a grader it should be thoroughly rolled and hardened. It is not sufficient that it be crowned, but it should be made hard and smooth. The same thing is true of gravel roads. This can be best accomplished with the use of rollers. Horse rollers weighing from five to eight tons are most frequently used for the purpose. All loose stones should be removed from the road surface before rolling, as well as sods, turf, leaves, sticks or any other matter that will tend to soften the roadbed. A road that is thoroughly and repeatedly rolled is well fitted to stand the wear of travel and can be made into a perfect watershed.

The use of machinery in building roads has been seriously handicapped by its cost. It is frequently thought wrong that farmers should be obliged to tax themselves for the purchase of road graders and road rollers in addition to having to stand the regular road tax. There is much justice in this position, for the average farmer pays his full share of taxes, and these should not be added to or increased without some very excellent reason. But the farmers of the United States are badly in want of good roads, and the clamor for their construction is growing from year to year. Quite a number of towns have solved the road machinery problem by voting to pay their taxes in cash instead of working them out and using a part of this fund for the purchase of machines, which avoids the necessity of levying an extra tax for the purpose. This plan has been adopted in New York and Wisconsin and probably elsewhere. The town clerk of West Chester, Westchester county, N. Y., says it has always been followed there. In the town of Walton, Delaware county, N. Y., the cash road tax was adopted in 1889. Some years later the taxpayers voted by a large majority against returning to the old system of working out the tax. James Hill, chairman town of Baraboo, in Wisconsin, reports that in 1893 the town adopted the plan of paying its road taxes in cash. He declares that "our people think we have accomplished more the past year under the cash system than we did in four years under the old labor system." Similar results are reported from many other towns in Wisconsin and New York.

Road taxes may be collected in cash without hardship to the poorer farmers, who may desire to continue working out their share of the taxes as heretofore. Only part of the tax would ever be required during any one year to pay for machinery, and the remainder would be employed to hire men and teams for operating the machines. Thus the poorer taxpayers are given employment at good wages, and the town officers are in position to secure a dollar's worth of work for every dollar of tax, which has been impossible in many towns under the old system of working out taxes. This explains the growing popularity of the cash road tax and the fact that few towns have ever abandoned it after giving it a fair trial. Experience has shown that more can be accomplished with $1 of road tax paid in cash than with $2 or even $3 of tax worked out on the highway. This has made it possible to make a large reduction in the amount of the tax.

This matter of paying road taxes in cash is something that should be left to the vote of the people in each town. It is essentially a subject for local home rule. The plan is being more generally adopted, however, as its advantages continue to become better known. It will probably result in the very general use of road graders, rollers and also of rock crushing plants and in that way help largely to solve the good roads problem. A number of states have recently adopted laws authorizing the town boards to purchase road machinery on time payments, among them being Michigan, New York, Arkansas and Wisconsin.

FRAMING PICTURES.

How to Display Paintings, Etchings and Engravings.

The aim of framing is not to exhibit the frame, but the picture, to make the picture look its best. Hence anything that calls off the attention from the picture to the frame should be avoided, says The Critic and Art Collector. The frame must become the picture, be subordinate to the picture and be well made and strong enough to hold it. A good oil painting deserves a rich, elaborate frame. The bright gold of the frame only sets off and becomes the color of the painting. If placed in a shadow or shelter box, the lining of the box should be in harmony with the gold frame, of some unobtrusive color, like olive or old gold, but never of glaring crimson plush. Water colors should be framed after a more simple fashion and etchings or engravings more simply yet. Water colors of the popular Dutch school, which have almost as much depth of color as an oil painting, can be treated more like oil paintings. Gold mats and rich frames may only enhance their beauty, but light water colors, especially those where body color is not used, require light mats of rough paper, white or cream, and cream white, white and and gold or very simple gold frames.

A water color, in distinction from an oil painting, requires a mat to bring out its color and a glass for protection. This glass should be flawless clear (not green), and, with the mat intervening, it cannot touch or injure the face of the picture. Thick paper should be placed under the back boards of the frame to prevent the wood from staining the picture from behind, and paper should be pasted over the back of the frame to keep out dust. In the choice of mats remember that cream tints turn several shades darker in the course of a year or two, but they are more generally becoming than the blue white. Still, some delicate paintings cannot bear the cream tint, so it is well to test the different shades of white with the picture in hand.

The complexion of a water color should be studied in the choice of a mat as truly as that of a bride in the selection of the right shade of white for her wedding gown. This is also true of etchings and engravings. An etching should be framed as carefully, neatly and becomingly as a water color, for etchings, like women, are little cattle, and their idiosyncrasies should be humored. Light natural wood oak, ash, chestnut, cherry and holly, well made, in a simple style, are pretending, unobjectionable and do not distract the attention from the picture, which is the point of attention, not the frame. Bronze, gold, white and gold and cream white frames are also suitable for etchings. Landscapes require simple frames, figure pictures can bear something more dressy, and a single head requires the most elaborate frame of the three, but in each case the danger is in overdecoration. An old engraving or etching may look well in a black frame, but black must be used judiciously. Woods like oak or chestnut, gilded, but showing the natural grain and made up in a flat, plain molding, are admirable for frames and are more suitable than overwrought gilt molding.

How to Cook Beefsteak a la Mode.

Place two tablespoonfuls of butter in the chafing dish with two or three slices of lemon. When melted, put in one pound of steak cut about an inch thick and cook slowly for five or ten minutes. Pour over it a gill of hot stock or port wine when ready to serve.

How to Make Corn Fritters.

Grate the corn from a dozen ears and add three fresh eggs well beaten. Stir a teaspoonful of baking powder through two heaping tablespoonfuls of flour and then stir it through the grated corn and eggs. Next stir in a half pint of sweet milk, season with salt and a very little pepper, and fry the fritters in enough smoking hot fat for them to swim in. Drop the batter in with a large spoon. If the batter is not stiff enough so that it holds together in frying, add a little more flour. Fritters prepared in this way are much more dainty than when the corn is cut from the ear.

How to Make Lavender Water.

Sift four cupfuls of flour, a teaspoonful of salt and two rounded teaspoonfuls of baking powder and rub into it a tablespoonful of butter. Add a cupful of smoothly mashed potatoes to one cupful of milk and mix well with the flour. Turn out on floured board, knead lightly and roll out an inch thick. Then cut with a small biscuit cutter, place in buttered pan and bake in a quick oven for 20 minutes.

How to Make Elder Ointment.

This is a most agreeable preparation and is easily made by boiling a half pound of elder flowers in the same quantity of pure lard until they are crisp, then straining while hot through a linen cloth.

THE GOVERNMENT

To Make the Survey of the Red Lake.

T. Milton Fowble, a United States assistant engineer, accompanied by a party of fifteen men, will commence a survey of the Red lake and the Red Lake river the latter part of this week. The survey is to be made in order to ascertain the advisability of putting in a large government dam at the outlet of the Red lake, which would be the means of improving navigation on the Red Lake river between this city and the lake. If it is found that the putting in of a dam would not cause the water on the east bank of the lake to overflow the adjoining country, work on the same will probably be begun after this session of congress when an appropriation is made. Mr. Fowble and his crew will probably pass through this city, although he may go in by the way of Solway.

WILL ORGANIZE

A Masonic Lodge in This City This Fall.

At the meeting held in the First State bank last Saturday evening to consider the advisability of forming a Masonic lodge in this city it was unanimously agreed to do so by all present. U. G. Richards was instructed to correspond with the Grand Lodge regarding the matter and to make other preliminary arrangements for the organization.

ROUND-UP ENDED.

P. & J. Meehan Have Lassoed All Stray Logs.

P. Meehan returned to this city the first of the week from a trip to the Red lake. He states that the work of gathering up all the stray logs belonging to his firm has been completed and that the last tow will be placed in the outlet the latter part of this week. A clean drive of the river will then be made and this will finish up their business in this section.

UP AGAINST IT.

Men Employed on the Martin Lally Strike.

The men employed on the Martin Lally, the Red Lake Falls Lumber company's tow boat, arrived in the city the first of the week from the Red lake. The men received word last week from the Red Lake Falls company stating that their wages had been reduced from $2 per day to $35 per month, and, not being willing to continue work at that price, they quit and have decided to seek employment elsewhere. The company only has about a half million feet of logs left to tow, but it is doubtful if they can secure another crew.

REQUIRE STAMPS.

Leases Must Have Revenue Stamps Affixed.

Everyone who holds a lease, either as lessee or lessor, will do well to look it over and see if it has the revenue stamp upon it that the government requires. It appears that there has been a disposition to avoid the use of revenue stamps on leases. A good many people, not being familiar with the law, imagined that stamps were not necessary and the consequence is that a large portion of the leases now outstanding have no stamps upon them.

They should have stamps, the revenue people say. Recently a case came up in Minneapolis involving the question. An inquiry came in as to whether it was necessary to have stamps on both the copy held by the lessor and that held by the lessee. There was some doubt on the question, so the inquiry was sent on to Washington, and in due course of time a reply was received to the effect that both copies require stamps. In other words, the department decided that both were originals, and as such must be stamped. Leases running for one year require a 25 cent stamp, those running for three years require 50 cents; for five years and over $1 is required.

DEAD AND DOWN.

Reports of Inspectors Nessler and Jenkins.

The report of Inspectors Nessler and Jenkins on Minnesota Chippewa affairs, has been submitted to Secretary Hitchcock. The report is elaborate, and covers every phase of the present system of disposing of the Indian timber. It sets forth that the dead and down operations should be abolished; that the estimating system is a failure. It is recommended that a combination of the Menomonie systems be adopted, and further recommends that the agricultural lands be retained for the benefit of the Indians.

The first three points have been foreshadowed, but the recommendation in regard to agricultural lands is new. While the system of disposing of the Indian timber is said to be a failure, those in charge of its administration are not criticised to any extent. In fact, the report says that these officials have worked conscientiously to make the operations successful. The inspectors do not believe that the lands are suitable for agricultural purposes, but should be retained for the benefit of the Chippewas; also that in disposing of the pine the land on which it is located should not be included in the sale. They say that the policy of including the land in timber sales does not result in securing a better price for the logs.

During the season of 1898-99 timber to the amount of 73,022,441 feet were cut on the Chippewa reservation, of which 8,289,070 feet was green boom timber. The inspectors collected $55,000 in fines from operators who cut timber unlawfully, $17,000 of which covered timber unlawfully taken from allotted lands and $38,000 represents collections on timber cut in excess of allowances called for in the contracts. It is believed that in making recommendations to congress on this matter, Secretary Hitchcock will be guided largely by the recommendations made in the report, especially with reference to disposing of the pine.

It is known that Secretary Hitchcock has expressed himself as favoring the combination plan, and he is convinced that the dead and down operations and the estimating system have not met expectations. Regarding the suggestion to retain the agricultural lands to the Chippewas, it is not believed that such a move would be popular. The department is now giving some consideration to the opening of the agricultural lands within the ceded reservations, and what effect the recommendation will have on the secretary is not known, as the matter has not been officially communicated to him.

GOLDEN JUBILEE.

The Semi-Centennial Number of the Pioneer Press.

The St. Paul Pioneer commenced its publication in 1849, and in the latter part of October, 1899, the St. Paul Pioneer Press will fittingly commemorate the completion of fifty years of newspaper existence by issuing a mammoth number, containing not less than fifty-two pages, including a magnificant cover illustrated with four colors. Newsdealers will be supplied with these papers only as they are specially ordered for that day. Every person desiring to secure and preserve a complete, interesting and illustrated history of Minnesota should place their orders with the local news dealers without delay.

IN THE COURTS.

The McCarthy Log Lean Law to Be Tested.

In the last legislature, Senator C. C. McCarthy, of this district, introduced a stringent bill relating to collection of wages earned by men working in the woods. The bill was bitterly fought in both house and senate by the lumbermen of the state. They employed the ablest attorneys, whose services could be secured to present their plea for mercy. But it finally passed with all the objectional features. In this law's provisions, time checks are prohibited from issuing in payment of wages due. It also provides for an attorney's fee of $20 in case of suit for wages when the plaintiff is successful before the court. One dollar and fifty cents per diem is fixed as witness fees for the plaintiff while in court, and in case of travel he is allowed 6 cents per mile each way. Many of the lumber concerns seriously object to all these features of the law, and it is to be tested in the courts. The firm of Stitt & Howe have a case that will shortly be taken up and pushed to the last legal resort. Senator McCarthy, author and champion of the measure, was seen by a Herald Review representative today and questioned regarding the case. He had not been advised as to the action of Stitt & Howe, but said that he understood the law was to be tested on the grounds that it was class legislation. First, it is claimed that the provision of $20 attorney fees will not hold, because in all other cases of a similar nature only $10 is allowed; and, again, the allowance of $1.50 per day as witness fees to the plaintiff is 50 cents more than is provided in other civil actions. The mileage, too, is an additional advantage not granted to other plaintiff litigants. These features of the law were fully discussed while the bill was before the senate and house. The friends of anti-time checks, etc., won in the end. Senator McCarthy says he has no fear that the supreme court will find the law as it now stands unconstitutional and it cannot be considered class legislation any more than can the law relating to mechanics' liens or many other laws of a similar character. He argues that if the law related to only a certain variety of timber it would be class legislation, but his measure covers the entire logging industry of the state.—Grand Rapids Herald-Review.

The Author of "In His Steps" Writes Another Message.

Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, author of "In His Steps," one of the most widely read books in the English language, has written an article which establishes the practicability of the teachings of Christianity as set forth in his book, which have been put to the test in innumerable religious bodies the world over. Mr. Sheldon declined to write for publication anything relating to his individual work in applying his teachings of "In His Steps," until others were convinced that those teachings were applicable to every-day affairs. He has now taken up his pen and shown that the question "What Would Christ Do?" may be answered by every Christian, and the precept followed. "Is Christianity Practical in Wordly Affairs?" will be published in the November Ladies' Home Journal.

HE NEWS,
By John W. Eastman.

Published Every Thursday.

It is said that A. G. Bernard will start a paper at Cass Lake. He will find keener competition there than he enjoys at Walker.

Just as we were preparing to enjoy the most pleasant season of the year, Crookston stirred up a street fair and the weather has not recovered yet.

The twin city papers are again running the electrotyped "Trouble in the Thirteenth" headline. Well, anyhow, it will soon be over now—Lord make us truly thankfull

Sixty tons of flax straw is ground up daily in a flax mill at Moorhead, it being used in the manufacture of pure linen paper. Here the straw is burned and our waterpower is not half utilized.

The Warroad Plaindealer voices the sentiments of the settlers in this section when it says that:

"If the next congress doesn't amend the law relating to homesteaders on the Red Lake Indian reservation so that settlers can make final proof on their claims within fourteen months after settlement, as is done in case of land offered under the general homestead law, there will be a roar from the Lake of the Woods and Rainy river country."

There can be no objection to the passage of this amendment, and Senator Nelson, the author of the bill, has repeatedly said that it was the intention to allow settlers to prove up in fourteen months.

That primary principle of soldiers' honor, embodied in Tennyson's lines,

"Theirs not to make reply,
Theirs not to reason why,
Theirs but to do and die," is firmly implanted in the mind of our race as the highest form of heroism. Eddy Atkinson, however, thinks it's all wrong and breaks forth in rhyme, calling down an imaginary soldier, who dared to voice such a sentiment. The verses wind up with this magnificent burst of feeling:

"For whatever my lot on earth
may be,
And whether I swim or sink,
I can say with pride, 'I do not obey—
I do not obey—I think!'"

We should judge that an army organized upon the Atkinsonian principle would be an interesting, if not an edifying, spectacle.

THREE YEARS AGO AND NOW.

Chicago Times-Herald: The industrial conditions which prevailed throughout the United States three years ago have been completely reversed. Then workingmen were clamoring for employment; now employers are clamoring for workingmen. Then the factories and railroads were burdened with far more capacity than business; now they are burdened with far more business than capacity. Then the genius of manufacturers was strained to devise means whereby production should be reduced to the minimum capacity of their plants; now all the skill at their command is called into requisition to provide means whereby production shall be increased. Then the idle were struggling to secure employment on any terms, while the employed were struggling to keep wages from falling below the living scale; now no honest and capable man need want for work, and the struggle of the employees is to raise wages.

Whatever strikes are in progress today are not to prevent the reduction of wages, as was the case three years ago, but to compel their advance; whatever anxiety the employer is suffering today is not due to his inability to find a market for his products, but to meet the demand. Industrial conditions never have been and never can be so nicely adjusted—except in books written by socialistic dreamers—as to be perfectly satisfactory to humanity; in the commercial as in every other phase of life, rain accompanies sunshine and thorns are found hidden behind roses. Reports from all parts of the country tell us that the demand for manufactured goods is beyond precedent—but the mills are unable to secure hands enough to supply it; that the big steel and iron works have orders enough to keep them busy at their full capacity for two years; that millions of tons of freight is piled up for transportation—but the railroads have not cars enough to handle their business; that great enterprises are organized and capitalized—but are unable to procure the building material, machinery and general equipment, which they require, because the factories are too busy to turn them out.

An altogether new and pleasing set of problems is set before the political and social economists for solution. The men who know all about everything in hard times are called upon to explain to us just a little about something in good times, but they are as mum as gateposts. The very facts upon which three years ago Democratic orators based predictions of dire calamity have turned upon them. Protection, instead of driving the millions into idleness, has put millions into the pockets of the workers. The "accursed gold standard," instead of enslaving the masses, is making the masses independent. The precious metal which was going to be hoarded by the plutocrats is freely offered by the banks to business men in exchange for paper, by the employer in exchange for labor, and, in both cases, is as freely declined in favor of a more convenient currency. The gigantic trusts, which we were told a few months ago, were about to monopolize production and trade and enfeeble or destroy individual enterprise cut but a sorry figure, after all, when their operations are compared with the entire volume of business now being transacted. In the presence of the conditions now confronting the nation the theorists are stricken dumb.

FIFTY YEARS

Have Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Whitman Been Married.

Assisted by a large number of their friends, Mr. and Mrs. John N. Whitman very fittingly observed their golden wedding anniversary Tuesday afternoon. A bountiful dinner was served at 2 o'clock, and the afternoon was spent in social intercourse, Mr. Whitman telling many reminisense of early pioneer life. The house was very prettily decorated with flags and hot house flowers, and the day was a perfect one, in fact Mr. Whitman said it was a duplicate of the one which, a half a century before, had blessed him and his bride.

Married October 3, 1849, in the little village of Eldorado, Wis., they have been residents of the northwest practically ever since. The change in the country since then has been almost beyond comprehension. Then the great northwest was a wilderness, out of which such hardy pioneers as Mr. and Mrs. Whitman have helped to carve states—giving them the best government on earth—build cities and establish schools and churches. When the country was in danger of being divided, Mr. Whitman was among the first to enlist, and bullet scars attest to his valor while on the battle field. And they were among the first settlers of this section, too, coming here fifteen years ago from Otter Tail county and settling upon a claim north of this city. Eleven years ago he removed to what is now Thief River Falls and has seen it grow from nothing to a city of over 2,500 population.

Twelve children have blessed the union of Mr. and Mrs. Whitman, four of whom are dead. Of those present Tuesday were: Mrs. C. E. Hughes, of Aldrich; Mrs. Theodore Farrington, of Verndale; Mrs. Fred Whitney, of St. Cloud; John N. Whitman, Jr., of Excel; Mrs. H. S. Young and W. P. Whitman, of this city. Two of the children—Mrs. C. W. McCauley, of McCauleyville, and E. W. Whitman, of Pelican Rapids—were unable to be present. Mrs. Wm. Caldwell and son, Willie, granddaughter and great grandson, respectively, were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitman were in receipt of many valuable and beautiful presents, and, as they both are in excellent health, they will enjoy the use of them for years. Among the invited guests, other than those above mentioned, were: Messrs. and Mesdames Bergh, Langseth, Hans Nelson, James Meehan, Jr., Kratka, Knox, Grandy, Burns, Oscar Hanson, Robbecke, Kretzschmar, Morisette, Eberhardt, McCrum, Culver, Mussoy, Eastman, Dobner, Benzie; Mesdames Draper, Sirrine, Riddell, Lacy, C. E. Culver; Messrs. J. W. Wallin, S. T. Johnson, Frank Tilton, Dan McCarthy and Peter Newman, of this city; Messrs. and Mesdames J. H. Farris, Wm. Martin, Huggett, John Bowman and Beebe, of St. Olof, Minn.; Dewey and M. Beckslee, of Ashby, Minn.; David Wolcott, of Fergus Falls, Minn.; E. HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENT.

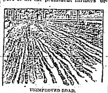
Facts Showing the Economy of Hard, Smooth Stone Roads.

The principle of the good roads movement as advocated by the wheelmen is that the common roads of the country are as important as the railway systems, the statement being made by them and being easily understood that there is not an ounce of any commodity hauled over the railroads that is not first transported by wagons over country roads or city streets. It does not matter if the commodity is manufactured articles that are loaded on cars at the factory. The raw material has first to be hauled to the factory. But the greatest hauling is done in the farming districts, and there it is that good highways are most needed.

The subject has not been given the attention and support it deserves as yet for the simple reason that private capital cannot become interested in the building of common roads, since there would be no income from the investment, such as there is in railways. Municipal, county, state and the national governments have not had the issue brought directly before them in its full significance, because it is necessary to first educate the people to the necessities of the movement. This is what is being done by the wheelmen at the present time, and it must be said to their credit that they have enlisted the sympathy and support of all the prominent farmers' organizations in the movement. With the two classes working together it is only a question of time until the movement will be made a political issue, and then will come the desired improvements.



UNIMPROVED ROAD.
[From L. A. W. Bulletin.]

The argument offered in favor of the improved roads is that they lessen the cost of repairs, make it possible to haul the largest amount of goods with the smallest animal power, save time and increase property valuations. No railroad company would expect to do business if its tracks and roadbed were in such condition as to make it either impossible to use the tracks at four seasons of the year or in using them have to lose a great deal of time and have immense repairs to make, and yet that is what the farmers and others using the common roads are doing in a comparative way every day in the year.

They make the most impracticable attempts at road building and repairing and then wonder why there is no profit in their products, which have been hauled over bad roads at the greatest expense. It has been estimated that in the states where the stone roads have been built the cost of transportation has been decreased to 20 per cent of the former figures and that the roads pay for themselves within a few years. It has been further shown that the amount lost in the different ways mentioned will more than pay for the building and repairs of these roads on the annual assessments made for them or that it costs no more each year to have good roads than it does to have bad ones.

Road Taxes Paid in Cash.

The town of Beloit, in Wisconsin, has made a wonderful improvement in its roads as the result of collecting its road taxes in cash. A. G. Powers, chairman of the town, says that, though the taxation was not increased a single cent, it is conceded by every one that more has been accomplished in two years since the adoption of the new system than in any ten years under the old management. It has worked no hardship to any one, as they have hired the taxpayers to perform this labor, paying $1.50 per day of ten hours for men and $3 per day for men with teams. The increased amount of work performed and the improved condition of the roads have stimulated and encouraged the people, who would not for a moment think of going back to the old system. Similar results are reported from the towns of Westport, Randall, Turtle and Middleton. In the last named town the tax was reduced by three-fifths and collected in cash, and far more work was accomplished than ever before.

Some of the Northern Minnesota papers are trying to tell us that a road will be built from Warroad east into Dakota. It is well known that the management of the road now being built from Winnipeg via Warroad to Port Arthur has considered the matter of extending a branch from Warroad into Dakota, but it is not thought the project will receive any serious consideration until the work under way is completed, which will require at least another year.—Crookston Tribune.

The Chippewa Indian council, which determines the policy of the White Earth band has just closed a three days session and has wisely decided not to spend another dollar of their funds in paying self constituted attorneys to remain in Washington and live high, go a killing pace and accomplish nothing, while pretending to secure something that will benefit teepee dwellers. The council also decided to not accept any more of the stock, machinery, etc., that has been issued by the government, and paid for with Indian money.

Big Saw Mill Records.

The big saw mills of Minneapolis have been smashing all past records for fast sawing recently. The C. A. Smith mill was the first to make a test run of eleven hours and sawed 596,000 feet. Mr. Smith bought an immense broom which he decorated in gay colors and stuck it up in front of his office as a challenge. The Akely mill took it up and cut 722,000 feet in the same length of time. The broom was sent over to the victor who felt safe in possession. But not so. A few days later the Backus-Brooks mill in an eleven hour run, on selected Norway logs, cut 804,470 feet of lumber, surpassing the record made by the Akely mill by 82,470 feet. Besides the lumber, 91,000 lath and 53,500 shingles were cut the same day. Mr. Smith was out of the city when he heard of the new record, and he telegraphed back to his company that he was going to have that broom back if it cost him $5,000.—Ada Herald.

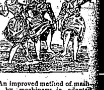
Wine Making in Portugal.

In great emergency when all the men are demanded in the vineyards, women are called to assist in wine treading. Our correspondent saw young women wearing their own garments which they skilfully gather up around them until they assume the biggest and most abbreviated of Dutchman's "britchen" costumes, while in the winery.

THIS IS A SCENE IN THE VILLAGE OF QUINTAS, PORTUGAL.



An improved method of mashing by machinery is adopted At the Speer Oporto Grape Vineyards, PASSAIC, N. J. by which a barrel of grapes a minute is dumped in the hopper, that feed two large rubber rollers, between which the grapes are crushed.

The Port Wine from Speer's Vineyards beats the world for its valuable medicinal qualities. None put on the market now, until nine years old. The Affairs of Europe

are faithfully portrayed in the original and exclusive cable dispatches which THE CHICAGO RECORD prints daily from the leading capitals of the old world. This magnificent special service is in process of being greatly extended so as to include every important city in Europe; and it is supplemented by the full regular cable service of The Associated Press.

I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies; but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

WANTED.—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. [illegible] One gives relief. COST OF BAD ROADS.

ENORMOUS SUM ANNUALLY LOST MARKETING CROPS.

The Office of Road Inquiry Estimates That $600,000,000 Might Be Saved Yearly by the Construction of Stone Highways.

"It must be plain to any one who gives the matter thought that we suffer enormous losses each year as the result of bad roads," says Otto Dorner, chairman of the L. A. W. highway improvement committee. "But what do these losses really amount to, and how much would be saved if we had uniformly good roads? We may say that it doesn't cost the farmer anything to market his crops, because he does all the hauling himself. True, but isn't his time worth something? Suppose that in place of every ton of wheat or hay or potatoes loaded on his wagon he was able, as a result of good roads, to load up two tons and to market the entire crop of his farm with just half the labor and in just half the time which is required at present, wouldn't the amount of time he could save be worth something, and wouldn't it be worth saving? Labor is the farmer's working capital, which he is continually seeking to make as productive as possible.

"If there is a method of accomplishing twice as much as heretofore with a given amount of effort, it is to his interest to discover and adopt it. Economy of labor means additional acres which he can find time to make productive. The only way to compute the value of labor is to inquire what it would cost if it had to be purchased. It has been found that if the farmers of the United States had to pay some one else for marketing their crops it would cost them on an average 25 cents every time a ton was hauled a mile nearer to market. In other words, it costs 25 cents per ton per mile. I say on an average, for it costs considerably less in many localities. Yet it costs sufficiently more in many others to make the average as large as stated.

"Taking an average of the number of miles they are traveled, it costs on an average $3.02 per ton to bring them from the farm to the railroad station. It costs only $1.87 in the northern and eastern states, but in the Pacific coast and mountain states it runs up as high as $5.12. This, of course, is for the value of the farmer's time and that of his team and wagon, or what he would have to pay some one else, at a fair price, to do his hauling for him.

"How was all this found out? It is the result of careful inquiries made by the United States department of agriculture and of estimates received from farmers in 1,200 different counties throughout the United States in reply to 10,000 requests for such information. These inquiries were made for the simple purpose of getting at the facts in the matter, so that farmers might know what could be saved by the building of good roads and might better be able to determine how much they could afford to spend for building them.

"Further inquiries were made into the cost of hauling crops in the good roads districts of Europe. These were made through the United States consuls stationed in various European cities, who were instructed to find out the exact facts in the matter. It was found, as a result of their investigations, that the average cost of marketing a ton of farm produce in Europe was only 8 6-10 cents per mile as against 25 cents in the United States.

"It appears, then, as the result of careful investigation, that it costs us in the United States just about three times as much to market our farm crops as it does in European countries, where good roads have been built. Farmers there are able to make their loads three times as great as ours, owing to better roads.

"But we are not obliged to go to Europe for illustrations as to good roads, for we have, fortunately, a few localities in our own country which furnish such examples. Mecklenburg county, N. C., not long ago began the construction of a system of macadam roads. It was customary there to load up two bales of cotton on a wagon to be hauled by a mule team. The mules could draw this load very well during dry weather. After a rain, when the roads were soft, the load was too much for even a pair of tough mules. After the county had begun to build roads this load was doubled several times, and it was found that the same two mules were able to haul as much as 12 bales, or six tons, in place of their former load, which amounted to only a single ton. And more—the improved roads made it possible to haul this load in wet and dry weather alike, for, being properly built of stone, they were fit for use immediately after a heavy rain.

"The office of road inquiry in the department of agriculture has estimated that over $600,000,000 might be saved annually in the United States by the construction of good roads. The statistics of the department of agriculture show the total amount of all kinds of grain raised in the United States. The amount consumed on the farms was estimated as being offset by a large amount of other articles hauled by farmers on the public roads. By reducing this all to tons and using their inquiries into the cost of hauling one ton as a basis it was found that the total cost of haulage amounted to $946,414,665 and that two-thirds of this enormous amount might be saved each year.

"This estimate tallies with a similar estimate of the hauling done on our country roads which was made by Mr. John M. Stahl, the secretary of the Farmers' National congress. He based his figures upon the statistics of railroad and river transportation covering farm products."

HARNESSING A HORSE.

How to Adjust the Various Parts. Abolish Blinders.

It is strange, but is nevertheless true, says a writer in Our Animal Friends, that almost every one who has had any experience, however slight, in harnessing a horse believes that he understands thoroughly how to do it. A very simple rule for fitting the bridle is that the bit should touch the corners of the horse's lips without dragging upon them, but too frequently this is disregarded, and the horse suffers a deal of misery from that error alone.

Again, and sometimes in conjunction with the mistake we have just mentioned, the brow band is so short that it draws the metal rings of the rosettes against the roots of the horse's ears, where their pressure causes acute pain. All metal ornaments of any weight at the top of the crown piece, behind and between the ears should be removed because of their pressure upon the base of the brain.

If blinders are used, care should be taken that they stand well out from the horse's eyes; otherwise, by pressing upon the eyeballs, they cause intense pain and also obscure the range of vision. In all cases, unless the horse is so accustomed to blinders that it is absolutely unsafe to drive him without, they should be dispensed with, for they add nothing to a horse's appearance, and he is much more comfortable without them. In fact, colts should be trained to drive with an open bridle, and it were well if laws were enacted to that effect.

How to Make Orange Honey.

Mix together the juice of three oranges, the grated rind of one, a small cupful of sugar, a tablespoonful of butter and the beaten yolks of two eggs. Cook over a slow fire, stirring constantly, until about as thick as honey. Serve cold. This is excellent with all kinds of warm bread and griddlecakes.

How to Make Tomato Mayonnaise.

Select medium sized, perfectly ripe, smooth tomatoes and peel them with a very sharp, thin bladed knife. Do not scald them to remove the skins easily, as scalding destroys the flavor and texture. After peeling lay them in a salad bowl and stand them in the refrigerator. In the meantime make a good stiff mayonnaise. When ready to serve the tomatoes, cut deep gashes across them, dividing them in quarters, nearly to the stem end side, but not quite severing them. Season them with salt, sprinkle them well with capers, pour on a little tarragon vinegar, dress them round with a deep fringe of water cress, pour the mayonnaise over them and serve.

How to Roast Clams.

Wash the clams in cold water, put them on the broiler, and place that over a clear fire. As they open take them from the broiler. Remove the upper half shell, placing the remaining half shell on a plate or platter. Pour over a few drops of melted butter and serve.

How to Treat Canned Goods.

When ready to use, open the can two covered for that time. This will often dissipate the close, "tinny" taste, so often noticed in canned goods. In using peas, asparagus or any canned vegetable, drain and throw away all the liquor. Cover the vegetable with cold water and let stand for at least half an hour. Drain and heat over hot water, adding a bit of butter and seasoning to taste. Always empty cans as soon as opened. The majority of the cases of poisoning from canned goods occur through neglect of this precaution.

How to Make Beef Extract Custard.

Beat an egg until white and yolk are well mixed and then add a few grains of salt, a teaspoonful of beef extract and half a cup of milk. Strain into a buttered custard cup, set in a pan of hot water and bake in a slow oven until firm.

How to Be Healthy.

A French physician who claims that we all might be strong and beautiful if we would gives the following rules for health: Don't drink tea or coffee. Drink pure water. Eat grapes, apples, raisins and figs. Eat a few salted almonds daily. Don't eat much animal food. An egg or two a day, soft boiled, instead of meat. Eat an orange every day or so. Walk two or three miles a day. Bathe the whole body daily in tepid water. Don't fret, don't worry; be calm and quiet.

How to Take Paint From Glass.

To remove paint from window glass make a strong solution of potash, saturate the spots of paint with this and let it remain until nearly dry. Then rub off with a woolen cloth.

How to Cement Iron.

Iron can be cemented to iron so firmly as to withstand the blows of a steam hammer by the following process: Take six parts each of sulphur and white lead and one part of powdered borax. Mix well together. At the moment of application wet the mass, or sufficient of it for the purpose, with strong sulphuric acid, apply a thin layer of it to each of the surfaces to be united and then bring together under strong pressure and leave so.

How to Curry Sausages.

Fry the sausages until brown. Then pour a little water into the frying pan, dredge in curry powder to taste and enough flour to thicken the whole. Simmer for ten minutes, add a squeeze of lemon juice and stir until the sauce is done. Add the sausages, heat again and serve with a border of boiled rice.

Married.

Monday forenoon the residence of Mrs. Victoria Pepin, on Bottineau ave was the scene of a quiet wedding, where two of Red Lake Falls' young people were made happy for life, the contracting parties being Wilfrid F. Smith, son of Supt. H. V. Smith, of the Red Lake Falls Lumber Co., and Miss Lydia Pepin. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Fr. Fayolle in the presence of only the intimate friends of the family, after which the merry party partook of a bountiful wedding dinner, which had been prepared by the bride's mother.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Smith are well known in this city, the young lady having been a resident here for many years. Mr. Smith came here two years ago from Michigan, since which time he has been in the employ of the Red Lake Falls Lumber company, having had charge of logging and driving operations on Red Lake.—Red Lake Falls Courier.

THREE MONTHS

Will It Take to Make a Survey of the Red Lake.

About fifteen surveyors in charge of T. Milton Fowble arrived in the city last Saturday and left for the Red lake the first of the week. They had a complete camping paraphernalia and over eight tons of freight. The party will be divided into three crews and a complete survey of the shores of both the upper and lower Red lake will be made. They expect to complete their work about the first of January, and upon their report will depend whether or not a government dam is to be put in at the outlet of the Red lake.

GOLDEN JUBILEE.

The Semi-Centennial Number of the Pioneer Press.

The St. Paul Pioneer commenced its publication in 1849, and in the latter part of October, 1899, the St. Paul Pioneer Press will fittingly commemorate the completion of fifty years of newspaper existence by issuing a mammoth number, containing not less than fifty-two pages, including a magnificent cover illustrated with four colors. Newsdealers will be supplied with these papers only as they are specially ordered for that day. Every person desiring to secure and preserve a complete, interesting and illustrated history of Minnesota should place their orders with the local news dealers without delay.

The Author of "In His Steps."

The author of "In His Steps," the famous religious book, of which over three million copies have now been sold, has been induced to answer, in an article which he has sent to the Ladies Home Journal, the question which unconsciously comes to the mind after reading his book: "Is this plan practicable in our present daily life?" Mr. Sheldon does not evade the question, but answers it in a direct and vigorous manner, and tells exactly what he believes would be the effect of his plan upon modern business methods and present-day social life.

STAGE LINES

Between This City and the Red Lake Country.

B. A. Young is making arrangements to operate three stage lines between this city and the Red lake during the coming winter. He expects to visit the Red Lake Agency and all of the different lumbering camps, taking in supplies and mail. The passenger business is generally quite good and the undertaking will undoubtedly be profitable.

October Apportionment.

There is $890,000 to distribute in the October apportionment among the common schools of the state, says the Pioneer Press, and about 325,000 children to share in it—one county still estimated. The per capita is $2.73.

The October apportionment last year yielded $2.15 per capita, and the year before $2.50. In '96 it was higher—$2.90—but there are 30,000 more children to share it now than three years ago. The sum available for distribution is $40,000 larger than it was that year. So the school population is growing even faster than the school fund.

The distribution to county auditors will be made this week.

A YOUNG HUNTER.

15-Year-Old Charlie Upsata Kills Four Bears.

It is doubtful if Roosevelt's Rough Riders retired from the field of victory at San Juan with more pride over their accomplishment than did the 15-year-old Charlie Upsata, son of Rev. L. O. Upsata, who lives five miles southeast of the city, when on Monday morning he "laid out" an old she bear and three cubs with four shots from a Winchester, directed with an accuracy that would have reflected credit on Dewey's gunners at Manila.

The son of the worthy minister got up bright and early on the first school day of the week, as all boys who desire to make a mark in the world should, and the consequence is that he has now money enough to start a bank account, besides a record that would be a credit to any professional hunter.

Young Charlie discovered the bear family in the act of taking their after-breakfast exercise, which all who are acquainted with any respectable bear family know, consists in climbing jack-pine trees. This particular bear mother had a very nice lot of cubs who followed her wherever she went without being told more than once, which accounts for them all being in one tree and Charlie lost no time in getting them down, showing remarkable nerve and marksmanship.

How many of the Bemidji boys of Charlie's age, who sulk around in the back alleys all day, smoking the deadly cigarette, instead of going to school would have faced four bears singlehanded? — Bemidji News.

AN ORPHAN FARM

Which No One Owns ---Has Good Buildings.

There is a farm in Polk county, with buildings on it, that nobody owns, though two men, neither of them having any title to the orphaned land, are fighting over it. Years ago the first claimant settled on it as government land, built a shack and barn, proved up on it, and found at length that the land he had a patent to as his homestead was the quarter section next to the one he lived on. It was simpler to take the land he had a patent to than to begin a new entry for the land where his buildings were. Claimant No. 2 came along presently, discovered that this was vacant land, with the advantage of buildings ready made, and jumped it. He cultivated it and added to the improvements and in time proved up and got a patent. Now this would be almost incredible except that there are documents to prove it. He got a patent to still a third bit of land adjoining on the other side.

Two men had lived on the farm, and each had done his best to get title, and still nobody owned it. Meantime the federal government set it down as swamp land, and deeded it to the state in 1880. And in 1894 Auditor Bierman included it in his famous deed to the Great Northern, and the railroad company refused to accept the land. The state insists that it belongs to the railroad, and will not have anything to do with it. The railroad denies ownership and will have nothing to do with it. And nobody else has the shadow of a claim to it. The two men who came near owning it are contending in the courts for the buildings they left there. If the real estate had an owner the buildings would belong to him. But, being derelict, one of them may be able to establish his claim.

Anybody that wants a nice improved farm may have one by going there and sitting on the land for fifteen years, but it would probably be cheaper to buy the land elsewhere than to fight through the litigation that is likely to center round this farm which nobody owns.—Crookston Tribune.

THE NEWS,

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

Thief River Falls is the best wheat market in this section of the state.

The elevators are just now putting a lot of money in circulation among people who need it most.

The Filipinos are described as a simple people. No wonder Atkinson has a fellow-feeling for them.

All of the Populist and Democratic papers in this section of the state are booming Dewey for president. Wonder what they will do when the Republicans nominate him in 1904?

Duluth is to have a good roads convention Oct. 17, and it should be attended by representatives from this section. If all the supervisors of every town in Red Lake and Marshall counties would attend it would undoubtedly do more good than attending all the political conventions to be held in the next ten years.

The Norman County Index this week prints an item which illustrates the opportunities the Red River valley affords to "hustlers." Last spring Bosworth Bros. bought the E½ NW¼, section 5, McDonaldsville—a mile and a half from Ada. They paid $12 50 per acre. There being a fraction over 80 acres, the exact amount paid for the land was $1,004.50. They broke the land in the spring and seeded the same to flax. Last week they threshed and after putting aside as much flax for seed as they used in the spring they sold the crop and received a check for $1010—$5.50 more than they paid for the land in the spring. Thus the land cost them just what the work they put on it is worth.

How the Democrats do hate a machine! The silver wing of the Massachusetts Democracy has held its convention and nominated its delegates to the presidential convention of 1900. The Democrats of the state didn't want to do this and fully realized that they were making themselves ridiculous by doing it, but the George Fred Williams' machine had full swing, and through the fear that a sentiment might be created prejudicial to Bryan, between now and the time of holding the national convention, resolutions were jammed through and the delegates chosen instructed for Bryan at the 1900 convention. There would have been just as much sense in choosing delegates and instructing them for the convention of 1903.—Princeton Union.

LIQUID AIR.

Self Culture: Liquid air is just what its name implies. It is not a liquid distilled from some newly discovered vegetable or mineral, but is simply air, such as we breathe, made so cold that it takes the form of water. The fact that air can assume that form is a recent discovery, as is also the method of obtaining the intense cold necessary to this result. The temperature required is 312 degrees below zero—a temperature farther below the coldest arctic winter than that is below a tropical summer. Yet persistent efforts have at last developed a method by which it is really produced. When air is cooled down to this degree it changes to a misty vapor and gradually forms into drops that fall like rain to the bottom of the vessel containing it. By a proper arrangement it may then be drawn off into an open receptacle, ready for use.

When seen in an open vessel it might be mistaken for boiling water, as it simmers and gives off a white vapor. When first poured out it boils violently, throwing off a cloud of vapor that rolls down the sides of the vessel. But as soon as the receptacle has cooled to the temperature of the liquid it quiets down to a simmer, which continues until all has evaporated and returned to air. This may require several hours if care is taken to keep the vessel away from every conductor of heat. But if it be placed on a plate of iron, or even a block of ice, it will boil violently and very soon mingle with its native air. If poured out into a conductor, as iron or ice, it will assume the gaseous state so rapidly as to amount to an explosion.

As a freezing agent the power of liquid air is terrific. It freezes pure alcohol very rapidly, and freezes mercury so hard that it may be used as a hammer to drive nails into hard wood; and so thorough is the chill given that the mercury retains the solid state for several minutes. It will sear living flesh like red-hot iron, and may take the place of all chemical cauterizing in surgery. As a refrigerator, liquid air will easily be controlled, and it can be made to lower the temperature of a room very slightly or to produce a degree of cold that no life can endure for a minute. As an explosive it has certainly great power, and experiments already made indicate that it may be used in both gunnery and blasting; and it may thus take the place of both gunpowder and dynamite.

WATERPROOF VARNISH.

A good waterproof varnish for old umbrellas and storm coats is made of two parts of turpentine, three parts of linseed oil and one part of powdered litharge. Mix these ingredients together thoroughly and boil in a water bath—that is, in a vessel floating in boiling water—the same as the cabinet maker melts his glue. When the varnish is thoroughly boiled so that every part is dissolved, remove it from the stove and apply with a brush while warm. It should be painted over the article to be varnished with the same care as if it were paint. If it is an umbrella, open it wide and spread the varnish smoothly. After it has dried a second coat may be applied if needed.

When the varnish has dried, it will not be stiff and cracky, but will show great elasticity. This varnish can be employed in a great variety of ways. Ordinary cloth can be varnished with it two or three times, and it will be waterproof and almost as serviceable as oilskin or waterproofing cloth. Old rubber coats that have begun to leak can be renewed by giving them a painting with this waterproof varnish. It can be kept on hand for a long time for general use. All that is needed when required for some special work is to heat it up again to the proper temperature.—New Voice.

How to Clean White Goods.

Put half an ounce of salts of tartar into a bottle with half an ounce of sal ammoniac, add half a pint of warm water and shake the bottle until the salts and the sal ammoniac have dissolved. Stretch the stained portion of the fabric over a small basin and pour some of the liquid over it. If the satin has been recently made, it will soon disappear, but if the linen has already been washed it will probably be necessary to repeat the process several times, and the fabric should be very gently rubbed now and then. When the mark is no longer visible, rinse the linen at once in hot water and then wash it well with soft soap and hot water and let it dry in the sun.

How to Make Turkish Salad.

Put a pint of cold baked beans in salad bowl, slice two small onions fine, pour over them a little cold water, press with the hand to extract the strong taste and add the onions to the beans, together with two fresh tomatoes sliced thin. Season with saltspoonful of salt, one-fourth as much pepper and add slowly two tablespoonfuls of olive oil and one tablespoonful of lemon juice. Toss with salad fork until the dressing is all through the salad, decorate with a border of lettuce leaves and a ring of olives and set on ice until ready to serve.

How to Make Toast Relish.

Brown pieces of bread in the oven until very crisp. Break into inch pieces, and to two cupfuls pour over the following: Heat one cupful of milk to the boiling point. When it boils, stir into it a piece of butter the size of a walnut carefully mixed with one teaspoonful of flour. Stir until smooth. Season with a saltspoonful of salt and a dash of pepper. Cover all and let stand a moment. This is a very good way to utilize scraps of stale bread.

A man who is overshrewd in his business relations is pretty sure to learn in the course of time that the world is shrewd enough to protect itself against him.—Somerville Journal.

BEST WIDTH OF TIRE.

RESULT OF A SERIES OF TESTS AND EXPERIMENTS.

For All Purposes a Tire Six Inches In Width of Tread Gives the Most Satisfactory Results—Length of Axles Should Be the Same.

Six inches is the width of the tire which will best serve the farmer for all round purposes. This is the result of a long series of accurate tests and experiments made at the Missouri agricultural experiment station. The experiments extended over a period of 20 months, in all kinds of weather and on all kinds of roads and farm lands.

Director H. J. Waters, who conducted the experiments, made it his purpose to arrive at the exact truth of the matter and had two wagons specially arranged for the tests. They were of exactly the same weight, one being fitted with ordinary one-half inch tires, the other with six inch tires. Each was loaded with exactly 2,000 pounds.

These wagons were hauled over all kinds of dirt and gravel roads, both wet and dry, and over various kinds of farm lands, the pull exerted by the horses being carefully measured by the help of a tractometer. It was found that the same power needed to draw the narrow tired wagon with its 2,000 pound load on a gravel road would have pulled a load of 2,482 pounds on the wide tired wagon. The same power required to draw the 2,000 pound load on narrow tires over dirt and gravel roads when these were dry and hard was found sufficient to draw a 2,530 pound load on the wide tired wagon under the same conditions, and it was shown that when these roads were deep with mud, but partly dried at the surface by a few hours' sun, the same power required to draw the 2,000 pound load over them on the narrow tires would pull a load of 3,200 pounds on the wide tires.

Director Waters states that the conditions under which the narrow tires offer an advantage over the wide ones are "unusual and of short duration" and that "through a majority of days in the year and at times when the dirt roads are most used and when their use is most imperative the broad tired wagon will pull materially lighter than the narrow tired wagon."

He states that "a large number of tests on meadows, pastures, stubble land, corn ground and plowed ground in every condition, from dry, hard and firm to very wet and soft, show without a single exception a large difference in draft in favor of the broad tires. This difference ranged from 17 to 120 per cent." As a result of all experiments conducted he says, "It appears that six inches is the best width of tire for a combination farm and road wagon and that both axles should be the same length, so that the front and hind wheels will run in the same track."

Other experiments have shown that much less power is required to haul a loaded wagon if it be provided with wide tires. One of these tests was made by the officers of the United States department of agriculture at the Atlanta exposition in 1895. Two wagons, both weighing alike with their loads, were drawn over a wet piece of clay road, one wagon having two inch tires, the other with four inch tires and with the rear wheels farther apart than the front wheels, so as not to run in the same track. It was found by the use of the tractometer that twice as much pull was required to haul the two inch tired wagon as was required for the other. That part of the road traversed by the narrow tired wagon was cut and rutted to a depth of several inches, while the tires of the other wagon had rolled the road into a smooth and hard surface.

Experiments made at the agricultural experiment station in Utah have demonstrated that a 1½ inch tired wagon drew about 40 per cent heavier than one with three inch tires and weighing with its load the same as the other. At the Ohio State university it was shown that a wagon with three inch tires and loaded with 4,480 pounds could easily be hauled by two horses over an ordinary dirt road in good condition and with a hard surface, while with a narrow tire half as much was a full load for a double team.

The general use of wide tires would do a great deal to maintain our roads in good condition. Narrow tires necessarily wear ruts and cut up the road surface. Water and narrow tires work together to destroy streets and roads of all kinds, whether macadam, dirt or gravel.

The value of wide tires as road rollers has been strikingly illustrated in Onondaga county, N. Y. The Solvay Process company of Geddes, in that county, were accustomed to hauling heavy loads of stone for 4½ miles from the quarry. To test the wide tire theory they built several wagons having four inch tires on the front wheels and six inch tires on the rear wheels and with the rear axles longer than the others, so that the tracks of the rear wheels would just lap outside of those made by the others. The result of the use of these wagons was to produce a hard, smooth, compact surface, and the road, having been filled so as to raise the middle or "crown" it, is thoroughly drained at the surface and always fit for use with the heaviest loads. Loads of eight tons are frequently hauled over them and instead of tending to cut up the road serve to roll it harder and harder. The superintendent reports, too, that the improved condition of the road has reduced the cost of hauling the stone from 80 cents per ton to 60 cents, or 25 per cent.

Rubber Rollers are Used for Crushing the Grapes to Make Speer's Port, Burgundy, Claret and Other Wines,

Which, as is well known, rival the world in excellence, for invalids and aged persons, and are made from the Oporto grape grown on vines imported from Portugal forty years ago. The soil of northern New Jersey, containing iron, is just suited for them. Mr. Speer, however, uses the improved way of mashing the grapes. He employs large rollers of rubber run by an engine which crush grapes at the rate of a barrel a minute. Speer's Wines, especially the Port and Burgundy now in market, are of very old vintage, and have no superior. Physicians far and near prescribe them for weakly females and aged persons. They are blood-making, adding iron to the system, and tend to prolong life. Extensively used at parties, weddings and general family use. ☞ Sold by Druggists and Grocers who deal in Wines.

ACCIDENTALLY.

Robert Kittelson Shot Himself Last Friday.

Last Friday afternoon at about 1:30 Robert Kittelson accidentally shot himself with a shot gun and is at present in a very serious condition. The accident happened on the Red Lake river about six miles from this city. Mr. Kittelson is part owner of the Viking, and was taking a crew of men up the river. He was seated on the bow of the wangan, which was being pushed ahead of the steamboat, endeavoring to shoot some ducks. He laid down the gun between two boxes and it accidentally went off, the charge striking him in the head, on the right side, just above the ear. The boat was at once stopped and the men aboard did all in their power to relieve him. John Pederson came to this city and summoned Dr. Francis, who arrived at the boat at about 4:30. Kittelson was then in an unconscious condition, being very weak from loss of blood. The wound was dressed and he regained consciousness. Dr. Grundy remained with the man all that night on the boat, and on Saturday morning he was removed to his home in this city. Monday he was taken on the train to Crookston, where he will be placed in a hospital and can receive better care.

Kittelson's condition is indeed very serious, and if he survives it will be little less than a miracle. The wound is just above the right ear. It extends horizontally, and is about 3½ inches long and 1½ inches wide. The scalp and skull are entirely removed. Several small arteries have been severed, and about two ounces of brain substance have oozed out of the wound.

Mr. Kittelson is well known in this vicinity and has always been exceedingly popular. He homesteaded a claim up at the Red lake, which he sold this spring to the Thief River Falls Lumber company, and removed to this city. He has a wife and seven small children. His wife accompanied him to Crookston.

How to Take a Vapor Bath.

Place a pail three parts filled with boiling water under a chair with a cane seat. Have ready two hot bricks which have been treated in the fire, place them gently in the pail of water and sit down upon the chair, covering yourself entirely with a blanket, letting the latter fall round the chair so that the steam may be kept. Have a warm blanket ready at the end of half an hour and wrap around you. Get into bed with it on.

How to Make Tomato Wine.

First take your ripe tomatoes and cook them in enough water to let the juices flow. Then squeeze the fruit, and to each half gallon of juice allow one quart of water, and to each gallon when mixed add 3½ pounds of sugar. Set the wine in a cask to ferment. After the lees sink to the bottom strain off the wine, and, if required, add more sugar. Set to ferment again, and afterward clarify the wine with isinglass.

How to Clean Jewelry.

Wash well in warm soap suds, to which 10 or 15 drops of sal volatile has been added. Dry and place in boxwood sawdust till perfectly dry, then rub with a chamois leather. Pearls must not be wetted, but exposed to the air as much as possible to prevent their turning yellow. Opals should be kept from fire and heat, as a high temperature renders them liable to split. Coral can be washed in soap and water.

How to Press Flowers.

Place them before they have time to wither between sheets of drying paper. Spread the flowers out in as natural a way as possible, with neither leaves nor petals crumpled. Lay on the top of them several sheets of drying paper, then more flowers, putting a stout board over all and heavy weights. The paper must be changed several times each day.

How to Candy Peel.

Soak the peels in cold water and change frequently. Then put them in sirup till they become soft and transparent. Take out, drain, roll in sugar, and let the sun pierce them. Repeat this three or four days till the peel is three times its former size. Put away in glass jars.

How to Restore Velvet.

To restore velvet that has been spotted by rain dampen thoroughly on the wrong side and then hold over a hot iron to steam, taking care not to let it touch the iron.

THE MARKETS

The Latest Quotations.

There is not but a small amount of wheat being marketed in Thief River Falls at present, although there is a great deal more in the country tributary to this city than ever before. A gentleman well posted on the situation said to a News representative the first of the week that there were several reasons for this, the chief of which was the fact that the farmers were in no great need of money and also that very little threshing had been done in the country north and west of here. He stated that it was in his opinion that Thief River Falls would never see all of the wheat marketed before next summer. Heretofore it has been sold during the fall, but now the farmers propose to hold their wheat and take advantage of any raise in the price which is liable to come later on.

The demand for oats is considerably greater than the supply, and for that reason the price being paid in Thief River Falls is considerable above the market. Farmers are making great mistakes in not taking advantage of this opportunity. There will be considerable lumbering done in the vicinity of Red lake this winter and the lumbermen are desirous of shipping their supplies up by the steamboats, and are willing to pay more for oats now than they will when it freezes up.

Beef is in good demand and there is very little being offered for sale. Most of the farmers desire to increase their herds and consequently very few cattle will be shipped out of the country. The local butchers have considerable trouble in securing their supplies of beef.

The demand for hogs is considerable greater than the supply. Pork is being daily shipped from below and from here to the lumber camps up at the Red lake. Farmers in this section should raise more hogs, as the market for pork here is as good, if not better, than in any other place in the state.

The market for chickens, turkeys, ducks, eggs, butter, etc., is very good, in fact it is considerable better than in any of the surrounding towns, and the farmers are commencing to realize it. All of the above products are consumed in Thief River Falls, while at Warren and other surrounding towns the merchants are obliged to ship them to the cities, and of course cannot afford to pay as much for them as the Thief River Falls merchants.

are faithfully portrayed in the original and exclusive cable dispatches which THE CHICAGO RECORD prints daily from the leading capitals of the old world. This magnificent special service is in process of being greatly extended so as to include every important city in Europe; and it is supplemented by the full regular cable service of The Associated Press.

I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

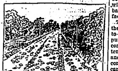
WANTED.—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. R·I·P·A·N·S, 10 for 5 cents or twelve packets for 48 cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

BINDING MATERIAL.

Should Equal the Hardness of the Stone of the Road.

Every stone road unless properly built with small stones and just enough binding material to fill the voids presents a honeycombed appearance. In fact, a measure containing two cubic feet of broken stone will hold in addition one cubic foot of water, and a cubic yard of broken macadam will weigh just about one-half as much as a solid cubic yard of the same kind of stone.

To insure a solid roadway and to fill the large proportion of voids or interstices between the different pieces of broken stone some finer material must be introduced into the structure of the roadway, and this material is usually called a binder or by some roadmakers a "filler."



STONES IN THE ROAD.

There used to be much contention regarding the use of binding material in the making of a macadam road, but it is now conceded by nearly all practical and experienced roadmakers, both in Europe and America that the use of a binding material is essential to the proper construction of a good macadam road. It adds to its solidity, insures tightness by closing all of the spaces between the loose irregular stones and binds together the macadam crust in a way that gives it firmness, elasticity and durability.

Binding material to produce the best results should be equal in hardness and toughness with the road stone. The best results are therefore obtained by using screenings or spalls from the broken stone used. Coarse sand or gravel can sometimes be used with impunity as a binder, but the wisdom of using loam or clay is very much questioned. When the latter material is used for a binder, the road is apt to become very dusty in dry weather and sticky, muddy and rutty in wet weather.

ROOF OVER THE ROAD.

Road Expert Harrison Turns the Tables on the Farmers.

Road Expert E. G. Harrison of the department of agriculture meets with some humorous experiences in the course of his travels over the country building experimental roads and spreading the doctrine of good roads. Frequently these are in the form of puzzling questions from quizzical farmers and often a statement which seems to offset his knowledge of road building.

Some time ago he was attending a meeting of farmers who were invited by officials of the League of American Wheelmen to hear General Harrison and to learn from him what he proposed to do with the experimental roads he was to build in the township. On this occasion one of the audience spoke up and asked:

"How deep do you propose to build your road?"

"Eight inches," was the reply.

"Why, man, that won't be any use in this country! Why, sir, the frost goes eight feet into the ground!"

The rest of the farmers sided in with this remark and for some time had a little fun at the general's expense. But he is always ready for such things, and it did not take him long to turn the tables on them.

"You farmers have sheds on your premises, of course," he replied, "and you have often in the spring of the year, when the frost was coming out of the ground, been obliged to lay planks to enable you to reach those sheds without getting in the mud?"

They gave their assent to this statement, and he continued:

"When you reached the shed, you found the ground hard, firm and dry under the roof, and yet the frost had nearly an equal chance to get into the ground there as it did outside." The farmers saw the point.

"The whole philosophy of road building," continued the general, "is to build a roof over your road through which the water cannot penetrate, and the frost will amount to little. Now, gentlemen, what I propose to do is to put a roof over your road. Of course it is impracticable to place this roof up so that you can drive under it, but I shall place the roof on the road so that you may drive over it."

On another of the occasions when the L. A. W. gave him a chance to address a similar meeting he was asked the value of and the application of drains to dirt roads.

"Have you as a boy going barefooted, as all boys should, noticed that by working a piece of moist ground with your feet you create mud? Of course you have, and so has every boy that ever lived. In that little act you have the secret of bad roads. The moisture in the ground, aided by constant travel, creates the mud holes and ruins them. Now take a sponge and soak it full of water. You will find that the big holes do not fill, but the fine pores are the ones that hold the fluid. Place the sponge in a sieve over a basin, and you will find that it will become dry in a short time, the water seeking the basin below. That is just the principle involved in making good dirt roads. We place the drain through the center of the roadway, and the earth above holds the moisture, which, like the water from the sponge, seeps down to fill the vacancy below in the drain and is carried off."

BATH BRUSHES.

How to Use and Care For These Adjuncts of the Toilet.

The flesh brush, or bath brush, is an article of toilet too seldom in use, too generally neglected and too seldom owned. A bath without a good flesh brush is but half a bath at the best. It should be recognised as one of the necessities—necessary to all members of the household. It restores circulation, removes effectually and thoroughly from the pores of the skin all the waste accumulations that are daily thrown off and gives to the whole body that glow and feeling of freshness and cleanliness that are so pleasant, healthful and satisfying. A cloth or sponge does not cleanse the skin as a brush will. Once accustomed to the brush bath, a bath without will be unsatisfactory.

The bristle bath brush is better than the rubber one. Prices vary according to quality and kind. That it pays to purchase a good one is proved by the constant everyday use of a brush that ten years ago cost $3 and to all appearances is as good, so far as service is concerned, as ever. It has been taken care of, always rinsed and well dried with a towel after using and placed in a window to finish drying out. It is not left standing upon its bristles, but lying on its back.

Once a day is not too often to take a bath, nor is once a day too often to change clothing worn directly next the skin. Especially in summer should the nightrobe be a fresh one at least twice a week—no starch or use of irons about it, but simply made, loose, long and large and of the thinnest, coolest of muslins. With such care of the body, refreshing night sleep, an afternoon nap, wholesome and simple food to live on and time for quiet and relaxation from care for a time, every woman may preserve her good temper, her good looks and her attractiveness to those who love her best and to all whom she knows.—Christian Work.

How to Fry Eggplant.

Cut an eggplant in slices a quarter of an inch thick. It is not necessary to peel it. Sprinkle each slice lightly with salt and let it lie for an hour. Then dip each slice in dry flour or very fine bread crumbs and drop one by one carefully into a frying pan, with enough smoking hot fat to swim all. When they are cooked to a russet brown, lift each slice out separately with a skimmer. Lay them all on a piece of brown paper to drain a moment, place them on a platter covered with a folded serviette and garnish with sprigs of parsley and quarters of lemon.

How to Cook Dried Haddock.

One ripe red tomato, half a dried haddock, one ounce of genuine butter and sufficient rice to border a small dish. Boil the rice in water and dry, but do not harden the grains. Put the tomato and butter into an enameled saucepan and cook over a gentle heat until the tomato is done. Scald and flake the haddock, carefully remove every bone and piece of skin, add the fish to the butter and tomato, stir in a beaten egg and let the mixture cook gently until the egg is just set. Then pour the whole on a dish bordered with rice and serve at once.

How to Grill Trout.

Score the fish with cuts through the skin about an eighth of an inch apart. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and moisten with melted butter. Heat the gridiron, rub it over with butter or salad oil, lay on the fish and grill for about ten minutes over a quick fire. Baste occasionally with melted butter, turn once or twice to brown both sides, and when cooked lift carefully and slip on to a hot dish. A paste brush is the best thing for treating the fish to a basting of butter.

How to Make Savory Canapes.

Bone and shred two sardines, three anchovies, six oysters and a few shrimps. Cut a small head of celery very fine and pound a shallot and mix it with some cress and the fish. Pour a little mayonnaise sauce over all. Fill some brioche cases with the mixture and run a little butter round the edges. Garnish with some lobster coral and a hard boiled egg chopped fine, put on the top of each, with some aspic jelly, roughened with a fork, round the canapes.

How to Clean Diamonds.

The stones should first be washed in warm water and yellow soapsuds with a small but not too hard brush. Rinse and dry them carefully with a soft cloth or silk handkerchief and put them into a box containing boxwood dust. Move them about in this for some time until they seem perfectly dry, free them from the powder and polish with tissue paper.

How to Make Lemon Sauce.

Lemon sauce for fish is always a nice change and easily prepared as follows: Put into a saucepan two ounces of butter and half the juice of a good sized lemon, with pepper and sauce to taste. Beat all together till quite hot and thick, but do not allow it to boil. Remove from the fire and add the beaten yolk of one egg. Serve with carefully boiled fish.

How to Make Simple Chicken Pie.

Cook the chicken as for a fricassee, removing some of the large bones. Bake separately, the day before, pieces of puff paste, cut in diamond shape and pricked with a fork, and when ready to serve place these diamonds on top of the fricassee and set in oven until the pastry is heated through.

How to Make Rosemary Wash.

A simple decoction of these flowers in the proportion of one handful to one pint of boiling water will make a useful hair wash. Add half a wineglassful of rum and a few drops of rosemary oil.

Rubber Rollers are Used for Crushing the Grapes to Make Speer's Port, Burgundy, Claret and Other Wines,

Which, as is well known, rival the world in excellence, for invalids and aged persons, and are made from the Oporto grape grown on vines imported from Portugal forty years ago. The soil of northern New Jersey, containing iron, is just suited for them. Mr. Speer, however, uses the improved way of mashing the grapes. He employs large rollers of rubber run by an engine which crush grapes at the rate of a barrel a minute. Speer's Wines, especially the Port and Burgundy now in market, are of very old vintage, and have no superior. Physicians far and near prescribe them for weakly females and aged persons. They are blood-making, adding iron to the system, and tend to prolong life. Extensively used at parties, weddings and general family use.

HOG CHOLERA.

Carelessness the Chief Cause of Spreading the Disease.

Hog cholera has been depleting the herds of swine in this section of the state to such an extent that the state board of health deemed it advisable to send a representative up here to investigate thoroughly the existing conditions. Dr. J. G. Annand was the man who came, and, in an interview with the Crookston Journal, just before he left for St. Paul, he said:

After spending over a week in this vicinity investigating the outbreak of hog cholera I found the disease to have spread over quite an area in Polk and Red Lake counties, in the townships that are the most thickly settled.

In Polk county the townships infected with cholera are Lowell, Andover, Hammond, Crookston, Gentilly and Kertsonville; in Red Lake county, Louisville, Red Lake Falls, Lake Pleasant and Terrebonne. I found that little or nothing had been done to check the spread of the disease and that inquisitiveness, visiting back and forth of neighbors, dogs being allowed to run as they choose to do and negligence on the part of the hog raiser who did not properly care for his dead hogs, are accountable for the spread of this dread disease. Upon inquiry I found that cholera has existed in this vicinity for a number of years—last years it was in Louisville township, of Red Lake county, along the Red Lake river—and that some negligent fellow who was too indolent to bury his dead animals threw them into the river. This, with using the pens year after year where cholera has been, has been the origin of this outbreak.

Now with a knowledge of the disease there is no reason why it cannot be stamped out. If any one should be so unfortunate as to have the cholera break out in his herd of hogs he should report it at once to the town supervisors. The state laws passed by the legislature in 1897 read as follows:

Sec. I. "Any person who knows of or has reason to suspect the existence of any contagious or infectious disease in any domestic animal shall forthwith give notice thereof to the local board of health of the town, village or city, where such animal is kept."

And further, H. F. No. 358, Section 1.

"It shall be the duty of the owner, or any other person having in charge any swine that have died of any disease, immediately upon the fact of such death by disease coming to his knowledge, to bury the same at least three (3) feet below the surface of the ground, or burn the same so that the carcass is consumed. No person shall sell, give away or order for sale any swine that have died of any disease, or have been killed on account of any disease. No person shall convey upon or along any public highway, or other public ground, or and private land, except his own, any diseased swine, or swine that have died or have been slaughtered on account of any disease. It shall be unlawful for any person negligently or willfully to allow his hogs or those under his control afflicted with any disease to escape his control or run at large.

Sec. 2. Any person convicted of a violation of this act shall be fined in any sum not less than ten (10) nor more than one hundred (100) dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not to exceed thirty (30) days.

Will Log 26,000,000.

No sooner through with his railroad contract at Chester, Montana, than back to the timber once more, S. C. Bagley—who at his age would put to shame many a younger man by his persistent and untiring attention to business—passed through Fosston on Wednesday morning on his way from Minneapolis to Bemidji, east of which place he expects to log about 26,000,000 feet of pine this coming winter for the Red River Lumber company. His nephew, W. C. Bazzell, who accompanied him east, has sold out his business interests in Crookston and will assist Mr. Bagley in his large contract. The logs will be hauled to Bemidji and Graceland and taken by cars on the Brainerd & Northern to the Walker mills at Akely to be sawed.

A car load of heavy horses, purchased in Minneapolis by Mr. Bagley for use in the woods, arrived here yesterday afternoon and were unloaded. They will be driven east from here.—Fosston Thirteen Towns.

Benefits All Receive.

Why a man pays taxes and what he gets in return therefore, is figured out in this manner by an exchange: "A man with a thousand dollars' worth of property is likely to pay from $10 to $15 a year taxes. For this, if he lives in the city, he gets the services of the police in securing quiet and observance of the law; he gets protection from fires; he gets education for his children; officials to look after the streets and sidewalks; new laws enacted by the legislature; officials to see that no irresponsible insurance companies prey upon the public; the benefits of the courts at a nominal figure for the litigant. If he lives in the country he gets bridges, roads and many of the above enumerated advantages also. Sometimes the taxpayer finds it hard to spare the money he pays for taxes, but he would find it a great deal harder to get along without what his money pays for."

THE NEWS,

By John W. Eastman.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

The glory of the iceman is departed. How would you like to be the plumber?

The Boers are off the reservation and the shooting season is open in the dark continent.

England has sent the 13th Riflemen to South Africa, and poor Oom Paul is up against it.

Thirteen has at last ceased to be the unlucky number for those who search for news in the Minneapolis papers.

How thankful we should be to the council for allowing the Thief River Falls Lumber company to remain in town!

The city hall ring, Burkee, Bergh and Anderson, are not politicians—nay, nay, my child, they are Statesmen.

A "hungry politician" is a man who wants the city run on business principles—see the Press for further information.

Talk about your winter resorts, with mill wood at seventy-five cents a load, what's the matter with Thief River Falls?

"We should pray that the great Democratic party may win in the next presidential election."

Aguinaldo's proclamation.

Let us work for our city and not for the politicians. And let us also elect aldermen who will work for our city and not for $25 a year.

An English scientist has discovered that mosquitoes can be destroyed by draining ponds and applying kerosene to the breeding places. This comes a little late to effect the price of oil this year, but look out for a boom next summer.

Wm. Hillgrove, of Red Lake Falls, is one of today's (Monday's) transients in the best city in the valley.—Crookston Times.

This must be an error. Mr. Hillgrove is not registered at any of the hotels in Thief River Falls.

Well, Dewey is here and Funston is here and the volunteers have returned from the Philippines. Now how about that anti-imperialist sentiment which was to sweep the country "when the boys get back?" There is no press censor holding them now.

Way down in Alabama the editor of the Mobile Register applies the old mathematical method of "reductum ad absurdum" to the Anti-imperialist arguments, and with disastrous effect to the "antis." He says, "If the fashion prevails of bewailing our nation's efforts to maintain the dignity of its flag in the face of the enemy, a lot of sayings of our national heroes will have to be revised," and suggests the following changes:

"Give up the ship."—Lawrence.

"Be sure you are right, then apologize for it."—Davy Crockett.

"We have met the enemy, and ours are theirs."—Oliver Hazard Perry.

"Wait until you see the whites of their eyes, boys; then run."—Andrew Jackson.

"Don't hold the fort; I am running."—W. T. Sherman.

"D—n the torpedoes; take a sneak."—David Glasgow Farragut.

"I propose to get out of this line if it takes all summer."—U. S. Grant.

"There stands Jackson like a stone wall, but he is a fool to do it"—Gen. Bee.

"When you are ready, Gridley, you may skedaddle."—Dewey.

It is not Dewey but Dewey's popularity that the Democratic spell binders desire to enlist in their lost cause when they so clamorously urge him for president. Shattered and beaten at every point, the disorganized mob of warring factions, having nothing in common but hatred of the present administration, has vainly cast about for a new issue which would excite popular enthusiasm, and, after running an endless gamut of "anti's," at last throws issues to the wind and, in desperation, turns to the Man of the Hour for its salvation. Vain hope. If Dewey desires the presidency it is his, but it will not be a Democratic victory. It will be an expression of the will of the people without regard to party.

But the hero himself is silent. Should he but speak, the broken forces of Democracy would enthusiastically troop to his call. No one knows this better than Dewey. But he is silent. If any aspirations to the presidential chair are his, this silence can have but one meaning. It must mean that the man who once said "a Democrat is a trader in peace and a traitor in war" does not desire the nomination at the hands of that party.

FOR THE GOOD OF THE CITY.

"Let us work for our city and not for the politician."

We delight to get after such a man as Mr. A Citizen, who breaks forth under the above head in last week's issue of the Press. It's so easy. To the pious statement which heads the article we say Amen. But let us analyze his words.

"No reasonable man wants an alderman to do the work which falls to his lot for less."

But in the majority of the cities of this state the councilmen serve for the good of the city—and not for $25 per annum. It must indeed be a "hungry politician" or bankrupt who makes a $25 salary a political issue when the good of the city is at stake.

"Without the city attorney there would be little restraint upon the the criminal classes."

And yet the city attorney so tangled up his last case—a simple case of assault—that he had to send for the county attorney to help him out—and it is usually so.

"Under the present administration the city has improved as never before."

A big manufacturing plant having located here—unsolicited by the council—and brought us men and money, the administration calmly claims all the credit It's too funny to discuss.

"Without any increase of our taxes or municipal indebtedness."

But the tax rate is very high at present, and no substantial improvements have been made during the past year. Four thousand dollars is collected from saloon licenses alone, and adding to this the amount collected from taxes on real estate, taxes on personal property and other licenses, fines, etc., it makes a very respectable sum each year. Enough surely to keep the streets in the present condition and pay the city officials without increasing the "tax rate or municipal inecbtedness."

"The city authorities and the managers of the great lumber manufacturing establishment are getting along without any trouble."

Good idea. We suppose the administration is entitled to great praise for not trying to drive the lumber company out of town. Most any old council would know enough to let alone a concern which is the making of the city, and asks no favors.

"Why should we seek to change the present pleasant relations?"

Now we are getting down to the root of the matter. "All we want is to be let alone," is their cry. They don't want to change the "present pleasant relations." Having a good time, thank you, running things to suit themselves and $25 per annum helps some when a man is broke. It is the old wail of the mossback, "Don't disturb us, we are having 'pleasant relations' and everybody is a hungry politician but us."

Let us see if it is better to elect an energetic and business like council who will actively work to build up the town, or to stick to the old mossback ring, whose only pride is in drawing their $25 regularly and in not going out of the way to stir up trouble with the concern which supports the prosperity of the city.

It is well. Let us work for our city and not for the politicians.

FACTS TO PONDER OVER.

Below we give a list of twenty cities in Minnesota, population of each and the salary paid to the mayor of the same:

City.	Population in '95.	Salary of Mayor.
Minneapolis,	192,833	$2,000
St. Paul,	140,292	$2,500
Duluth,	59,396	$1,200
Winona,	20,649	$500
St. Cloud,	9,178	None
Faribault,	7,616	None
Brainerd,	7,031	None
Little Falls,	5,116	$1
Austin,	5,087	None

Moorhead,	3,290	None
Waseca,	2,780	None
Lake City,	2,616	None
Wabasha,	2,545	None
Thief River Falls,	840	$40

The objection to the amount paid to the mayor and city councilmen of Thief River Falls—it is only $165—is not so great as the principle of the thing. There is no denying the fact that the city is in a very poor financial condition, and unless aldermen are elected who will work for the good of the city and not for $25 per annum, the condition will not be improved. Just now we need to have every cent of our revenues to spend in a business like way. The roads leading into the city are in the poorest possible condition, and are continually proving to be a source of revenue to our neighboring towns. Farmers living twelve miles north of here are hauling their wheat to Warren—a distance of twenty-four miles—simply because the roads to that market are in such condition that it is possible to haul a load more than twice as large as the one they could haul to Thief River Falls. Trade that litigimately belongs to Thief River Falls should not be forced away.

Yesterday Bert Young with a crew of men commenced work on a drainage ditch on the Robbecke farm, west of the city.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior, Land Office at Crookston, Minn., September 21, 1899.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before D. H. Bakke, United States Commissioner for the District of Minnesota, at Newfolden, Minn., on November 8th, 1899, viz: Theodore Sorum, H. The Title to Sections 16 and 36 on Reservations.

A dispatch from Washington states that Associate Justice Harlan, of the United States supreme court, has granted a motion of Senator Davis to docket the case of the state of Minnesota against the federal government for possession of sections 16 and 36 on Indian reservations in Northern Minnesota. The case will now come up on its merits and be heard by the full bench to determine the question of ownership. Senator Davis filed a bill in equity setting forth the situation in detail any urged action in order that delays might be avoided if the matter went through the court below. The effect of this decision will delay the interior department as to final action on the claims of George and Nellie Lydeck for portions of section 16 on Cass Lake townsite. In fact, the entire question of ownership of the townsite is involved. Attorney General Douglas will submit a brief and Senator Davis will probably submit an oral argument.

McGrain, who is more at home on the hurricane deck of his steamboat, which plies between Thief River Falls and Red lake, than in navigating the crowds on the platform of the Crookston depot, stopped off the train here on Saturday night, and took the short cut up Second street. He knew nothing of the excavation for the new depot walls, and, there being no light hung out to warn people of the danger, he fell to the bottom of the trench. One of the train hands let down a ladder and he climbed out, somewhat muddy, but fortunately uninjured.—Crookston Times.

Convict Labor on Roads.

If the plan to put convicts at improving the highways is feasible, it should be carried out. It will not in any way interfere with the laboring man who so often protests against the employment of felons at work which deprives him of an opportunity to make a living. The open air, outdoor life and wholesome labor would result in making better men of criminals, while the prison walls affect the average nature in the opposite way. It will improve morals and roads at the same time, thus coming nearer to the idea of a civilized nation.

Road Notes.

Strange as it may seem, no two causes are closer allied than those of the farmer and the cyclist.

Haag and Scheveningen, two cities in Holland, are to be connected by an ideal road which will have a carriage way, a track for cyclists and a footpath.

A stone road poorly built for want of successful rolling, even with excellent material, can be but a poor highway at best.

A MAN'S USE.

"The longer I live the more unnecessary seems to me the companionship of man," the first vice president was saying emphatically. "Except for a few primitive uses, the world might very comfortably progress without him. Certainly he is no aid to society, no particular good in the daily offices of life, no strong factor in its daily pleasures, no"—

"I beg your pardon," interrupted the charter member. "Do you ever go into a candy store?"

"The question is irrelevant, but I do, madam; occasionally I do."

"Do you go generally with a gentleman or alone?"

"Madam, as I before stated, I go sometimes into a candy store, but not often, and always unaccompanied. In fact, I find such difficulty in getting waited upon that"—

"I know it!" gasped the charter member exultantly. "I know it! To attend defenseless ladies in candy shops is one of the first uses of man. I've gone alone, I've wandered to the bonbon case and besought a well dressed damsel behind it to put me up a pound of marrons glace. She never heard me"—

"Then patiently I have moved on to the chocolate division and ordered some of the dusky mixed, but the maiden fair was invariably waiting with lavish smiles upon some bewildered man and was asking him how he would like the box tied—with heliotrope ribbons or with pink! So *I have progressed from marrons to pepper*mint drops and then back to molasses candy and burnt almonds.

"Perhaps at the end of the line I found a new girl, all unaccustomed as yet to the business, and she would deign to fill me a box with exactly the sort of sweets that I didn't want."

"I confess that is a good deal like my own experience. But what of it?" asked the vice president impatiently.

"Simply that I found a remedy. Now when I want to get a box of candy in a hurry I just coerce one of my male friends or relatives into accompanying me. Immediately one of the pretty girl clerks comes smiling up and we are served instanter! Anyhow, I've discovered another vital and important use for man. We need him every time we go into a candy store!"

"Of course she does," whispered the vice president savagely, "for then he takes the check and she takes the candy. No wonder she has good times and money in the bank!"

"Really," said the oldest member, beaming over her glasses, "I wonder if that doesn't explain an odd little experience of mine?"

"Tell it, tell it."

"Well, a few months ago, having come from an exhausting club session, I met my brother-in-law and we went into one of those nice candy shops and soda water places all in one. I thought I would take a cup of chocolate or beef tea to refresh me, but my brother-in-law saw a sign announcing milk punch, and suggested that we try some. It was good. It tasted of milk and it tasted of something else. I liked it.

"A few days later Clarissa and I went in together and ordered milk punch. It came—and it tasted just like milk! I was disappointed, but I know how things will occasionally go wrong, so I said never a word. In the meantime I had told several other women about the delicious milk punches at X.'s. They went after them, but told me that they really couldn't see what I had raved over. The beverage seemed to them a good deal like milk dashed with a little nutmeg and sugar.

"Again and again have I sought the same counter for the same beverage, but never again have I found it as I did with my brother-in-law."

The club sat silent for a minute or two, and then began an ominous musical swelling through the ranks and increasing in volume until it passed from "Let's go and try for ourselves" to "We will go at once."

And they did go. They invaded that soda water place, occupying every seat around the counter and every spidery metal chair about the hard little round tables so shining and suggestive of artificial teeth. As one woman they ordered milk punch! It came, and it was milk! There was a flash of comprehension from member to member, and then the plaint began at the top and was taken up by each along the line, exactly as soldiers answer to the roll call.

"I want spirits in mine!"

"I want spirits in mine!"

"I want spirits in mine!" from the stern rotund of the president to the frightened squeaking treble of the newest member.

The individual hairs stood on end upon the heads of the white jacketed and aproned young men behind the counter, and the girl clerks cowered over against the mirrors so that their reflection would be doubled, and they should feel the safety of numbers.

"Are they escaped from the asylum?"

"Are they clean crazy?"

"Have they been drinking?" passed from terrified mouth to mouth.

The proprietor of the store came along. The oldest member was nudged by the president, and she replied to his inquiry:

"Sir, I want a milk punch, and I want it just the same as the one I got here with my brother-in-law. I want"— But her voice trailed off into a broken whisper of affright.

The eyes of the proprietor brightened with understanding. He tasted a little of the repudiated punch, put it down with a wry face and called to his white aproned minions, "Here, fix these punches up in a gentlemanly way for these ladies."

In an aside he said disgustedly, "Oh, these old gray headed women who drink."

But the grumblers got their rightful punch, and it was the kind in which the spirits moved. For in one instance complaining brought what was desired, and to this the members point as justification for the fundamental policy of their organization.

It was a triumph because a case in point where women exacted the same public service as men, and upon the same terms. But it takes a lot of women to do that, and it is not given to all of us to go about in crowds.—Exchange.

The Hand and Disease.

The study of physiognomy and of the hand is curiously interesting. It is now generally admitted that a person's character can be gauged with a very considerable degree of accuracy by a visual analysis of the features, and the same remark applies, with less force perhaps, to a study of the hand. The fact that in certain diseases the expression of the face and the appearance of the hands are fairly reliable indices of the nature and progress of the disease is too well known to require further emphasis. It would certainly appear to be more likely that the study of the hand is deserving of closer attention than is usually bestowed on the subject by medical men in general practice.—Exchange.

The Affairs of Europe

are faithfully portrayed in the original and exclusive cable dispatches which THE CHICAGO RECORD prints daily from the leading capitals of the old world. This magnificent special service is in process of being greatly extended so as to include every important city in Europe; and it is supplemented by the full regular cable service of The Associated Press.

I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

HOUSEHOLD SOAPS.

How to Make a Good Article at Very Small Expense.

A capital soap for housecleaning and clothes washing purposes is made in the following way: Procure a half pound tin of 98 per cent of caustic soda (which may be obtained from a grocer), which will cost about 12 cents, and put it in a large basin or other earthenware vessel containing one quart of cold water. By stirring it will instantly get very hot. Let it stand till cool. This is called "soda lye." In a larger earthenware vessel melt three pounds of any kind of fat without salt, and for this purpose save all refuse fat or grease of any kind from the table, melted and the pure fat strained off.

Allow it to cool until it just begins to set, and then pour the soda lye into it in a continuous stream, stirring until it becomes like honey. Then pour the mixture into a wooden box capable of holding six pounds of soap. The box should previously be lined with a piece of damp calico. Well cover it up with a piece of old blanket and let it stand until next day in a cool place to set, when you will have six pounds of pure soap at a cost of about 12 cents for caustic soda plus the price of fat, which has the advantage of bleaching calico without injuring the fabric.

How to Devil Clams.

Twenty-five clams, chopped fine; two eggs, well beaten, save enough to dip them; chopped parsley, butter the size of an egg, brown butter and flour together, pour clam juice and eggs into the brown butter, enough cracker dust to make a soft batter, cayenne pepper, fill shells, dip in egg and cracker and fry.

How to Make Fish Pie.

Melt an ounce of butter or clarified dripping in a saucepan and cook with it the same quantity of flour for a few minutes, stirring the mixture all the time so that it may not change color. Add half of a small onion, sliced, a sprig of parsley and a small slice of fat bacon and let the ingredients fry for five minutes. Then pour in gradually rather more than half a pint of milk and stir until the sauce is smooth and thick. Season with salt, pepper and a little grated nutmeg, let simmer for 15 minutes and pass through a gravy strainer. Butter a pie dish and place in it a layer of cooked fish, divided into flakes, cover it with sauce, then add more fish and more sauce alternately until the dish is nearly full. Spread some well boiled rice, which has been mixed with a little butter, a tablespoonful of tomato sauce and seasoned with salt and pepper, over the top of the pie. Then scatter the rice thickly with browned crumbs, place some little pieces of butter on them and bake the pie in a hot oven for about 15 minutes.

How to Crinkle Eggs.

Heat to a boil half a cupful of cream or rich milk and slip six eggs gently into the pan. Let them come to a boil, cover and remove to the back of the stove. Keep very hot for ten minutes. Just before serving, dust with salt and pepper and dot with bits of butter.

How to Cure a Head Shaking Horse.

In speaking of the peculiarities of the colt Limerick, Ben Kenney told me that he cured him of the annoying habit of throwing his nose out and shaking his head by simply trimming all the long hairs out of his nostrils says a writer in the Horse Review. The wind blew the hairs back in his nose and tickled him so that he couldn't keep his head still. Kenney said that he believed long hairs in the nose were just what caused so many horses to shake their heads when trotting against the wind.

How to Make Spiced Beef.

Mince boiled beef, fat and all, rather fine. Add salt, pepper, pounded cloves, a little thyme and some finely chopped parsley. Stir into this three whole eggs and some thick fresh cream. This may be baked in a border mold or in a round tin, with a cup set in the center to give the shape of a ring. Serve with tomatoes filled up in the middle and any good thick sauce, according to taste.

How to Make Hot Pot.

Two and a half pounds of cold roast pork, potatoes, seasoning, stock. Put some slices of the pork in a deep greased pie dish, sprinkle with pepper, salt, chopped onion and sweet herbs and then place a layer of sliced potatoes. Put in a few lumps of dripping here and there and repeat till all the meat is used. Cover the potatoes and bake in a moderate oven for 2½ hours.

How to Make Cheese Fondu.

Put one tablespoonful of butter in the chafing dish and when melted add one cup of fresh milk, one cup of fine bread crumbs, two cups of grated cheese, a saltspoonful of dry mustard and a dash of cayenne. Stir constantly and add just before serving two eggs beaten light.

How to Make Mushroom Sauce.

Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter and add two tablespoonfuls of flour, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper and half a cup each of chicken stock and cream. Add the beaten yolk of one egg and chopped mushrooms and let stand over hot water for five minutes.

How to Make Striped Sandwiches.

Cut and butter very thin slices of white and brown bread. Place together, having within each pair a crisp lettuce leaf and one teaspoonful of grated cheese. Roll and hold with a small pick.

How to Remove Oil Spots.

The trying yellow spots so often left by sewing machine oil on white goods may be removed by rubbing the stain with a cloth wet with ammonia before washing with soap.

TESTS FOR CLOTHS.

How to Tell Pure Wool, Silk and Linen From the Adulterated.

Expert buyers use acids to determine the presence and amount of cotton in a so called wool fabric. It is necessary to use sulphuric acid, and this is extremely dangerous to handle in the pure state. Even in the diluted form great care must be taken not to allow a drop of it to touch anything but the fabric to be tested, as it will burn and discolor. To avoid trouble let the chemist make a 50 per cent solution. Ten cents' worth is enough for several tests.

A sample one or two inches square is sufficient for experiment. Place this in a glazed earthenware or porcelain lined dish. Put in enough of the solution to cover the cloth well. Then over a slow fire steep until change is noted in the sample. Allow the solution to cool before removing the bit of goods.

Compare the sample tested with the original cloth. If the former looks like a sieve, it indicates that part of the warp yarns are cotton; if the fabric has fallen apart, they are all cotton, while if only a little sediment remains the fabric is practically pure cotton. If unchanged after drying in a dark, cool place, the stuff is all wool. The acid solution dissolves the cotton in the fabric, and its only action on wool is to turn it a dirty red color.

The quality of silk fabrics is tested in a similar manner, but a different acid is used, and it is not necessary to boil it. Five cents' worth will be enough for many tests. Remove a few of the warp yarns from the sample and dip them in the solution one at a time.

If they are silk, they will turn yellow; if of cotton or other vegetable fibers, they will suffer no change. Repeat the process with the weft yarns. It simplifies matters to know that when cotton is used to adulterate silk fabrics it is always found in the warp.

The presence of cotton is so easily detected in thin linen fabrics that it seems surprising so few women know the test. Take a handkerchief you know to be pure linen, moisten the finger slightly and touch it lightly on one side of the fabric. It will absorb the moisture, and a wet spot will appear upon the opposite side. Repeat the same test upon a handkerchief you know to be all cotton or upon an equally thin piece of cotton cloth. Unless the finger be pressed firmly against the cotton the opposite side will remain dry.

The above test is useless in determining the amount of cotton in a linen fabric. For this purpose, caustic soda or caustic potash, a 5 per cent solution, is sufficient. Purchase 5 or 10 cents' worth and dissolve a heaping teaspoonful in about a quarter cupful of water. Remove several of the warp yarns and immerse them in the liquid for 15 minutes. If the yarn be softened so that it pulls apart easily, it is pure linen; if it be as strong as before immersion, it is conclusive evidence that it is cotton. The solution causes cotton yarn to contract and gives it additional strength.

How to Polish Glassware.

Tumblers and wineglasses should be washed in hot water and rinsed in cold and should be dried with a clean towel as soon as possible and when perfectly dry rubbed with tissue paper. For cruets, decanters, etc., tear up some clean newspapers into pieces about the size of a 10 cent piece, put into the bottles, half filled with warm water, and give bottles a rotary motion. When clean, decant, and a little practice throws out the paper. They will be as bright as new. To clean glasses, wineglasses especially, which have become discolored on edges use cigar ashes, friction and a damp cloth.

How to Stuff Leg of Mutton.

Select the meat and have it boned by the butcher, with the request that the bone be sent to you with the meat, because it will make an addition to the stock pot. Fill the cavity with an ordinary bread stuffing, with a few finely chopped mushrooms mixed with it, and sew the meat into compact shape. Cook upon the rack in a dripping pan for an hour and a half and serve with a brown sauce made from the gravy in the pan and mixed with chopped mushrooms.

How to Stuff Sardines.

Bone the sardines carefully and drain the oil from them. Lay them in tarragon vinegar for 15 minutes; take out and sprinkle with pepper; mince and mix to a smooth paste one tablespoonful of chopped shrimps, one dessertful of capers, a little butter and pepper. Stuff the sardines with this mixture, lay two on a lettuce leaf on each plate, and serve with brown bread, thinly sliced and buttered.

How to Saute Bread.

Cut the crust from thick slices of bread and place two tablespoonfuls of butter in the chafing dish. When very hot, brown the bread on both sides, take it out and put in two tablespoonfuls of grated ham, two tablespoonfuls of grated cheese, a gill of cream and a dash of cayenne. Mix all well together and when very hot spread the mixture on the toast slices.

How to Bake Eggs in Tomatoes.

Cut the tops from a number of firm tomatoes and carefully remove the seeds. Break into each a raw egg, dust with salt and pepper, sprinkle with chopped parsley and place in a hot oven until set. Serve each with a spoonful of cream sauce.

How to Keep Butter Fresh.

Half fill a soup plate with water and put the butter dish in it. Then spread a wet cloth over the dish, letting the ends dip into the water in the soup plate. The cloth is then kept constantly moist and the butter firm and cool.

Why Hogs Are Hogs.

Perhaps a hog is less cleanly in his habits than other animals, but of this we have serious doubts. That he is dirty is a fact, but it is more often caused by his surrounding than the hog's fault. Who has not seen the hog pen where the entire enclosure was a sea of mud, with occasional puddles of green scum that was too filthy to look at. In this terrible slough of despond the hogs wade about from place to place, apparently seeking a place of habitation that would afford a moments relief. The pen seemed beyond the endurance of the meanest hog that ever furnished fat for an Irish boarding house. How a farmer with such a hog pen can ever expect to grow meat fit to eat is more than a person with a sensative stomach can devine. No wonder why hogs die of cholera, children of diphtheria and people generally of dyspepsia, and all the ills resulting from eating improper food. A farmer who raises hogs in that manner and stealthily imposes them upon an unsophisticated people ought to be prosecuted for selling diseased meat, because it is not only diseased, but absolutely filthy.

MORE LAND

Will Be Opened for Settlement in the Spring.

The government inspectors of surveys, who recently went into the country north of Red lake, are busy at work, and the result is that a large amount of government land will in the spring be offered to claim-takers at the Crookston land office. Last week the survey of 139 and 140, range 40, were inspected and the inspection of the surveys of towns 159 and 160 in range 40, town 149, in ranges 40 and 41, and towns 159 and 160, in ranges 35, 36, 37, 38 and 39, the latter being in the reservation. The towns in ranges 40, 41 and 42 are partially settled and when open for entry will afford land seekers an opportunity to select some very good homesteads.—Crookston Times.

A Crazy Indian.

White Earth has a crazy Indian, says the Norman County Index, a violent maniac, and doesn't know what to do with him. The agency people referred him to the probate court of Becker county. Judge Wilkins referred him to the state board of corrections. State Agent Gates referred him to the hospital managers. Probably he will be sent to one of the hospitals at the charge of the agency. He is not a state charge. The government has made heretofore no provision for insane Indians. There is an insane hospital being built in South Dakota, where poor Lo may be taken when lemon extract or other poisons have unsettled his mind. Indians have not had much use for insane asylums. Insanity is a disease of civilization. Mr. Gates says in all his experience he never saw but one crazy Indian.

WHY BEEF IS HIGH

It Is Due Entirely to Several Natural Causes.

The Breeders' Gazette, Chicago, in a recent issue devotes considerable space to a consideration of the present price of beef in the leading markets of the country. The paper shows a condition that warrants the advance the food has taken and that will probably prevent its ever going much lower unless there is an appreciable increase in the number of cattle in the country as compared to the inhabitants of the land. The article follows in full:

For a load of 1,650-lb. short horn steers $7 per cwt., or $115.50 per head, was paid in the Chicago market last Monday. The so-called "beef combine" that has been such a nightmare to some people for many years, seems at last to have lost its grip. At any rate prices are having a continuous advance and the coterie of buyers that were popularly supposed to meet in conference every morning and "fix" the price of cattle for the day have bid the market up on one another until it had reach a range of values where the heart of the grower of fine cattle is once more made glad and his wallet lined with greenbacks galore. Possibly it may now dawn on some people that, after all, the old and inexorable law of supply and demand is still in active operation, and that in the face of the resistless natural tides that enter into commercial channels individuals and so-called combinations are as so much driftwood on the flood.

The Gazette is neither the apologist nor the defender of the packing fraternity. They have shown an astonishing capacity for taking good care of themselves, but the effort being made in certain quarters to charge the advance in the retail price of steak to the capacity of the "beef trust" evinces rather more familiarity with the course of contemporary politics than with facts. Here are some figures, official in their origin, that throw a flood of light upon the rise in the price of beef:

Year.	Total Cattle.	Per 1000 Pop.
1890	36,849,024	580
1891	36,875,648	575
1892	37,651,239	573
1893	35,954,186	531
1894	36,608,168	531
1895	[illegible]	[illegible]
1896	32,085,409	440
1897	30,508,408	414
1898	29,264,000	389
1899(estimate)	27,994,225	365

It is known that in the face of this shrinkage in stocks there has developed a vastly increased demand owing to unparalleled industrial and commercial activity and rising wages. The price of beef has gone up, not because a "trust" controls in large measure its contribution, but in spite of the efforts of the great slaughterers to keep values on the hoof at a low ebb; and the cattle-grower, who has following the Gazette's admonitions as to the quality of his stock is now basking in the sunshine of unalloyed prosperity. The feeder who buys his cattle in a time like this has to exercise much caution to aviod loss, but the breeder of good cattle was never so free from care. He is the man who is profiting primarily by this advance in the price of beef. The public known that he represents the one class upon which all national prosperity rests, and this being the case, those who are called upon to pay a round price for a prime sirloin are not grumbling. It is doubtful if the dealers and slaughterers are making any large profits at current quotations for cattle and dressed product then when a lower level of values for both prevailed.

It is the producer's inning sure enough, and especially it is a harvest time for the producer who has had the good sense to use pure-bred bulls.

CITY CONVENTION

And Other Local Political Gossip.

The city convention was held in the city hall last Thursday evening, and an exceptionally strong ticket was nominated. C. L. Dobner was elected as temporary chairman and W. C. Smiley temporary secretary. The chair appointed a committee on credentials and resolutions and an adjournment was taken for 30 minutes. The committee on credentials reported that the following were entitled to seats in the convention:

From the First ward:
- R. B. Vining,
- C. E. Traverse,
- C. C. Jackson,
- Charles Schuster,
- W. T. Mullarky.

From the Second ward:
- C. A. Robbecke,
- N. W. Tarrant,
- Phil Zeb,
- H. G. Dobner,
- W. C. Smiley.

From the Third ward:
- S. T. Johnson,
- C. L. Dobner,
- John Kivel,
- John W. Eastman,
- Frank Bourque.

The temporary organization was then made permanent and nominations for mayor were made. Carl Kretzschmar received a majority of the votes on the first ballot and on motion it was made unanimous. J. W. Wallin was unanimously nominated for treasurer. For aldermen at large four nominations were made, C. J. Knox, W. T. Mullarky, Hans Langseth and John Kivel being nominated. An informal ballot resulted in W. T. Mullarky receiving 11 votes, C. J. Knox 8, John Kivel 7 and Hans Langseth 4. Mr. Mullarky and Mr. Kivel made short speeches, thanking the convention, and stating that they did not care for the honor. The next ballot resulted in W. T. Mullarky being nominated, however, he being the only nominee having a majority. Another ballot was taken, which reresulted in S. T. Johnson being nominated. The following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas: the burden of official salaries borne by the taxpayers of this city is not only excessive and unnecessary, but is not usual to the practice of cities of like size and resources; and

Whereas: the condition of the roads connecting this city with the large and important agricultural community naturally centering here is such that much of the trade, which should be ours, is diverted to other and more distant commercial centers, owing to the difficulty of hauling produce to market at this point, thereby working great injustice and hardships to the merchants and to the city at large, therefore be it

Resolved: by the people of the city of Thief River Falls, in convention assembled, that we do most earnestly and respectfully recommend to the mayor and council about to be elected to represent and administer the corporation for the coming fiscal year.

(1) That all due economy consistent with the dignity and proper performance of city affairs be exercised by them during their term of office.

(2) That the salary of $40 per annum, now paid to the mayor, be abolished, as is usual in cities of like size.

(3) That the city council serve without pecuniary compensation, as is usual with cities of like size.

(4) The expensive and wholly unnecessary office of city attorney be abolished.

(5) That the salary of the city clerk be reduced from $300 to $100 per annum.

(6) That the office of day patrolman and that of street commissioner be consolidated, and that the fire engineer be required to act as night patrolman, thus not only insuring more complete police protection, but reducing the salary list by one third.

(7) That the funds made available by such retrenchment and such other monies as can be saved by a careful and business like administration of the city finance be used for the purpose of so improving the roads leading into this city that the trade due us by our geographical position shall be drawn into its ligitimate channels, and that the condition of our neighboring highways shall be no more a reproach to this city and a source of revenue to other markets.

And, furthermore, the convention would respectfully recommend that inasmuch as the fire department serves the city voluntarily, and often at a great sacrifice to personal convenience and business, the council exercise great discretion in using the veto power, with which it is vested, in regard to the election of fire department officers, and that it interfere with such elections only upon extraordinary occasions, allowing the department the greatest freedom in selecting its own officers.

C. J. Knox undoubtedly would have been nominated as an alderman at large had not the question of his residence been brought up. It can be stated on good authority, however, that Mr. Knox is a resident of Thief River Falls.

The aldermen nominated in the three different wards are exceptionally good men. John Aos, the nominee in the first ward, is a man who has always attended strictly to his own business and is a good level-headed man. He will undoubtedly be elected by a big majority.

Thief River Falls does not possess a man with sounder judgment than the nominee for alderman in the Second ward, Matt Barzen. [illegible] all subjects, and will undoubtedly make a very efficient alderman. Men of Mr. Barzen's stamp are needed on the council.

L. P. Stranahan, the candidate for alderman in the Third ward, is a sure winner. He is connected with the Thief River Falls Lumber company, a concern that pays more taxes than any other institution in the city, and will undoubtedly be in favor of spending the public money in an economical way.

S. T. Johnson or W. T. Mullarky, the two nominees for aldermen at large, need no introduction to the people of this city. Their reputation for honesty has never been questioned and they are both deeply interested in the future of Thief River Falls. Mr. Mullarky, however, despite of the fact that he received the nomination, will not be a candidate. He wishes to devote his entire attention to his business, and on this representation his friends—and he has a lot of them, too—have decided to yield to his wish, and his name will not be printed upon the ticket. Mr. Mullarky would have made an excellent alderman, and it is doubtful if the city possesses a man with sounder judgment.

Hans Langseth, it is understood, will be an independent candidate for alderman at large, thus filling the place made vacant by W. T. Mullarky. Mr. Langseth has been a resident of this city for a number of years. He has been a successful business man and a good citizen. He is thoroughly honest and straight forward. There is but one objection to his election as an alderman and that is the fact that he is liable to be influenced by the unprincipaled crowd that is supporting him. He would undoubtedly have received the nomination in the convention had it not been for that fact.

Upon the solicitation of many tax payers, C. J. Knox has decided to become a candidate for alderman at large. Mr. Knox is one of the most enterprising citizens of Thief River Falls, and, if elected, can be depended upon to make things hum. He is the largest individual owner of real estate in the city and will be interested in every proposition that will be beneficial to Thief River Falls.

Tomorrow is the last day on which certificates of nomination can be filed.

Owing to the fact that there will be a contest in but few of the wards, the vote to be polled this fall will probably be very light. All of the aspirants for office that have been mentioned are good men, and the city affairs for the next two years will be conducted in a business like way.

Why They Stammer.

Stillwater Gazette: The other day a little girl gazed at a picture of a number of ships and said, "See the flock of ships." We corrected that little one by telling her that a flock of ships was called a fleet, and a fleet of sheep was called a flock. For the benefit of the foreigner who may be trying to master the intricacies of our language, we may here add, with reference to nouns of multitude, that a flock of wolves is called a pack, and a pack of thieves is called a gang, and a gang of angels is called a host, and a host of porpoises is called a shoal, and a shoal of buffaloes is called a covey, and a covey of pretty girls is called a galaxy, and a galaxy of ruffians is called a horde, and a horde of rubbish is called a heap, and a heap of oxen is called a drove, and a drove of blackguards is called a mob, and a mob of church people is called a congregation, and a congregation of engineers is called a corps, and a corps of robbers is called a band, and a band of locusts is called a swarm, and a swarm of people is called a crowd, and a miscellaneous crowd of people is called the people.

AUSTRALIAN SHEEP.

Pastoralists Spare No Pains to Improve Their Flocks.

Although the material prosperity of the Australian colonies is based largely upon the richness and magnitude of their mineral resources, says the Washington Post, the pastoral and cognate industries still constitute, as in former years, the principal factor in the way of colonial advancement, and, despite the occasional heavy losses from drought and other causes, the great body of pastoralists appear more energetic and enterprising than ever, sparing no expense in the improvement of their flocks, whether intended for meat or for wool. Before the existing increased and cheaper facilities for the export of Australian produce colonial sheep farmers, as a rule, were content with the ordinary increase of their flocks, making quantity rather than quality their chief object. This policy has now become reversed, and the great ambition of the leading pastoralists is to produce the finest wool and mutton possible. To achieve this considerable sums are expended in the purchase of high class rams, some of the prices given being exceptionally high.

At the recent annual sheep fair in Sydney 2,310 sheep sold by a single agency company realized £27,103, the all round price averaging £11 14s. 8d. against £9 8s. 8d. in the previous year. Several of the prices were somewhat sensational, a Tasmanian special stud ram, the Admiral, being purchased by a New South Wales pastoralist for 1,500 guineas. Another Tasmanian ram, Pioneer, brought 900 guineas, the purchaser also being a New South Wales sheep farmer. Other prices ranged from 420 to 150 guineas. The bids are always in guineas.

Of course a considerable proportion of the sheep were bought for Queensland, Victoria, and other colonies, but the pick was secured by New South Wales. The Admiral, which realized the top price, far higher than that secured by many a favorite race horse, is a pure Merino, coming from the best stock imported into Australia, and when last shorn gave 31½ pounds of wool with a 12 months' growth.

Sheep in the South.

In the south mutton is scarcely known as a household provision, but the boom has reached the south, and sheep are kept where they never were before, and this for the money there is in them. Sheep have trebled in value since two years ago in the south. By and by the southern old fields—skeletons they are—will become new and clothed with verdure and dotted with the wool bearers, and the old skeletons will be living, profitable, productive fields. The sheep will work this transformation. There is a wide field in the southern states for the shepherd and the wool manufacturer, and when it is fully occupied there will be more sheep there than in any of the European countries and than in the whole of the northern part of this continent elsewhere. Everything necessary is to be had with the least possible labor and cost.—Sheep Breeder.

Filling Hog Troughs.

Getting swill into a pig trough is generally somewhat difficult, as the hogs can hardly ever be kept out until it is filled. For over 20 years Danish farmers have used a device that renders filling the trough an easy matter. The front of the pen is arranged in the shape of a swinging door suspended from the top and placed in either of the two positions represented in the accompanying figures, A and B. After the door has been opened (toward the back), Fig. B, the trough is filled, whereupon the door swings back in its fixed position, Fig. A. A single bolt is all that is necessary to keep the door in either of the two positions.—Iowa Homestead.

The Grand Forks Plaindealer says that there is a lack of wood in its city, and many who put off securing their supply for the winter, now find it next to impossible to secure any, and there is none to be secured in quantity. The cause for this is that there was little left over last winter, and this year the freight cars are all in use, and it is rather difficult to secure men to load the cars. Dealers in wood in Grand Forks and other North Dakota towns are making every effort to secure a supply.

THE MARKETS

The Latest Quotations.

The Minneapolis Times says that the wheat situation has been much disturbed by the free exports from Argentine during the past two or three weeks. The original estimates of the surplus for export from that country, which were computed three months ago, were evidently far out of the way. Just now the supplies from that source are rolling out in big volume. All this is unexpected. Naturally this condition weakens the call upon the United States. And yet our exports for the three weeks of this October month have amounted to 10,679,216 bushels against 9,869,226 bushels during the same time last year. There is nothing now existing in the situation to stir speculation on the one side or the other. The war in South Africa is calculated to give a sentimental touch to the market. But it is an unsafe guide. The production of and demand for wheat will not be effected one way or the other by the incident. It will likely prove a short-lived contest down there. The supply of wheat is not great from the world standpoint; but it is sufficient to meet every demand during the next twelve months. The crop year of 1900 will prove a bearish element from this time forward, inasmuch as there is every indication that wheat will be the great crop sown in the northwest next spring. The fall plowing for wheat in the three states of North Dakota, South Dakota and Minnesota has been very large. The upturned soil speaks for itself, and, according to the views expressed by tourists, who have themselves looked over the landscape, the wheat crop next year will, so far as the seeding goes, be very heavy.

The ruling price for wheat is, in the judgment of thoughtful traders, fair. The prospects of an advance are very slender. Commission men say prices will be improved by withholding of stock from market during the next three months. Commission men ought to be good judges, but farmers and producers ought to be capable of judging for themselves.

By John W. Eastman.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

CITY CONVENTION

And Other Local Political Gossip.

The city convention was held in the city hall last Thursday evening, and an exceptionally strong ticket was nominated. C. L. Dobner was elected as temporary chairman and W. C. Smiley temporary secretary. The chair appointed a committee on credentials and resolutions and an adjournment was taken for 30 minutes. The committee on credentials reported that the following were entitled to seats in the convention:

From the First ward:
- R. B. Vining,
- C. E. Traverse,
- C. C. Jackson,
- Charles Schuster,
- W. T. Mullarky.

From the Second ward:
- C. A. Robbecke,
- N. W. Tarrant,
- Phil Zeh,
- H. G. Dobner,
- W. C. Smiley.

From the Third ward:
- S. T. Johnson,
- C. L. Dobner,
- John Kivel,
- John W. Eastman,
- Frank Bourque.

The temporary organization was then made permanent and nominations for mayor were made. Carl Kretzschmar received a majority of the votes on the first ballot and on motion it was made unanimous. J. W. Wallin was unanimously nominated for treasurer. For aldermen at large four nominations were made, C. J. Knox, W. T. Mullarky, Hans Langseth and John Kivel being nominated. An informal ballot resulted in W. T. Mullarky receiving 11 votes, C. J. Knox 8, John Kivel 7 and Hans Langseth 4. Mr. Mullarky and Mr. Kivel made short speeches, thanking the convention, and stating that they did not care for the honor. The next ballot resulted in W. T. Mullarky being nominated, however, he being the only nominee having a majority. Another ballot was taken, which resulted in S. T. Johnson being nominated. The following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas: the burden of official salaries borne by the taxpayers of this city is not only excessive and unnecessary, but is not usual to the practice of cities of like size and resources; and

Whereas: the condition of the roads connecting this city with the large and important agricultural community naturally centering here is such that much of the trade, which should be ours, is diverted to other and more distant commercial centers, owing to the difficulty of hauling produce to market at this point, thereby working great injustice and hardships to the merchants and to the city at large, therefore be it

Resolved: by the people of the city of Thief River Falls, in convention assembled, that we do most earnestly and respectfully recommend to the mayor and council about to be elected to represent and administer the corporation for the coming fiscal year.

(1) That all due economy consistent with the dignity and proper performance of city affairs be exercised by them during their term of office.

(2) That the salary of $40 per annum, now paid to the mayor, be abolished, as is usual in cities of like size.

(3) That the city council serve without pecuniary compensation, as is usual with cities of like size.

(4) The expensive and wholly unnecessary office of city attorney be abolished.

(5) That the salary of the city clerk be reduced from $300 to $100 per annum.

(6) That the office of day patrolman and that of street commissioner be consolidated, and that the fire engineer be required to act as night patrolman, thus not only insuring more complete police protection, but reducing the salary list by one third.

(7) That the funds made available by such retrenchment and such other monies as can be saved by a careful and business-like administration of the city finance be used for the purpose of so improving the roads leading into this city that the trade due us by our geographical position shall be drawn into its ligitimate channels, and that the condition of our neighboring highways shall be no more a reproach to this city and a source of revenue to other markets.

And, furthermore, the convention would respectfully recommend that inasmuch as the fire department serves the city voluntarily, and often at a great sacrifice to personal convenience and business, the council exercise great discretion in using the veto power, with which it is vested, in regard to the election of fire department officers, and that it interfere with such elections only upon extraordinary occasions, allowing the department the greatest freedom in selecting its own officers.

C. J. Knox undoubtedly would have been nominated as an alderman at large had not the question of his residence been brought up. It can be stated on good authority, however, that Mr. Knox is a resident of Thief River Falls.

The aldermen nominated in the three different wards are exceptionally good men. John Aos, the nominee in the first ward, is a man who has always attended strictly to his own business and is a good level-headed man. He will undoubtedly be elected by a big majority.

Thief River Falls does not possess a man with sounder judgment than the nominee for alderman in the Second ward, Matt Barzen. [illegible] all subjects, and will undoubtedly make a very efficient alderman. Men of Mr. Barzen's stamp are needed on the council.

L. P. Stranahan, the candidate for alderman in the Third ward, is a sure winner. He is connected with the Thief River Falls Lumber company, a concern that pays more taxes than any other institution in the city, and will undoubtedly be in favor of spending the public money in an economical way.

S. T. Johnson or W. T. Mullarky, the two nominees for aldermen at large, need no introduction to the people of this city. Their reputation for honesty has never been questioned and they are both deeply interested in the future of Thief River Falls. Mr. Mullarky, however, despite of the fact that he received the nomination, will not be a candidate. He wishes to devote his entire attention to his business, and on this representation his friends—and he has a lot of them, too—have decided to yield to his wish, and his name will not be printed upon the ticket. Mr. Mullarky would have made an excellent alderman, and it is doubtful if the city possesses a man with sounder judgment.

Hans Langseth, it is understood, will be an independent candidate for alderman at large, thus filling the place made vacant by W. T. Mullarky. Mr. Langseth has been a resident of this city for a number of years. He has been a successful business man and a good citizen. He is thoroughly honest and straight forward. There is but one objection to his election as an alderman and that is the fact that he is liable to be influenced by the unprincipaled crowd that is supporting him. He would undoubtedly have received the nomination in the convention had it not been for that fact.

Upon the solicitation of many tax payers, C. J. Knox has decided to become a candidate for alderman at large. Mr. Knox is one of the most enterprising citizens of Thief River Falls, and, if elected, can be depended upon to make things hum. He is the largest individual owner of real estate in the city and will be interested in every proposition that will be beneficial to Thief River Falls.

Tomorrow is the last day on which certificates of nomination can be filed.

Owing to the fact that there will be a contest in but few of the wards, the vote to be polled this fall will probably be very light. All of the aspirants for office that have been mentioned are good men, and the city affairs for the next two years will be conducted in a business like way.

Why They Stammer.

Stillwater Gazette: The other day a little girl gazed at a picture of a number of ships and said, "See the flock of ships." We corrected that little one by telling her that a flock of ships was called a fleet, and a fleet of sheep was called a flock. For the benefit of the foreigner who may be trying to master the intricacies of our language, we may here add, with reference to nouns of multitude, that a flock of wolves is called a pack, and a pack of thieves is called a gang, and a gang of angels is called a host, and a host of porpoises is called a shoal, and a shoal of buffaloes is called a covey, and a covey of pretty girls is called a galaxy, and a galaxy of ruffians is called a horde, and a horde of rubbish is called a heap, and a heap of oxen is called a drove, and a drove of blackguards is called a mob, and a mob of church people is called a congregation, and a congregation of engineers is called a corps, and a corps of robbers is called a band, and a band of locusts is called a swarm, and a swarm of people is called a crowd, and a miscellaneous crowd of people is called the people.

AUSTRALIAN SHEEP.

Although the material prosperity of the Australian colonies is based largely upon the richness and magnitude of their mineral resources, says the Washington Post, the pastoral and cognate industries still constitute, as in former years, the principal factor in the way of colonial advancement, and, despite the occasional heavy losses from drought and other causes, the great body of pastoralists appear more energetic and enterprising than ever, sparing no expense in the improvement of their flocks, whether intended for meat or for wool. Before the existing increased and cheaper facilities for the export of Australian produce colonial sheep farmers, as a rule, were content with the ordinary increase of their flocks, making quantity rather than quality their chief object. This policy has now become reversed, and the great ambition of the leading pastoralists is to produce the finest wool and mutton possible. To achieve this considerable sums are expended in the purchase of high class rams, some of the prices given being exceptionally high.

At the recent annual sheep fair in Sydney 2,310 sheep sold by a single agency company realized £27,103, the all-round price averaging £11 14s. 8d. against £9 8s. 8d. in the previous year. Several of the prices were somewhat sensational, a Tasmanian special stud ram, the Admiral, being purchased by a New South Wales pastoralist for 1,500 guineas. Another Tasmanian ram, Pioneer, brought 900 guineas, the purchaser also being a New South Wales sheep farmer. Other prices ranged from 420 to 150 guineas. The bids are always in guineas.

Of course a considerable proportion of the sheep were bought for Queensland, Victoria, and other colonies, but the pick was secured by New South Wales. The Admiral, which realized the top price, far higher than that secured by many a favorite race horse, is a pure Merino, coming from the best stock imported into Australia, and when last shorn gave 31½ pounds of wool with a 12 months' growth.

Sheep in the South.

In the south mutton is scarcely known as a household provision, but the boom has reached the south, and sheep are kept where they never were before, and this for the money there is in them. Sheep have trebled in value since two years ago in the south. By and by the southern old fields—skeletons they are—will become new and clothed with verdure and dotted with the wool bearers, and the old skeletons will be living, profitable, productive fields. The sheep will work this transformation. There is a wide field in the southern states for the shepherd and the wool manufacturer, and when it is fully occupied there will be more sheep there than in any of the European countries and than in the whole of the northern part of this continent elsewhere. Everything necessary is to be had with the least possible labor and cost.—Sheep Breeder.

Filling Hog Troughs.

Getting swill into a pig trough is generally somewhat difficult, as the hogs can hardly ever be kept out until it is filled. For over 20 years Danish farmers have used a device that renders filling the trough an easy matter. The front of the pen is arranged in the Mossestad, of Numedal township, who was committed to the Fergus Falls hospital for the insane last spring after repeated attempts to end his life by cutting his throat, was again before the probate court last Saturday, having been released from the asylum August 1 on parole. Mossestad is still under the delusion that his property is going to the bad, and says he can't find a fit place to live, so thinks he will make a change. He was returned to the asylum.

The Grand Forks Plaindealer says that there is a lack of wood in its city, and many who put off securing their supply for the winter, now find it next to impossible to secure any, and there is none to be secured in quantity. The cause for this is that there was little left over last winter, and this year the freight cars are all in use, and it is rather difficult to secure men to load the cars. Dealers in wood in Grand Forks and other North Dakota towns are making every effort to secure a supply.

THE MARKETS

The Latest Quotations.

The Minneapolis Times says that the wheat situation has been much disturbed by the free exports from Argentine during the past two or three weeks. The original estimates of the surplus for export from that country, which were computed three months ago, were evidently far out of the way. Just now the supplies from that source are rolling out in big volume. All this is unexpected. Naturally this condition weakens the call upon the United States. And yet our exports for the three weeks of this October month have amounted to 10,679,216 bushels against 9,869,226 bushels during the same time last year. There is nothing now existing in the situation to stir speculation on the one side or the other. The war in South Africa is calculated to give a sentimental touch to the market. But it is an unsafe guide. The production of and demand for wheat will not be effected one way or the other by the incident. It will likely prove a short-lived contest down there. The supply of wheat is not great from the world standpoint; but it is sufficient to meet every demand during the next twelve months. The crop year of 1900 will prove a bearish element from this time forward, inasmuch as there is every indication that wheat will be the great crop sown in the northwest next spring. The fall plowing for wheat in the three states of North Dakota, South Dakota and Minnesota has been very large. The upturned soil speaks for itself, and, according to the views expressed by tourists, who have themselves looked over the landscape, the wheat crop next year will, so far as the seeding goes, be very heavy.

The ruling price for wheat is, in the judgment of thoughtful traders, fair. The prospects of an advance are very slender. Commission men say prices will be improved by withholding of stock from market during the next three months. Commission men ought to be good judges, but farmers and producers ought to be capable of judging for themselves.

CITY CONVENTION

And Other Local Political Gossip.

The city convention was held in the city hall last Thursday evening, and an exceptionally strong ticket was nominated. C. L. Dobner was elected as temporary chairman and W. C. Smiley temporary secretary. The chair appointed a committee on credentials and resolutions and an adjournment was taken for 30 minutes. The committee on credentials reported that the following were entitled to seats in the convention:

From the First ward:
R. B. Vining,
C. E. Traverse,
C. C. Jackson,
Charles Schuster,
W. T. Mullarky.
From the Second ward:
C. A. Robbecke,
N. W. Tarrant,
Phil Zeh,
H. G. Dobner,
W. C. Smiley.
From the Third ward:
S. T. Johnson,
C. L. Dobner,
John Kivel,
John W. Eastman,
Frank Bourque.

The temporary organization was then made permanent and nominations for mayor were made. Carl Kretzschmar received a majority of the votes on the first ballot and on motion it was made unanimous. J. W. Wallin was unanimously nominated for treasurer. For aldermen at large four nominations were made, C. J. Knox, W. T. Mullarky, Hans Langseth and John Kivel being nominated. An informal ballot resulted in W. T. Mullarky receiving 11 votes, C. J. Knox 8, John Kivel 7 and Hans Langseth 4. Mr. Mullarky and Mr. Kivel made short speeches, thanking the convention, and stating that they did not care for the honor. The next ballot resulted in W. T. Mullarky being nominated, however, he being the only nominee having a majority. Another ballot was taken, which resulted in S. T. Johnson being nominated. The following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas: the burden of official salaries borne by the taxpayers of this city is not only excessive and unnecessary, but is not usual to the practice of cities of like size and resources; and

Whereas: the condition of the roads connecting this city with the large and important agricultural community naturally centering here is such that much of the trade, which should be ours, is diverted to other and more distant commercial centers, owing to the difficulty of hauling produce to market at this point, thereby working great injustice and hardships to the merchants and to the city at large, therefore be it

Resolved: by the people of the city of Thief River Falls, in convention assembled, that we do most earnestly and respectfully recommend to the mayor and council about to be elected to represent and administer the corporation for the coming fiscal year.

(1) That all due economy consistent with the dignity and proper performance of city affairs be exercised by them during their term of office.

(2) That the salary of $40 per annum, now paid to the mayor, be abolished, as is usual in cities of like size.

(3) That the city council serve without pecuniary compensation, as is usual with cities of like size.

(4) The expensive and wholly unnecessary office of city attorney be abolished.

(5) That the salary of the city clerk be reduced from $300 to $100 per annum.

(6) That the office of day patrolman and that of street commissioner be consolidated, and that the fire engineer be required to act as night patrolman, thus not only insuring more complete police protection, but reducing the salary list by one third.

(7) That the funds made available by such retrenchment and such other monies as can be saved by a careful and business like administration of the city finance be used for the purpose of so improving the roads leading into this city that the trade due us by our geographical position shall be drawn into its legitimate channels, and that the condition of our neighboring highways shall be no more a reproach to this city and a source of revenue to other markets.

And, furthermore, the convention would respectfully recommend that inasmuch as the fire department serves the city voluntarily, and often at a great sacrifice to personal convenience and business, the council exercise great discretion in using the veto power, with which it is vested, in regard to the election of fire department officers, and that it interfere with such elections only upon extraordinary occasions, allowing the department the greatest freedom in selecting its own officers.

C. J. Knox undoubtedly would have been nominated as an alderman at large had not the question of his residence been brought up. It can be stated on good authority, however, that Mr. Knox is a resident of Thief River Falls.

The aldermen nominated in the three different wards are exceptionally good men. John Aas, the nominee in the first ward, is a man who has always attended strictly to his own business and is a good level-headed man. He will undoubtedly be elected by a big majority.

Thief River Falls does not possess a man with sounder judgment than the nominee for alderman in the Second ward, Matt Barzen. [illegible] all subjects, and will undoubtedly make a very efficient alderman. Men of Mr. Barzen's stamp are needed on the council.

L. P. Stranahan, the candidate for alderman in the Third ward, is a sure winner. He is connected with the Thief River Falls Lumber company, a concern that pays more taxes than any other institution in the city, and will undoubtedly be in favor of spending the public money in an economical way.

S. T. Johnson or W. T. Mullarky, the two nominees for aldermen at large, need no introduction to the people of this city. Their reputation for honesty has never been questioned and they are both deeply interested in the future of Thief River Falls. Mr. Mullarky, however, despite of the fact that he received the nomination, will not be a candidate. He wishes to devote his entire attention to his business, and on this representation his friends—and he has a lot of them, too—have decided to yield to his wish, and his name will not be printed upon the ticket. Mr. Mullarky would have made an excellent alderman, and it is doubtful if the city possesses a man with sounder judgment.

Hans Langseth, it is understood, will be an independent candidate for alderman at large, thus filling the place made vacant by W. T. Mullarky. Mr. Langseth has been a resident of this city for a number of years. He has been a successful business man and a good citizen. He is thoroughly honest and straight forward. There is but one objection to his election as an alderman and that is the fact that he is liable to be influenced by the unprincipaled crowd that is supporting him. He would undoubtedly have received the nomination in the convention had it not been for that fact.

Upon the solicitation of many tax payers, C. J. Knox has decided to become a candidate for alderman at large. Mr. Knox is one of the most enterprising citizens of Thief River Falls, and, if elected can be depended upon to make things hum. He is the largest individual owner of real estate in the city and will be interested in every proposition that will be beneficial to Thief River Falls.

Tomorrow is the last day on which certificates of nomination can be filed.

Owing to the fact that there will be a contest in but few of the wards, the vote to be polled this fall will probably be very light. All of the aspirants for office that have been mentioned are good men, and the city affairs for the next two years will be conducted in a business like way.

Why They Stammer.

Stillwater Gazette: The other day a little girl gazed at a picture of a number of ships and said, "See the flock of ships." We corrected that little one by telling her that a flock of ships was called a fleet, and a fleet of sheep was called a flock. For the benefit of the foreigner who may be trying to muster the intricacies of our language, we may here add, with reference to nouns of multitude, that a flock of wolves is called a pack, and a pack of thieves is called a gang, and a gang of angels is called a host, and a host of porpoises is called a shoal, and a shoal of buffaloes is called a covey, and a covey of pretty girls is called a galaxy, and a galaxy of ruffians is called a horde, and a horde of rubbish is called a heap, and a heap of oxen is called a drove, and a drove of blackguards is called a mob, and a mob of church people is called a congregation, and a congregation of engineers is called a corps, and a corps of robbers is called a band, and a band of locusts is called a swarm, and a swarm of people is called a crowd, and a miscellaneous crowd of people is called the people.

AUSTRALIAN SHEEP.

Although the material prosperity of the Australian colonies is based largely upon the richness and magnitude of their mineral resources, says the Washington Post, the pastoral and cognate industries still constitute, as in former years, the principal factor in the way of colonial advancement, and, despite the occasional heavy losses from drought and other causes, the great body of pastoralists appear more energetic and enterprising than ever, sparing no expense in the improvement of their flocks, whether intended for meat or for wool. Before the existing increased and cheaper facilities for the export of Australian produce colonial sheep farmers, as a rule, were content with the ordinary increase of their flocks, making quantity rather than quality their chief object. This policy has now become reversed, and the great ambition of the leading pastoralists is to produce the finest wool and mutton possible. To achieve this considerable sums are expended in the purchase of high class rams, some of the prices given being exceptionally high.

At the recent annual sheep fair in Sydney 2,310 sheep sold by a single agency company realized £27,103, the all round price averaging £11 14s. 8d. against £9 8s. 8d. in the previous year. Several of the prices were somewhat sensational, a Tasmanian special stud ram, the Admiral, being purchased by a New South Wales pastoralist for 1,500 guineas. Another Tasmanian ram, Pioneer, brought 900 guineas, the purchaser also being a New South Wales sheep farmer. Other prices ranged from 420 to 150 guineas. The bids are always in guineas.

Of course a considerable proportion of the sheep were bought for Queensland, Victoria, and other colonies, but the pick was secured by New South Wales. The Admiral, which realized the top price, far higher than that secured by many a favorite race horse, is a pure Merino, coming from the best stock imported into Australia, and when last shorn gave 31¼ pounds of wool with a 12 months' growth.

Sheep In the South.

In the south mutton is scarcely known as a household provision, but the boom has reached the south, and sheep are kept where they never were before, and this for the money there is in them. Sheep have trebled in value since two years ago in the south. By and by the southern old fields—skeletons they are—will become new and clothed with verdure and dotted with the wool bearers, and the old skeletons will be living, profitable, productive fields. The sheep will work this transformation. There is a wide field in the southern states for the shepherd and the wool manufacturer, and when it is fully occupied there will be more sheep there than in any of the European countries and than in the whole of the northern part of this continent elsewhere. Everything necessary is to be had with the least possible labor and cost.—Sheep Breeder.

Filling Hog Troughs.

Getting swill into a pig trough is generally somewhat difficult, as the hogs can hardly ever be kept out until it is filled. For over 20 years Danish farmers have used a device that renders filling the trough an easy matter. The front of the pen is arranged in the shape of a swinging door suspended from the top and placed in either of the two positions represented in the accompanying figures, A and B. After the door has been opened (toward the back), Fig. B, the trough is filled; whereupon the door swings back in its fixed position, Fig. A. A single bolt is all that is necessary to keep the door in either of the two positions.—Iowa Homestead.

The Grand Forks Plaindealer says that there is a lack of wood in its city, and many who put off securing their supply for the winter, now find it next to impossible to secure any, and there is none to be secured in quantity. The cause for this is that there was little left over last winter, and this year the freight cars are all in use, and it is rather difficult to secure men to load the cars. Dealers in wood in Grand Forks and other North Dakota towns are making every effort to secure a supply.

THE MARKETS

The Latest Quotations.

The Minneapolis Times says that the wheat situation has been much disturbed by the free exports from Argentine during the past two or three weeks. The original estimates of the surplus for export from that country, which were computed three months ago, were evidently far out of the way. Just now the supplies from that source are rolling out in big volume. All this is unexpected. Naturally this condition weakens the call upon the United States. And yet our exports for the three weeks of this October month have amounted to 10,679,216 bushels against 9,869,226 bushels during the same time last year. There is nothing now existing in the situation to stir speculation on the one side or the other. The war in South Africa is calculated to give a sentimental touch to the market. But it is an unsafe guide. The production of and demand for wheat will not be effected one way or the other by the incident. It will likely prove a short-lived contest down there. The supply of wheat is not great from the world standpoint; but it is sufficient to meet every demand during the next twelve months. The crop year of 1900 will prove a bearish element from this time forward, inasmuch as there is every indication that wheat will be the great crop sown in the northwest next spring. The fall plowing for wheat in the three states of North Dakota, South Dakota and Minnesota has been very large. The upturned soil speaks for itself, and, according to the views expressed by tourists, who have themselves looked over the landscape, the wheat crop next year will, so far as the seeding goes, be very heavy.

The ruling price for wheat is, in the judgment of thoughtful traders, fair. The prospects of an advance are very slender. Commission men say prices will be improved by withholding of stock from market during the next three months. Commission men ought to be good judges, but farmers and producers ought to be capable of judging for themselves.

are faithfully portrayed in the original and exclusive cable dispatches which THE CHICAGO RECORD prints daily from the leading capitals of the old world. This magnificent special service is in process of being greatly extended so as to include every important city in Europe; and it is supplemented by the full regular cable service of The Associated Press.

I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

WANTED.—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. R·I·P·A·N·S, 10 for 5 cents or twelve packets for 48 cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

FOR A DITCH.

Farmers Living West of Here Petition for One.

The county commissioners of Red Lake county are in session at Red Lake Falls this week and a petition has been presented to them largely signed by farmers living west of this city. It is for the purpose of having a ditch constructed which will be of great benefit in draining water into the Red Lake river. The petition explains itself, and is as follows:

To the honorable board of county commissioners of Red Lake county, Minn.:

The petition of the undersigned respectively show:

That your petitioners are the owners of certain lands in Red Lake county over and through which the hereinafter ditch, drain or watercourse, as well as the hereinafter described side, lateral, spur or branch ditch or ditches will pass, and which lands will be liable to be affected by or assessed for the expense of the construction of the same, and that the construction of said hereinafter described side, lateral, spur or branch ditch or ditches is necessary to secure the object of the improvement contemplated by the construction of said main or principal ditch.

That the following is a general description of the proposed starting point, route and terminus of said proposed main or principal ditch, viz:

Commencing at or near the southwest corner of the southeast quarter of the southwest quarter of section twenty-four (24), in township one hundred fifty-four (154), range forty-four (44), and running thence east along on the north side of the section line through section twenty-four (24) and section nineteen (19) to the southeast corner of section nineteen (19), in township one hundred fifty-four (154), range forty-three (43), thence south along on the west side of the section line to the southeast corner of section thirty (30), thence east along on the north side of the section line to the southeast corner of section twenty-nine (29), thence south along on the west side of the section line to the southeast corner of section thirty-two (32), thence east along on the north side of the section line to Red Lake river.

Your petitioners further state that there are large tracts of land lying adjacent to and in the vicinity of the said proposed drain or principal ditch which will be directly and greatly benefited by the construction thereof, said land being low and wet, and at certain seasons of every year they are covered with water, thereby rendering said land unproductive and useless. That said water, during portions of every year, becomes stagnant and foul, rendering the atmosphere in the vicinity thereof impure and unwholesome, thereby endangering, imperilling and effecting the health of the occupants of said lands and the public.

That for the reasons aforesaid the construction of such ditch or ditches, is necessary, and also for the reasons that by the construction thereof there will thereby be removed from off said lands said waters, thereby promoting the health of the public at large; that the same will be of great benefit to the public highways in the vicinity thereof, by preventing in many places the overflowing of such highways.

That large tracts of land that are unproductive and useless will thereby be very greatly increased in value, all to the great benefit utility and convenience of the public as well as your petitioners.

Therefore your petitioners respectfully ask that such proposed ditch or ditches be constructed as provided by law, and that the same may be of such width and depth as to insure the effectual and permanent drainage of said lands.

WE OWE $13,250,

According to Polk County's Statement.

The county commissioners of Polk county have prepared the following financial statement of the case between Red Lake and Polk counties:

Bonded indebtedness at time of division	$88,500.00
Floating indebtedness consisting of seed grain loans in years 1889 and 1893	4,530.07
Outstanding orders	1,312.50
Total indebtedness	$94,342.57
Appraised value of the buildings	32,800.00
Balance to be divided between the two counties according to assessed valuation of 1896	61,542.57
Red Lake county's share	11,245.62
Interest on $11,245.62 for 3 years paid by Polk county	2,005.14
Total indebtedness of Red Lake to Polk	13,250.76

Martin O'Brien, of Crookston, has been employed by the Polk county board and it is needless to say that there will be a law suit before the matter is settled up.

Get a License.

"The license law is going to be enforced," says Executive Agent Beutner. "Any man that wants to go after big game must get his license from the county auditor before he starts, and be sure he takes it with him. The deputies have orders to arrest any one they find in the big wood with a gun and no license."

"Does that include the dog?"

"No, sir. Nobody is allowed to hunt big game with dogs. The wardens have been instructed if they see a dog in the woods with a hunter to shoot the dog on sight. There's nothing that worries a deer worse than being chased all the time by dogs. That's strictly forbidden."

The licenses are obtainable from any county auditor. They cost 25 cents for residents of Minnesota and $25 for others.—Pioneer Press.

THANKSGIVING.

Proclamation by the President of the United States.

"A national custom, dear to the hearts of the people, calls for the setting apart of one day in each year as an occasion of special thanksgiving to Almighty God for the blessings of the preceding year. This honored observance acquires with time a tenderer significance. It enriches domestic life. It summons under the family roof the absent children to glad reunion with those they love.

"Seldom has this nation had greater cause for profound thanksgiving. No great pestilence has invaded our shores. Liberal employment waits upon labor. Abundant crops have rewarded the efforts of the husbandman. Increased comforts have come to the home. The national finances have been strengthened, and public credit has been sustained and made firmer. In all branches of industry and trade there has been an unequaled degree of prosperity, while there has been a steady gain in the moral and educational growth of our national character. Churches and schools have flourished. American patriotism has been exalted. Those engaged in maintaining the honor of the flag with such signal success have been in a large degree spared from disaster and disease. An honorable peace has been ratified with a foreign nation with whom were at war, and are now on friendly relations with every power on earth.

"The trust which we have assumed for the benefit of the people of Cuba has been faithfully advanced. There is marked progress toward the restoration of healthy industrial conditions, and under the wise sanitary regulations the island has enjoyed unusual exemption from the scourge of fever. The hurricane which swept over our new possession of Porto Rico, destroying the homes and property of the inhabitants, called forth the instant sympathy of the people of the United States, who were swift to respond with generous aid to the sufferers. While the insurrection still continues in the island of Luzon, business is resuming its activity, and confidence is being rapidly established throughout the archipelago.

"For there reasons, and countless others, I, William McKinley, president of the United States, do name Thursday, the 30th day of November next, as a day of general thanksgiving and prayer, to be observed as such by all our people on this continent and in our newly acquired islands, as well as by those who may be at sea or sojourning in foreign lands; and I advise that on this day religious exercises shall be conducted in the churches or meeting places of all denominations, in order that in the social features of the day its real significance may not be lost sight of, but fervent prayers may be offered to the Most High for a continuance of the Divine guidance, without which man's efforts are vain, and for Divine consolation to those whose kindred and friends have sacrificed their lives for their country.

"I recommend, also, that on this day, so far as may be found practicable, labor shall cease from its accustomed toil, and charity abound toward the sick, the needy and the poor.

"In witness whereof, I have set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

"WILLIAM M'KINLEY."

CROSS THE RIVER.

That Is What the Great Northern Will Do.

Several Great Northern officials were in the city last week and, while here, made arrangements for extending their railroad across the Red Lake river to the Thief River Falls Lumber company's plant. A bridge will be built this fall, and the work will be completed at once. The lumber company will shortly begin the erection of their new plaining mill, which will be situated just north of the saw mill. An attempt will also be made to induce the Great Northern to locate their depot in a more central location, and it has been suggested that the old plaining site be used. This certainly would be a great improvement upon the present location.

Married.

At the Catholic church, in Red Lake Falls, Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock, the Rev. Fr. Lawrence officiating, occured the marriage of Edward J. Langevin and Miss Mary Tivearge, both of this city. The newly married couple at once went to house keeping in a house recently built by the groom in Porter's addition. Both the bride and groom are well known in this city, and the News joins with a large circle of their friends in wishing them a happy and prosperous life.

Counting the People by Machinery.

"Our first census, made in 1795, [illegible] United States to be five million, and the count cost Uncle Sam, who was comparatively poor then, one cent for each person. It is estimated that the twelfth census, to be made in June, 1900, will show that our people number seventy-five million, and that the item of clerk hire, in the census bureau alone, will exceed five million dollars. Clifford Howard, writing of "How the Next Census Will be Taken," in the November Ladies' Home Journal, says that "although the work of enumeration will be completed by the first of July, it will probably be two or even three months later before the last of the schedules are received at the census office; for not only must they be first examined by the supervisors, but in many cases they will probably require revision because of some error or informality. The actual counting of the people will not be done until the schedules are turned into the census office. The enumerators simply gather the facts, and the office force in Washington does the counting and the compiling, which is done by electricity. In one hundred days all the facts relating to seventy five million people will be tabulated."

WRITES TO LIND.

It Is Suspected That There's Some Sarcasm In This.

The Perham Bulletin, of last [illegible] publishes the following letter written by A. O. Richardson, of that city, to Gov. Lind:

DEAR GOVERNOR.—I was pleased to see you spunk up once, and tell those saucy Republicans that Gen. Pope was no worse than examiners had been.

That was a knock-down argument, and you bet it will make the Republicans feel pretty small if you can only make them believe it. Now I would not say so if I thought it would get out, but between you and me, do you think that, if there is a man in our party, or parties, rather, who never borrowed five hundred dollars, when the people who owned it wasn't there, that it would be a good idea to give him Pope's place? And you might give Pope a soft snap somewhere else, say at Stillwater. I believe it would save us a good deal of annoyance during the next campaign. I shall not insist upon it, however, and of course you may do as you think best about it.

I think the Republican press of the state is devoting more space to the doings of yourself and official family than your importance demands, and I would tell them so if I were in your place. Just see what they said about Pope and Bowler last winter when they wanted their salaries raised a little. They insinuated that it was not worth any more to be a reform administration, than it was to be a common plug of an administration. And they even went so far as to say that Bowler was not competent and so forth. Now we never claimed that Bowler was long on chemistry, but we do believe that he can distinguish creamery butter from Limburger cheese, and I have told every one so that would listen to me.

It is my opinion that we want to work that anti-expansion dodge for all it is worth in the next campaign; for I do not believe we can spring "the state issues" racket on the farmers again, and it will not do to say too much about trusts and combinations, for we are something of combination ourselves, if we can hold together.

Your obedient servant,
A. O. RICHARDSON.

THE NEWS,
By John W. Eastman.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

Admiral Dewey has announced the fact that he will soon be married to Mrs. W. B. Hazen, of Washington.

The grand jury for Red Lake county, after being in session for a week, adjourned last Saturday. Nothing was accomplished—except an expense of over $1,000, and the tax payers will very cheerfully pay this.

The decision of the United States Supreme Court in sustaining the decision of the lower courts was a just one and will give general satisfaction in Thief River Falls. The land in question had been made valuable by the defendants, and for that reason alone should not have been taken away from them—congress and the Indian department to the contrary notwithstanding.

The city election will be held next Tuesday, Nov. 7, and it promises to be the quietest one ever held in this city. The mayor, treasurer, five aldermen and two justices of peace will be elected without opposition. In fact the only opposition will be in the Third ward, where H. E. Mussey will try conclusions with the regular nominee, S. T. Johnson, for justice of peace. The officials about to be elected are all good men, and it is safe to say that they will be a great improvement on any set that has served the city in former years.

INDIANS MAY SUE.

Claim Too Low an Estimate of Their Pine.

The Washington correspondent of the St. Paul Dispatch tells the following story:

A big suit involving something like a million and a half of money is to be instituted against the government by representatives of the Chippewa Indians of Minnesota. This amount is claimed by the Chippewas as being due on former sales of Minnesota pine lands in 1895-6 and '97, and represents the cash value of the difference between the estimate under which the pine was sold and the subsequent discovery that the government estimate was wrong and that millions of feet of pine went into the sale that had never been estimated. The government afterwards admitted that its estimate was wrong.

The Indians have a valid claim if it is properly managed. The trouble is that all sorts of lawyers have been trying to get hold of it and land the big suit in the court of claims, but even this requires congressional aid. There was talk sometime ago that on his return from Europe, ex-Congressman Towne would appear as counsel for the Indians, but it is now stated that he never had any intention of doing so. It looks at present as if the picturesque and pathetic William E. Campbell, the hero of romance, would have charge of the Indians' claim. The trouble with the lawyers is that any fee, present or prospective, which they receive from the Indians, must be passed upon and ratified by the Indian department and should this money be recovered it goes into a trust fund, from which payments can only be made through the Indian office.

AT LAST.

The Celebrated Jones vs. Meehan Case Decided.

The celebrated case of Ray W. Jones vs. Patrick and James Meehan was decided Monday by Associate Justice Gray, of the United States supreme court. The decision is in favor of the Meehans, and this settles for all time a question which has been the means of dividing the people of Thief River Falls into two factions.

The question involved was whether Chief Moose Dung owned the land at the intersection of the Thief and Red Lake rivers, known as "Moose Dung's Reservation." The land was given to one of the forefathers of the present chief by the government and the Meehans contended that he had the right to lease or dispose of it. They accordingly leased it of him, and Jones a few years later secured a second lease of the land and had his lease approved by the Indian department at Washington. By deciding the case in favor of the Meehans, the supreme court holds that Moose Dung is the absolute owner of his reservation and has a right to dispose of it at any time without the consent of the Indian department.

The piece known as the fraction, and which extends along the Red Lake river, was purchased of Moose Dung three years ago by James Meehan Jr. It comprises about thirty acres, and Mr. Meehan now proposes to divide it up into city lots and dispose of it.

P. & J. Meehan received the following telegram from their attorney, Senator C. K. Davis, Tuesday:

"P. & J. Meehan, Thief River Falls, Minn.

"Gentlemen: It gives me great pleasure to inform you that the supreme court has affirmed the judgment of the U. S. circuit court in the Jones vs. Meehan case, thereby deciding the case entirely in your favor.

"Yours truly,
"C. K. Davis."

ONLY DAYS.

The Saw Mill Will Not Run Nights Any Longer.

The Thief River Falls Lumber company's mill will not be run night and day for the remaining part of the season, owing to the fact that the supply of logs has been nearly exhausted. The mill was forced to close down last Friday and Saturday, but started up again Monday and will continue to be operated days until it freezes up. Considerable lumber has been cut this season, but next year the company intends to do considerable more business.

CARRIED TOO FAR.

Hallowe'en Pranks Superceded by Rowdyism.

Tuesday evening was Hallowe'en, night and the usual pranks were played upon citizens who left moveable property about without spiking it down. Numerous out buildings were also upset. This was not so bad, but a few carried the "sport" too far and should be made to suffer the consequences. Several cases where property had been destroyed are reported, the most conspicious being the damage done to P. Morisette. His barber pole was mutilated by paint and it will cost him about $10 to repair the same. There was nothing funny about it, and these willful destroyers of property should be made to suffer.

Legality of Indians to Hunt on Their Reservations.

By a bare majority of one, the supreme court Monday afternoon decided that it is legal for the Indians to hunt upon their reservations in this state without regard to the game laws so long as they do not store their game to be sold contrary to law to traders.

Judge Canty filed the decision and Judges Collins and Buck sided with him. Chief Justice Mitchell and Judge Start dissented, writing a minority opinion to the effect that the Indians are subject to the the game laws the same as they are to other laws of the state.

How to Remove Nose Obstructions.

While the child lies on its mother's lap screaming place a thin cloth or handkerchief over the mouth and face. Place your own mouth to that of the child and give a sudden forcible puff. The effect of this is to expel, or at least to send forward, the contents of the nostril. In this way a plum stone has been blown clear out of the nose, and in other cases a button or other foreign body has been shifted so near to the external nares as to render it easy of removal and thus save a great deal of painful and difficult poking about in the recesses of the nostril.

How to Make Indian Pancakes.

One pint of Indian meal and one teaspoonful salt. Mix with enough boiling water to make a little thinner than mush. When cold, add the yolks of four eggs, half a cup of flour sifted with three teaspoonfuls baking powder, enough sweet milk to make batter as for griddle cakes and the beaten whites of four eggs, added just before baking.

How to Cook Sweetbreads.

They should be thrown into cold water as soon as they come from the market, allowing them to remain there for an hour. Parboil in salted water for 15 minutes and then throw again into ice water for five minutes. Now put in refrigerator until ready to use. Always use a silver knife in cutting sweetbreads. When ready to cook, cut in slices, dip them in egg, then in bread crumbs, and fry in boiling fat. Serve with cream sauce.

How to Care For the Lips.

Chapped and rough lips are not only painful, but disfiguring, and it is advisable never to go into the open air without previously using a little glycerin or vaseline upon the mouth. To moisten the lips with the tongue has a drying effect upon the skin ultimately, and the habit is one to be rigorously avoided.

How to Make Tomato Marmalade.

To two pounds of tomatoes and one pound of tart apples allow two and a half pounds of sugar and the juice and grated rind of one lemon. Scald the tomatoes to remove skin and pare, core and slice the apples. Add sugar to tomatoes and apples and boil slowly one hour. Stir and skim when needed. Add juice and grated rind of another lemon and boil until the marmalade is smooth and thick. Put up in pint glass fruit cans.

How to Wash an Eider Down Quilt.

Put it in warm soapy water to which a little ammonia has been added. Wring it out with the hands and repeat this process till clean. Then rinse all the soap out with two changes of water. Shake well and hang out to dry. When dry, shake the quilt frequently until it is as full looking and soft as when new.

How to Fireproof Shingles.

A wash compound composed of lime, salt and fine sand or wood ashes, put on as ordinary whitewash, renders a shingle roof fiftyfold more safe against falling sparks or cinders. This wash also helps as a preservative against the weather.

DISTRICT COURT.

Some of the Cases Decided in This Term.

The October term of court for Red Lake county convened at Red Lake Falls last week. The following cases have been tried or otherwise disposed of:

Cases No. 1 and 2 upon the calendar entitled Martin J. Hughes, as administrator, vs. P. & J. Meehan will probably be heard before a referee if one can be decided upon.

The personal injury suit entitled P. O. Hagglund vs. St. Hilaire Lumber company was continued over the term by the consent of the parties. Hagglund in this case seeks damages from the mill company for injury sustained by his minor son while in their employ.

The action of Wm. Schaefer vs. Red Lake Falls Lumber company also went over the term on account of plaintiff's answer not being filed within the statutory time.

The same disposition was made in the case of P. & J. Meehan against Philip and Mary Zeh, which will be heard at the February term. This is an action for judgment for lumber furnished in the building of a residence at Thief River Falls. This case has been up before the court in several different phases for the past two years, the previous action being for a lean which was denied in the supreme court.

Martha Bourdon's action against Sieff & Bourdon to enforce the payment of notes due her was dropped, owing to the previous settlement by the parties to the case.

The action begun by the St. Hilaire Lumber company against Sheriff Sampson for damage claimed to have been suffered by reason of his service of an execution on certain lumber belonging to them, was struck of the calendar for want of prosecution.

In the case of McCormick Harvester company vs. Phil Lacoursier plaintiff moved to amend complaint, which was allowed by the court, and the case will come up at chambers later.

The case of Caldwell vs. Red Lake Falls Lumber company was settled by the plaintiff accepting the company's offer of judgment for $20.

A jury decided in favor of the defendants in the case of Alice Kratka vs. P. & J. Meehan.

The case of S. Poissont vs. Jos. Morrinville came up for trial Wednesday. This was an appeal case in which the ownership of a horse was involved. The horse originally belonged to one Jos. Desireau, who owed to Morrinville a note of some hundred dollars. One John Donet, acting as the agent of Morrinville, purchased the horse from Desireau, giving him the note. Here the plaintiff stepped in with a replevin to satisfy a mortgage, which he held upon the animal, and this action was prosecuted for permanent ownership thereof. The verdict of the jury was that Poissont was entitled to retain the nag.

The Belair-Sivigney case was on the tapis Thursday. This is also an appeal case wherein Belair claims that Sivigney & Chayer, while he was tending for them, agreed to pay him $40 per month for his services and that he was to be given work for a year, while the defense claim $30 was the salary agreed upon and that nothing was agreed as to time contract. The case went to the jury, who brought in a verdict for the defendants.

The grand jury adjourned last Saturday. Several saloon keepers were indicted for keeping their places of business open upon Sunday, among whom were: Williams & Anderson and Robert McGinn, of this city; J. McAndress, P. Paradis, Brink Bros. and O. Johnson, of St. Hilaire; Matt Skala, Peter Morrinville and K. Wilmes, of Red Lake Falls.

Nellie Stone, of this city, was indicted for conducting a house of ill fame, but, as she has left the city, the warrant for her arrest cannot be served.

P. O. Bergh, of this city, appeared before the grand jury and attempted to have a prominent and reputable citizen of this place indicted for arson. The alleged offense was committed some time ago, and, as Mr. Bergh has recently quarreled with the gentleman whose character he wished to traduce, the jury rightly refused to take the matter up. For the benefit of Mr. Bergh it might be stated that if he possessed any evidence that would convict, he would be equally guilty in shielding the accused so long by his silence. Mr. Bergh, however, possessed no convicting evidence, and it was mostly for the purpose of having him indicted, and thereby injuring his business and good name, that he appeared before the grand jury.

There were other spite cases before the grand jury, for attempts were made to indict Van R. Brown, C. E. Boughton and Henry Lizotte.

The cases against Williams & Anderson and Robert McGinn were thrown out of the court on account of an error in the indictment. McAndress and Johnson, of St. Hilaire, were acquitted, and the cases of Paradis and Brink Bros. were put over to the February term.

Whips at cost. Simle & Locken.

LOST $65.

Mrs. John Morin Lost a Roll of Bills.

Monday afternoon Mrs. John Morin was so unfortunate as to lose a roll of bills containing $65. The money was rolled up in a piece of black satin cloth, and it was probably lost on La Bree avenue. It was in denominations of $5, $10 and $20. She will pay a very liberal reward to the finder, and it is to be hoped that it has fallen in honest hands.

Miles of Postage Stamps.

C. F. Jenkins, in the Scientific American, says that during the year 1898 the United States Bureau of Printing and engraving issued 2,500,000,000 of the common red two-cent stamps, enough to go almost twice around the earth.

Stacked one upon another, they would pile up 150 miles beyond our atmosphere, equal in weight to one big locomotive; and would keep the frost off the city of Washington.

If these stamps worked in relays, each taking the letter as far as allowed by the postal regulations, the message would be carried beyond the most remote star, and, at the fastest speed at the disposal of the postal authorities, would occupy millions of times the age of the earth in transit.

I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. ILLINOIS WAKING UP.

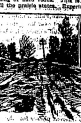
FARMERS WEARY OF WALLOWING IN THE MUD.

Recent Conventions Show Renewed Interest in the Improvement of Highways—Hard Roads Will Increase Farm Values.

The question of better roads has been under general discussion for 30 years. In most of the eastern states and in western states like Ohio, where gravel is abundant and accessible, rapid progress has been made within the last 20 years in road building. Farmers know through long experience with mud roads the great advantage of hard roads, and by a concerted movement they secured legislation that gave them not only solid trunk roads, but solid crossroads, says the Chicago Inter Ocean. But even where the material for hard roads was at hand and where macadamized roads were constructed there was carelessness in the system of repairs, and a new crusade in favor of systematic building and systematic care of roads has been inaugurated.

Illinois has been alive to the importance of good roads, but has fallen behind in the race because of the difficulty of securing proper material for the building of hard roads. This is true of all the prairie states. Experiment



AN EXPENSIVE ROAD.
[From L. A. W. Bulletin.]

after experiment has been tried to determine the best method of treating a prairie road. The difficulty under the old road law was that there were as many theories as there were road supervisors and no uniformity of action. There were no engineers to direct or supervise road building, and after experiments had been tried and after a great amount of hard work had been done it was generally found at the close of any given year that the roads were in as bad condition as they had been at the beginning of the year.

The result was that when the farmer had leisure to market his products and when prices were the highest he was cut off from markets by mud roads. While the farmer in the good road district of Ohio or North Carolina or Tennessee was hauling to market as much as he could put on his two horse wagon the Illinois farmer was hauling one-half or one-fourth as much with four horses and making half as many trips. It needed no argument to convince the Illinois farmer that he ought to have better roads. The problem was how to get the material to construct them.

The State and Interstate Good Roads and Public Improvement association, acting in harmony with the agricultural department at Washington, inaugurated a movement in which the question of material was fully considered, in which good road building was to be under the direction of competent engineers and in which there should be well considered action in all the prairie states. Strangely enough, when this movement received the enthusiastic support of the wheelmen of the country and when for the first time the people of the cities were giving intelligent consideration to the road problem many farmers became suspicious. The false cry was raised that the good roads associations were more interested in those who used bicycles than in those who marketed crops. However, this opposition soon spent its force, and the conventions held this fall represented all parties interested in good roads.

The cities and railroads are interested as much as are the farmers, and if all interests combine needed legislation can be secured, and Illinois will have as good roads as any state in the Union. When we have hard roads throughout the country districts, there will be less deterioration in farms and less inclination on the part of young people in the rural districts to migrate to the cities.

Convict Road Building.

The plan of employing convicts in road building, in successful operation in many of the southern states and being slowly adopted in a few of the northern states, has been made permissible in Pennsylvania by an enactment of the recent legislature. The law operates by counties, each county to use its own prisoners and not to work them more than eight hours per day. Preference in the roadmaking must be given to the roads connecting directly with the county seat, and all roads must conform in width and grade to the provisions of the general road law of the state. Work is to be done in sections of five miles, and no more than that distance may be completed on any road until a like mileage has been improved on all main lines connecting with the county seat. Washington county is the first and the only county thus far to take advantage of the act, several prisoners having been recently sentenced to the roads by Judge Taylor.

WESTERN HORSES.

What Owners Must Do to Cultivate the Eastern Market—Heavy Horses Pay Better Than Standard Bred Kinds.

During the past two or three years rangemen have been looking more than ever to the eastern markets for an outlet for their surplus stock, says the Kansas City Drovers' Telegram. Possibly the commission dealers at the big horse markets of Kansas City, St. Louis and Chicago in their search for new custom are partly responsible for this. At any rate, the fact remains that as the years go by the western owners are looking to the east to take their surplus stock.

Some of the western owners in looking in this direction for a market are of the opinion that the supply in the west is too large for the surplus to be disposed of in this part of the country. Those who are not posted would jump at the conclusion that the shortage of the supply in the east is more than overcome by the supply in the west. The government figures, however, tell a very different story. Statistically speaking, if such an expression may be used, there is a place for every horse in the country, whether it is the heavy draft horse east or the wild broncho of the west. The total number of horses in the entire United States, according to government figures, on Jan. 1 this year was 13,665,307, the smallest number since 1889. The numbers of horses and mules reported in the United States in January for the last 10 years were as follows:

	Horses.	Mules.	Totals.
1898	13,960,911	2,190,282	16,151,193
1897	14,364,667	2,215,654	16,580,321
1896	15,124,057	2,278,946	17,403,003
1895	15,893,318	2,333,108	18,226,426
1894	16,081,139	2,352,231	18,433,370
1893	16,206,802	2,331,128	18,537,930
1892	15,498,140	2,314,699	17,812,839
1891	14,056,750	2,296,532	16,353,282
1890	14,213,837	2,331,027	16,544,864
1889	13,663,294	2,257,574	15,920,868
1888	13,172,936	2,191,727	15,364,663
1887	12,496,744	2,117,141	14,613,885
1886	12,077,657	2,052,593	14,130,250

Compared with the largest year, 1893, there is now a shortage of nearly 3,000,000 head, or about 16 per cent. The proportion of western horses to the total supply, according to the most recent government estimates, is far below the general idea. If we could draw a line north and south through our country, passing through Dodge City, Kan., we would find the entire number of horses west of that line, broken and unbroken, in the cities and on the range, to be only 11 per cent of the total number now in the country. In other words, the supply of western horses, counting everything west of the given line, would fall far short of making up the shortage in the supply east of that line. This is where one of the encouraging features for the western owner comes in. Traffic in horses is controlled by the law of supply and demand, and it doesn't take long to decide who has the better of the situation.

In comparing the present supply of horses with the figures for 1893, the increase in the country's population must be taken into consideration. The population of the United States is now estimated at 75,000,000 against 60,000,000 in 1893, a gain of 25 per cent. The demand or necessity for horses grows in proportion to the increase in the population. Thus we find that in six years the population has increased 25 per cent, while the supply of horses in that time has decreased 16 per cent. Some may agree that the growing popularity of the bicycle, the growth of the use of electricity as we find it in street cars, automobiles and the like, has more than offset the decrease in the supply of horses.

The extent to which these factors have supplanted the horse is greatly exaggerated by the uninformed. It is an exhaustive study and would take columns to give all the details. Careful researches into the matter, however, have shown the general opinion is exaggerated. Automobiles are not proving practicable entirely. Electricians say that it will be a good many years before the automobile will be improved sufficiently to become a factor in the commercial world. In Paris, where the idea of the automobile originated and where tests have been made for the last five years, there are now less than 3,000 in use. Some years ago, and yet not so very long ago either, steam gang plows, it was said, would supersede the horse on the farm. Its effect has not yet been felt in the markets, and the same may be said of the automobile. It is now nothing more than a fashionable toy, and an expensive one at that.

There are other points to be considered, however, that may not be so favorable to the western man. One of these points, and one that may possibly result in retarding for a year or two any heavy eastward movement, is the difference in the methods of handling horses. The large numbers of unbroken horses that are being distributed throughout the east and south through the medium of special sales this fall may result in so many smashed up buggies, broken limbs and ruined characters on the part of those who have to break the horses that public sentiment may be turned against the unbroken animal.

If the eastern man who buys a range animal sets about breaking him in the same manner in which he is handled in the west, the breaking could be done with more safety, in less time and end with the buyer's entire satisfaction with the range horse.

Western horses when rightly handled can be broken as easily as the Kansas or Missouri colt, but if not correctly handled they may prejudice ev-

SOLD WELL.

Cass Lake Township Brings a Neat Sum.

The sale of the Cass Lake townsite that has been attracting such great attention was sold at auction in the United States land office at St. Cloud last Wednesday. The sale commenced at nine o'clock and was concluded by noon. The sale was attended by a large number of prominent men and the bidding was at times quite spirited. Preceding the sale, a protest and warning to parties bidding for the land was entered by A. A. White, who claims a right to the tract under scrip locations. The protest had the effect of warning all likely bidders that a purchase of the land meant a series of litigations. The sale went on, notwithstanding the protest, and the following purchases were made:

Lot 1 was sold to the J. Neils Lumber company, of Sauk Rapids, for $64.38, it comprising 51½ acres. The sw¼ of the ne¼, 40 acres, was sold to Lewis W. Hill, of St. Paul, son of J. J. Hill of the Great Northern, for $2,020; the ne¼ of the nw¼, 40 acres, to the same party for $500; Sidney Wright, of Philadelphia, bought the nw¼ of the nw¼, 40 acres, for $10,000, and the sw¼ of the nw¼ for $4,815. The se¼ of the nw¼ was sold to Lewis W. Hill for $590. All tracts in Sec. 15, T. 145, R. 31.

The total area of the tract sold was 251 acres, and the total proceeds $17,993.88. It is not believed that A. A. White will proceed to carry the matter into the courts as the odds against him would be too great to warrant any kind of success for his case.

Too Cheap.

The people living up at Excel, Holt and Breese are liable to have more trouble in securing their mail. The contract has been let by the government to J. H. Pearl, of London, Ky., for $410 per year. Mr. Pearl is desirous of sub-letting the contract to some resident of this section, but it is doubtful if anyone can be found. It is worth at least $1,200 a year to carry mail three times a week each way on this route.

A New Fraud.

A new scheme for swindling farmers was recently described to F. S. & H. by a neighbor of the victim, whose name is charitably withheld. The scheme in brief is this: A stranger approaches a farmer with a proposition to buy his farm. After the usual negotiations and bantering, terms of sale are agreed upon, the price to be, say, $10,000, the stranger pays $50 down, to bind the bargain and departs, to return in a given time and complete the transaction. A few days later another fine and intelligent stranger appears at the farm and asks permission to examine the soil, which is granted, and an apparently critical examination of portions of the farm follows, with the result that a proposition is made to the farmer to buy his place. The latter states that the farm is already sold, or bargained for, and he cannot sell it again. The stranger regrets this, for he finds the soil to be impregnated with a substance that is valuable for certain manufacturing purposes, and is therefore worth much more to his company than to anybody for merely agricultural purposes, and he concludes by asking how much he has sold the place for and to whom. The last question is asked in the hope that he may be able to buy the farm from its new owner, for he would rather pay $15,000 for it than to fail in securing it. This moves the farmer to say that he does not know the address of the purchaser of his farm, but he hopes that that when he returns he can be induced to waive the contract, when he will be at liberty to sell to the gentleman present. The latter then gives a name and address in full, so that he can be reached readily if he can have the farm, and departs, expressing the hope as he goes that he will soon learn of a satisfactory arrangement with the holder of the option so that he may come into possession of a place so desirable for his purpose. The rest of the story is soon told. The first buyer appears on the scene as agreed, and after much talking and figuring is induced to surrender his right to the farm in consideration of $600, which the farmer pays by negotiating his short-time note at the bank. The second stranger is at once notified of his great luck, he can have the farm at his own price, $15,000, but strangely enough, he does not show up, but rumor has it that both strangers were subsequently seen in a not distant city having a splendid time at a first class hotel. It is needless to say that both strangers were consummate actors in their line, and well calculated to deceive men who are more familiar with the vain ways and dark tricks of the world than the average farmer, hence the farmer in this case should not be entirely blamed, but his fate should be an effective warning to others who may be similarly approached.

Has Begun Suit.

Emil Just, of River Falls, was in the city Thursday and began suit through his attorneys, Boughton and Grady, against that township for $1,500 damages, which he claims to have suffered by reason of the construction of a road through his farm by the town board. He also procured a writ of injunction restraining the board from further work upon the road. The case will be tried at the next term of the district court here.—Red Lake Falls Courier.

Back in the Sixties.

In the September 8, 1861, issue of the Doylestown, Pa., Democrat, of which D. R. P. Hibbs, of this city, kept a file during the civil war, there is an account of an affecting meeting of two brothers after the first battle of Bull Run. The correspondent relates the incident as follows:

We went into a stable at Centerville where thirteen wounded Yankees were, and upon entering found a Washington artillery man seated by the side of a wounded soldier, evidently ministering to him with great care and tenderness. He remarked that "it was very hard to fight as he had fought and turn and find his own brother fighting against him," at the same time pointing to the wounded soldier, from whose side he had risen. I asked if it was possible that was his brother. "Yes, sir, he is my brother, Henry. * * * We meet the first time for seven years. I belong to the Washington artillery of New Orleans, he to the First Minnesota Infantry." Thus they met—one from a far north, the other from the extreme south, on a bloody battlefield in Virginia, in a miserable stable, far away from their mother, home and friends; both wounded—the infantry man by a musket ball in the right shoulder, the artillery man by the wheel of a caisson over his left hand. Their names were Frederick Hubbard, Washington artillery, and Henry Hubbard, First Minnesota Infantry.—Albert Lea Times.

The farmer who neglects to utilize the old straw, manure or other fertilizers that gather about a farm is as foolish as one who would refuse to pick up money in the middle of the road. A farm of 160 acres will naturally produce enough fertilizer to renew the strength of the soil on 20 acres every year, and there is no labor about the farm that will bring as speedy and profitable returns as that in caring for and properly distributing the fertilizer.—Princeton Union.

The United States government has declared that its purpose with reference to the Philippine Islands is to maintain there an "open door" for the commerce of the world. Mr. Frank D. Pavey, in an article in the November number of the North American Review, inquires whether that purpose can be carried out without a violation of the constitution, and in the light of executive and judicial decisions he answers his question in the negative. Mr. Pavey thus states the limitations under which congress and the administration must deal with the proposition to keep an "open door" in the Philippines:

"The cession of the Philippines by Spain to the United States was accomplished by the execution, delivery and acceptance of an international deed of transfer known as a treaty. The transfer became complete upon the exchange of of ratifications of the treaty. Thereupon, the territory transferred became an integral part of the United States. As such, it became subject to the constitution, bound by its restrictions and entitled to its privileges. No further action by congress was necessary. The Constitution does not depend upon congress for authority in any part of the United States. The reverse of the proposition is the fact. Congress must look to the constitution for authority to legislate for the Philippines."

Shape of Pork Barrels.

It is about this time of the year that the pork barrel begins to give trouble, because the pork rises to the surface and can no longer be covered by the brine. Why does pork rise late in the season? An old farmer many years ago explained the reason. The pork barrel is made the same shape as any other barrel—that is, with its sides bulging in the middle and smaller above and below. The proper shape for any barrel to hold pork or beef is with straight staves and smaller at the top than at the bottom. It is somewhat harder to reach down into such a barrel to get out a piece of meat, but the pork will keep as good as at first until the last layer is reached. That should be kept down by putting a cover on it as large as can be squeezed through the top and weighting it to the bottom layer with heavy stones.—Boston Cultivator.

A town clerk of one of the neighboring towns was discussing with the writer the business men of Thief River Falls. He made the statement that they were the biggest hogs in the country, and, before it could be denied, he backed the assertion up with facts. There was a chattel mortgage, he said, on file in his office that was given by a poor farmer to one of the business men of this city and covered three steers (each of which were minutely described in the mortgage) and their increase.

Since Tuesday, when the voters of the Second ward put the handle on Judge "Nic" Tarrant's name, he has been very reserved in his manners. Instead of boasting over his flock of ducks, his dog and cats, and discussing local news with the casual customer, he remains in the rear of his store reading the statutes of the state of Minnesota. This causes the friends of the ex-wrestler to regret the fact that they were instrumental in making a dried-up weazen judge out of the former champion of the Sioux Indian reservation.

Mr. Patrick Meehan has perhaps been annoyed more by troubles of the mosquito size than any other resident of Thief River Falls during the past seven years. There are two causes for this, one of which is the fact that Mr. Meehan always likes to see things done right—no matter whether he has any interest in it or not—and it always annoys him to see things done in a slipshod manner. But perhaps the greatest annoyances of the big hearted lumberman have been caused by people who were not ever friendly to him and who have said and done diverse things with the intent to injure and harass him. Now that he is about to leave the city his friends thought that he would stop worrying about local affairs—and so he has—but things have taken a more serious aspect. Mr. Meehan is now in the troublesome seas of international politics. The report which comes from Ireland to the effect that several regiments will be raised in that country to fight the Boers annoys this rebel of the British government. And why shouldn't it?

A hunting party composed of Dr. Whitcomb and his brother and nephew, of St. Paul, passed through town Tuesday and went up the Moose river hunting moose and deer. Young Whitcomb carried a soldier air, as he has been one of the Thirteenth Minnesota boys. The doctor looked like a Roman knight of old, in his buck skin suit and carrying his savage rifle.

Old Winter in Mild Mood.

Old timers and old Indians in the Black hills agree in asserting that we are to have a mild and open winter. Leaves on the trees along the streams indicate that little or no snow will fall. Cattle on the ranges are but thinly appareled as to hair. Corn husks are light, and the frost that settles on the pumpkin is quickly dissipated by the rays of the sun. The summer girl yet clings in smiling victory over the season to parts of her airy summer wardrobe. Little anxiety is yet apparent on the face of the subjects of the coal baron and men are only sawing wood enough to last from day to day. Housewives that make their husbands happy by doing the chores around the home are yet transacting business with their sleeves rolled up. Open perambulators are very much in evidence and open face babies are not wearing veils. Doctors say the roads are good and not many livers deranged. Folks are good-natured and healthy, except the merchants who laid in extra heavy supplies of cold weather goods, and they are fast becoming philosophers. Elections will soon be over and the list of "also rans" will be fully as large as it ought to be where good fellows are concerned. So it seems entirely safe to say that we are to have a winter that will be popular if it doesn't "act up" in extra frigid fashion.

With Pleasure.

The News is in receipt of the following communication, which purports to be a demand for a retraction from P. O. Bergh:

NOTICE.

John W. Eastman, editor of the Thief River Falls News, Thief River Falls, Minnesota.

Sir:

In the above named paper, published by you on the second day of November, A. D., 1899, at the city of Thief River Falls, Minn., the following item was published by you:

"P. O. Bergh, of this city, appeared before the grand jury and attempted to have a prominent and reputable citizen of this place indicted for arson. The alleged offense was committed some time ago, and, as Mr Bergh has recently quarreled with the gentleman whose character he wished to traduce, the jury rightly refused to take matter up. For the benefit of Mr Bergh it might be stated that, if he possessed any evidence that would convict, he would be equally guilty in shielding the accused so long by his silence. Mr Bergh, however, possessed no convicting evidence, and it was mostly for the purpose of having him indicted, and thereby injuring his business and good name, that he appeared before the grand jury."

You are hereby notified that the above named and published item and statement, by you made, are in all things false, defamatory and libelous; that each separate statement in said published article is in all things false, defamatory and libelous.

Dated November 8th, A. D., 1899.

P. O. Bergh.

We will retract the statement that P. O. Bergh appeared before the grand jury and attempted to have a prominent business man of this city indicted for arson, as we have since learned that it was not P. O. Bergh who appeared before the grand jury, but his brother, Nels Bergh.

As usual, however, we cannot agree with Mr. Bergh in all things. He says "that each separate statement in said published article is in all things false." Does Mr. Bergh mean to say that he possessed convicting evidence that a resident of Thief River Falls is guilty of arson? If so, let him produce his evidence.

CITY ELECTION

Was the Quietest One Ever Held in Thief River Falls.

The city election was held Tuesday, and it was the quietest one ever held in Thief River Falls. But 216 votes were cast, and it is safe to say that had there been opposition at least 500 votes would have been cast in the city. Hardly any of the men employed in the mill voted, and numerous residents of the city failed to appear at the polls and exercise their right as citizens. Up to noon hardly 50 votes were cast, but when it began to be noised about that a number was writing the name of George Williams in for alderman at large much more interest was taken in the outcome. The vote in the city resulted as follows:

For Mayor:
Carl Kretzschmar ... 183
For Treasurer:
J. W. Wallin ... 176
For Aldermen at large:
C. J. Knox ... 139
Hans Langseth ... 98
Geo. Williams ... 83
For Alderman, 1st ward:
John Aos ... 80
For Alderman, 2d ward:
Matt Burzen ... 66
For Alderman, 3d ward:
L. P. Stranahan ... 88
For Justice of Peace, 1st ward:
C. E. Traverse ... 81
For Justice of Peace, 2d ward:
N. W. Tarrant ... 51
For Justice of Peace, 3d ward:
S. T. Johnson ... 28
H. E. Mussey ... 18

Had George Williams' name been on the ticket, he would undoubtedly have been elected. Many people were not aware of the fact that he was a candidate.

WATER IS LOW

And the Steamboat Traffic Is at a Standstill.

The water in the Red Lake river is lower this fall than it was ever known to be before, and is causing considerable trouble to the steamboat men. The cause for this, it is said, is on account of a large number of logs being put in the outlet, and also the fact that considerable sand has washed in from the lake. The Thief River Falls Lumber company has many tons of freight it is desirous of shipping up by the steamboats, but, in all probabilities, it will now have to be taken up by teams.

HYMENEAL.

Stephen Warring and Miss Malinda La Bree Married.

In the presence of a few invited friends, Mr. Stephen Warring and Miss Malinda La Bree, of Thief River Falls were married at the residence of N. Campbell, in this city, H. M. Greene, rector of Christ church, officiating. Both the bride and groom have grown up in Marshall county, where they have many true and lasting friends who will join with the Tribune in wishing them a long life of prosperity and happiness. The groom is a son of the postmaster at Excel, Minn., and the bride is a daughter of that sturdy pioneer of Thief River Falls, John La Bree, and sister to Mrs. N. Campbell, of this city. They left this morning for their future home in Thief River Falls.—Crookston Tribune, Nov. 6.

REMOVING A RING.

How to Take It Off When It Has Become Painfully Tight.

Most girls who have had baby rings have had trouble in removing them from their fingers. "There is really no necessity for all this ado about removing a tight ring," said a jeweler. "In that, as in everything else, the secret of success lies in knowing how to do it. Here is a recipe that I have found unfailing for removing a tight ring, and there is no painful surgical operation involved either. Thread a needle flat in the eye, using thread that is strong, but not too coarse. Then pass the head of the needle under the ring. Care, of course, must be used in this, and it would be best to soap the needle before beginning. The needle having been passed through, pull the thread through a few inches toward the hand—so."

By this time the jeweler had passed the needle and thread under the ring on his own finger and was prepared to illustrate the little lecture. "Wrap the long end of the thread around the finger toward the nail in this manner. Then take hold of the short end and unwind it—so. The thread, thus pressing against the ring, will gradually remove it, however tight or swollen the finger."

How to Cream Potatoes.

Boil small Early Rose potatoes with their skins on. Let them get thoroughly cold. Then mince them very fine with a silver knife, put them in a saucepan, pour over them enough rich cream to come to their level, put four or five little pats of butter over the top of the potatoes, season them with salt and stand them on the stove where they will simmer gently till the cream is nearly absorbed. Do not stir them while they are cooking.

How to Care For Books.

Books last and look new when carefully treated, but soon become worn and shabby when neglected. They should never be piled one on the top of the other or be allowed to stand leaning diagonally, or the binding will become weakened and the edges of the book worn and soiled. When cleaning them, remove them from the shelves and dust each book with a soft cloth. Clean the shelves carefully and wash with carbolic soap. Moths, spiders and other insects infest bookshelves, but a thorough cleaning soon gets rid of them. Do not put the books back until the shelves are thoroughly dry. If leaving home for a long period, it is well to cover each book with brown paper.

How to Store Furs.

After having the furs thoroughly beaten see that they are quite free from moths. Then place in a box lined thickly with newspapers. Wring cloths out in paraffin till nearly dry and place these between sheets of brown paper and put between the folds. At the top and bottom of the box put cloths soaked in paraffin. The paraffin smell soon leaves the fur when exposed to the air.

How to Make Cistern Cement.

For lining cisterns or vessels to contain drinking water nothing is better than a paste made by mixing powdered brick, quicklime and wood ashes in equal parts with sufficient boiled linseed oil to make the mixture of a pasty consistence. The brick should be reduced to a moderately fine powder, and the ashes should be sifted to get rid of carbonaceous matter. The paste may be applied with a stiff brush and subsequently smoothed with a trowel, or it may be applied directly with a trowel or wooden paddle.

How to Clean Kid Gloves.

This method was brought from Paris, and thousands of dollars have been made by it. First see that your hands are clean (hands must be clean); put on gloves and wash them as though you were washing your hands in a basin of spirits of turpentine until quite clean. Hang up in a warm place where there is a current of air. All odor will soon vanish.

The Kansas 3-year-old pacer Little Squaw, 2:14½, has won 11 straight races. She is a bay filly, by Kewanee Boy, dam by Old Walter.

A. J. Libby, owner of Pine Tree stock farm, Gardiner, Me., drove his pair, Bertha Wilkes and Emery, a mile at Rigby park, Chicago, the other day in 2:28½.

Chehalis, 2:04¾, started to beat the Reading (Mass.) track record of 2:11, held by Woodshed, at the Middlesex East fair recently and paced the mile in 2:10¼.

In the 2:15 pace at Rigby park, Chicago, Ralphone took a new record of 2:11¼ in the first heat, and Hallie Harlan took a new record of 2:10½ in the second heat.

During the races at Trenton the other day C. E. Titman's black team, Cleovice and Maryland Boy, were sent against the state record of 2:24½ and lowered it to 2:22.

Lady Mac, 2:25½, was the first of the get of Mambrino King to enter the list, and she is the dam of the pacer Jersey Mac, 2:00¾, who has been an active and successful campaigner this year.

No other stallion has ever before been represented on the turf, in the same season, by a trotting and pacing stallion as fast as Jupe, 2:07½, and Arlington, 2:06½, both by Allie Wilkes, 2:15.

The bay gelding Roscoe C, who reeled off the 2:20 pace at Portland, Me., recently, was never hitched to a sulky until last spring. He took a record of 2:17¼ at Readville and in the first heat of his Rigby race lowered it to 2:14¼.

STAGE GLINTS.

"My Son Dan" is the title of a play which will probably be produced in New York this season. David Lowry, a Pittsburg newspaper man, is the author.

Mrs. Langtry's new play, "The Degenerates," recently made known in England, is not so lusty a success as to justify the expectation that it may be transplanted to America.

The title of May Irwin's latest play, "Sister Mary," is not a new one. A play with the same name, by Wilson Barrett and Clement Scott, was produced at the American theater on May 15, 1894.

The names of stage plays even throw an odd light on the way managers feather their nests. "The Weather Hen," a recent English comedy, has been secured for production here by William Brady.

"The Queen of Chinatown," a wild, lurid melodrama laid in San Francisco, has been produced in New York. Miss Jeffreys Lewis and Mainhall are in it. It seems to be about lurid enough to be funny.

In "The Great Train Robbery," by Scott Marble, a gang of desperadoes hold up a train, blow open the express car with dynamite and crack the safe. The subsequent pursuit of the robbers is described as exciting.

A judge of Mount Vernon, a suburb of New York, has decided that children under 16 cannot attend theaters unless accompanied by a guardian. He has also threatened to punish any manager who will allow a minor under that age limit to enter his theater unless so accompanied.

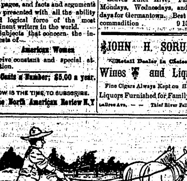
Liquors Furnished for Family Use

LaBree Ave., — — Thief River Falls, Minn.



I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

WANTED.—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. They banish [illegible] One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. [illegible] or twelve packets for 48 cents, may be had at any drug store. GOOD BEDDING.

How to Care For This Necessary Household Equipment.

In the purchase of factory mattresses one cannot be too careful in selection. The greatest deception is practiced in the make up of many of them, and when worn out and ripped apart one will shrink from and shudder in looking upon the filthy looking materials that all unconsciously they have been sleeping upon, supposing themselves to have owned the good mattress that they paid for, but evidently did not get.

A bed is not quite complete without its overmattress. This is made a little narrower and shorter than the mattress proper and is very like a comforter. Four or five pounds of good cotton is sufficient. More could be used, but it were economy and much better to make new ones oftener rather than once so heavy. Measure twice the length that the mattress is desired to be, pin or tack one half of the length to the quilting frames, with the other half hanging over the edge of one of the end pieces, spread the cotton in layers, first lengthwise of the frames and then across, alternating the direction of laying it until it is all in place, bring over the second half and pin into place and, with darning needles and knitting cotton or twine, knot in squares of equal distances and run the edges of upper and under cloth together.

Underneath the under or large factory mattress and next the wire spring always stretch and fasten a thick muslin springs cover. This saves the undermattress from wear and the soil of dust. Over both mattresses it were well, if one has partly worn quilts to spare, especially for everyday use, to spread one of them to protect them. The quilt is more easily washed at frequent intervals than are the overmattresses.

How to Make Norwegian Bread.

One pint barley meal, half pint graham flour, half pint flour, one teaspoonful salt, two teaspoonfuls baking powder and one pint milk. Sift together barley meal, graham flour, flour, salt and powder. Mix into firm batter with the milk and pour into greased tin. Bake in moderate oven 40 minutes. Cover with paper 25 minutes.

How to Care For Silverware.

Any kind of plate in daily use may be cleaned by immersion in strong borax and water for two or three hours. The water should be boiling when the borax and silver are put in. After the plate is dry rub with a little silver powder and polish with chamois. If silver ornaments in the drawing room are not kept in a case, they soon tarnish. They can be brightened by dipping the articles in a strong solution of ammonia and hot water. Silver should never be rubbed with flannel or cotton cloth. The plate not in general use should be wrapped carefully in tissue paper to exclude light and air, as these are the two factors that cause silver to tarnish.

How to Cure Red Acne.

Rosewater, 250 grams; spirits of camphor, 30 grams; powdered sulphur, 20 grams; pulverized senegal gum, 8 grams. Apply to the affected parts with a small sponge three or four times a day. The little yellow powder which will remain on the face after the lotion has dried should be left as long as possible.

How to Clean Ivory.

Piano keys and ivory knife handles should be cleaned with alcohol. Twice a week rub the keys of a piano with a clean cloth wet with alcohol, and they will always look well. A solution of two-thirds alcohol and one-third sweet oil will take ink stains from wood, but if they are fresh stains and not large it is well before trying the above recipe to take a soft cloth, breathe upon the stain, rub gently while the spot is damp, and it will rub out without any trouble.

How to Make Milk Soup.

Milk soup is very useful when there is no stock to convert into soup and the fish course is not to be boiled. Take a quart of milk and boil it slowly with an onion and a blade of mace. Rub an egg into two ounces of flour until it is in fine crumbs and then stir slowly into boiling milk. Season with pepper and salt.

How to Bake Oysters.

Boil a small onion, chopped very fine, in the liquor of one quart of oysters. Chop the oysters, but not very fine, and add to the liquor and onion with a teacupful of cream, a little mace, a cup of fine cracker crumbs, a tablespoonful of Worcestershire sauce and salt to taste. Cook five minutes and then thicken with a full teaspoonful of cornstarch thickened with a little milk. Let the mixture cool and then fill the shells and cover with fine cracker crumbs and little bits of butter. Bake until nicely browned.

How to Make Cottage Cheese Salad.

Arrange crisp lettuce leaves on a salad dish. Over them break into pieces two balls of cottage cheese. Take a cupful of small new beets, previously boiled until tender and salted. Stew these over the cheese and put two tablespoonfuls of salad dressing over the whole. This is very nice.

How to Make Tooth Wash.

Spirits of wine, half a pint; borax, 2 drams; honey, 2 drams; gum myrrh, 1 dram; red sanders wood, 1 dram. Rub the honey and borax together in a mortar, add the spirit gradually and then the myrrh and sanders wood and allow it to stand 14 days, then strain. It is a good plan to rinse the mouth out at bedtime with water to which a few drops of permanganate of potash have been added. It keeps the mouth pure and sweet.

How to Preserve Eggs.

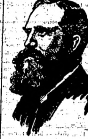
Eggs may be kept as good as new for months if they are smeared all over, the day they are laid, with glycerin.

RAISING LAMBS.

Careful Preparation Required In Animal Industry as Much as In Raising Grain.

To insure a crop of wheat the preparation is made early in the season by breaking sod carefully and then keeping the surface frequently dragged so as to keep down weeds and prevent the evaporation of moisture and to break up and make available the elements of plant food in the surface soil. In animal industry there must be no less careful preparation, writes Howard H. Keim in The National Stockman.

The first point is to select carefully the ewe flock in preparation for a good lamb crop. In selecting the ewes we would discard all broken mouthed ewes and all those having any deficiency or deformity of udder. We would further cull out all those ewes showing a lack of assimilative power, as a ewe that cannot eat and assimilate a large amount of coarse food will not be a suitable dam. Her character will be indicated by the pose of body and general form—a large body with roomy "bread basket," and legs set well outside.



HOWARD H. KEIM.

Now we have the ewes selected and are ready to look at the ram. It is supposed that we are ordinary farmers, with a flock of 40 ewes, and that we will use but one ram, to be turned out with the ewes at evening time and to be returned to the cool shade of the barn every morning, when he will be fed oats and shelled corn in liberal supply. In order that we may take such pains with the ram, he must be one that interests us.

Now, as the ram is half the flock, it is important that he be one of good quality. It is not enough to have a pedigreed scrub. The ram should not only be well bred, but he should be a good individual. Having a carefully selected lot of 40 ewes, all of good, useful age, healthy and sound and in thrifty condition, and having a pure bred ram of high character and being willing to handle him in a way to insure best results, it is now in order for us to determine whether we want early or late lambs. For the ordinary farmer, who has a large amount of work to do, who is not very well provided with shelter, the 1st of April is about the right time for lambing to begin. At this time the ewes will be getting grass, and the lambs will grow very rapidly. Should we desire early lambs the mating would of course need to be earlier, but my experience would teach me to advise coupling about Oct. 25 to Nov. 1, and the main part of the lamb crop will drop early in April. To have the lamb crop good it should be uniform. To be uniform they must all be born within three weeks, and their dams must be all good, and the condition of the ram must be vigorous from first to last.

American Horses In Germany.

Importations from America have caused the horse raisers of Holstein to suffer much of late. A stock company has just been formed in Berlin for the express purpose of importing horses from the United States. The Americans have succeeded in producing a horse which compares very favorably in every way with the Holstein animal, especially in those points so highly prized in a work horse—namely, broad hips and large build generally. The best market for Holstein horses has always been the provinces of Saxony, Thuringia and Brunswick. The demand is created by the large sugar factories. This market has been decreasing of late, owing to American horses being purchased in Berlin. A few days ago this Berlin company shipped a drove of 80 through Hamburg en route for Milan, Italy, where they are to be used on the tramways. Almost every week a long freight train filled with American horses leaves the Berliner Bahnhof for various parts of Germany. In spite of expensive freight and a tariff of $7 per head, the Americans have built up a very respectable competition in the German market.

How Rape Grows.

Rape will do well in any country where corn, oats, barley and cabbages are grown. It will grow up rapidly after being pastured down, but it is not advisable to pasture down too close if a second or third crop is desired. You cannot make forage of it, as it is not a forage plant any more than cabbage is.

Merinos For the South.

The Merino is the oldest race of sheep, and its home for ages past, since Abel fed his flock, has been in a climate which provides or permits of perennial pasture without intermission on account of winter and cold weather. Thus it is the sheep of all sheep suited to the southern states.—Sheep Breeder.

THE FIRST DITCH

[illegible] Be Seven Miles [illegible] and Drain 25,000 Acres.

Geo. A. Ralph, of Crookston, was in Red Lake Falls last week, says the Gazette, preparing the report, estimates and drawings which were submitted to the board of viewers Saturday for the approval of the county commissioners. Mr. Ralph gave the Gazette a forecast of the facts to be presented in the report.

The ditch is to be seven miles in length, and will drain approximately 25,000 acres in River Falls, Sanders and adjacent towns, emptying into the Red Lake river near St. Hilaire. It will have a slope of four feet to the mile, having the best fall of any ditch in the valley, and this excellent slope will reduce the cost of the ditch, as a shallow channel can be made and the natural wash of the water will soon double the depth, as has been demonstrated in a number of cases in neighboring counties.

The excavating is estimated at 73,000 yards and the cost at about 10c a yard, and will average about $1,000 a mile—remarkably cheap,—the average cost per mile of the ditches constructed by the state being $1,400, while in Polk county it runs up to $2,000 a mile—just double what ours is to cost.

The average depth is to be 4 feet; base 10 feet to 12 feet, top 16 to 32—the fall of four feet to the mile being so great as to obviate the necessity of a deeper and more expensive ditch.

Work will be commenced as early in the spring as possible. The contracts for excavating are, according to law, let in 100 feet sections to the lowest bidder at public auction, thus enabling the farmers along the route to take a hand and bid on just the amount of work they are prepared to do.

Mr. Ralph says the value to this county of a series of drainage ditches is inestimable. The movement to put one in Garness is already on foot. The expense is paid entirely by the owners of land abutting the canals, being assessed against the land, and thus a year's benefit is derived before the first payment of taxes falls due, and no portion of this paid by any except those along the canal.

The board of viewers comes in for great praise at the hands of Mr. Ralph. He says Messrs. E. A. Moran, Ole J. Johnson and Alex Sweeas, the members, constitute one of the very best boards it has been his pleasure to deal with, and the cost to the tax payers of their work is about one third what is usually made by the average board in a ditch of this size.

THE NEXT CENSUS.

Elmer Adams Explains How It Will Be Done.

Elmer E. Adams, of Fergus Falls, supervisor of the census for the seventh district of Minnesota, has issued the following statement for the information of those interested:

"The work of taking the census will not be commenced until June 1, 1900. As there are no large cities in the district, thirty days will be allowed for the enumerators to do the work, but the districts will be so small that it can be completed in 15 days, and the schedules returned to the supervisor before July 1. The census bureau at Washington divides the the supervisor districts into enumerator districts.

"There will be about 300 enumerator districts and one enumerator will be appointed for each district. These enumerator districts will generally consist of one township unless two townships are very sparsely settled or the topography of the country is such that it is desirable to make them larger.

"The enumerators are appointed by the supervisor, but approved by the director at Washington. They will not be appointed until May, 1900, and the commissions will not be issued until about the 20th of the month. The enumerator must be a resident of the district, provided there is anyone in the district who is competent.

"The work of the enumerator consists in filling in three or four schedules or blanks, which the government provides for obtaining the information, and no one will be appointed who cannot write a neat and readable hand, and spell well. These schedules form the records of the census at Washington and, unless they can be read easily and quickly, they are worthless.

"The compensation to be paid enumerators is fixed by section 16 of the act of March 3, 1899, and a minimum rate of 2 cents for each living inhabitant, 2 cents for each death, 15 cents for each farm and 20 cents for each establishment of productive industry is provided for all subdivisions where such per capita rates are deemed sufficient. In other subdivisions, where higher per capita rates are to be paid, according to the difficulty of enumeration, the maximum rate will not exceed 3 cents each for each living inhabitant, 3 cents for each death, 20 cents for each farm and 30 cents for each establishment of productive industry, while in subdivisions where per per diem rates are established, having reference to the nature of the region to be canvassed and the density or sparseness of settlement, or other conditions pertinent thereto, the compensation allowed enumerators will be not less than $3 nor more than $6 per day for ten hours of actual field work. Except in extreme cases, no claim for mileage or travelling expenses will be allowed the enumerator, and then only when authority has been previously granted by the director of the census.

"The townships in this district will nearly all receive the maximum rate, and will make the pay for enumerating a township from $30 to $60."

L. G. Browning, of this city, has recently been appointed a United States commissioner for the district of Minnesota, and is now prepared to give attention to homestead filings, make final proofs and take evidence in contest cases before the U. S. land office, at Crookston.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

$1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

Thief River Falls, Nov. 16, 1899.

A number of our Democratic exchanges are getting some comfort from the reports of last week's elections. It doesn't take much to please them.

The St. Paul Pioneer Press last Thursday celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of its birth by publishing a sixty-page paper. It contained a complete history of the Northwest, and should be preserved by everyone for future reference.

The Little Falls Herald shamelessly quotes from Lowell's "Biglow Papers" in support of its contractionist ideas. It will be remembered that these papers were written as "anti" documents during the Mexican war and made use of the same arguments against the acquisition of Texas, Arizona, California, New Mexico and the whole of our great Southwest that are now being urged in opposition to the Philippine purchase. There is no doubt of the literary ability of Mr. Lowell, nor of the cleverness of his rhymes, but, in the light of subsequent history, the least said about his political judgment the better—for Lowell.

Stripped of the wealth of details with which Public Examiner Pope seeks to smother the main point, the fact seems to be that he, as president of the Mankato library board, took five hundred dollars of the public money and applied it to his own uses, without the knowledge of the remainder of the board, for a period of four years. This upon his own confession. When a bartender does this with his employer's money it is called "knocking down," and the bartender is "fired." When a banker dips into the funds held in trust by him in a similar manner it is called "embezzlement," and the banker is "sentenced"—sometimes. But when a Populist office holder dallies with other peoples' money it is called "legal," and the officer is "exonerated." The fact that Mr. Pope refunded the money is highly creditable to his early education, and shows that he has more or less of a conscience about his person, but, what if Comrade Lind had not conferred upon the gentleman the fat office which enabled him to make restitution? And what if the Pope Plumbing Company should again get into financial difficulties while its esteemed head had convenient access to public funds? Here is food for thought. And Mr. Pope is the man who protects the credit of the state banking system.

OUR EXCHANGES.

MIDDLE OF THE ROAD POPS.

Comparatively few people, probably, are aware of the fact that there is an exciting presidential campaign now in progress, but it is true nevertheless. A year or two or three ago some people somewhere, in Cincinnati, we believe it was, nominated Wharton Barker for president and Ignatius Donnelly for vice-president of the United States. They have been running ever since. You won't get a chance to vote for them until 1900, and by that time you will probably get out of the notion.—St. Paul Herald.

STATE TAX LEVY.

State Auditor Dunn has fixed the state tax levy at 1.4 mills, which is the lowest for fifteen years. The state expects to collect $860,000 from general taxation, which, with the $1,250,000 in taxes collected from the railroads, will keep the state machinery sufficiently well oiled. The amount collected from the railroads is constantly increasing, which makes it possible to make a lower tax levy.—Faribault Journal.

NO DOUBT.

Naturally the city press considers the Grindeland law a great hardship to commission men, but it is just an instance of environment influencing them. If they were to mix up with a few of the consignors, who have been buncoed by irresponsible commission dealers, their views would possibly be considerably modified.—Elk River Star-News.

COST OF GRAIN INSPECTION.

The state railroad and warehouse commission has raised the inspection fee for weighing and inspecting wheat 25 per cent. This additional fee comes out of the farmers, of course, who were told by Lind on the stump, for political effect, that they were being robbed by the Republican board. The present board is a Lind board, pure and simple, and the farmers must judge how well the governor has kept his promise to reduce the inspection rate if they would only elect him.—Waseca Journal.

STAND BY EACH OTHER.

Let's see; didn't we hear something during the campaign of 1896 to the effect that when the reformers got control of the bureau of grain inspection that they would put an end to this reprehensible business of appointing city politicians as inspectors and weighers? Well, we must have heard so; we remember it very distinctly, and yet the Minneapolis Times, which has ever claimed the proud distinction of having "discovered" Lind, is authority for the statement that of the 100 appointments to that department, 65 are residents of St. Paul and Minneapolis. There is no use in talking—we city fellers must stand by each other.—Princeton Union.

A WORD FOR COLLINS.

Judge Collins, of the Minnesota supreme court, wrote the decision sustaining the constitutionality of the Grindeland law. Then some of the leading commission men very foolishly declared that, if the judge becomes a candidate for governor, they will endeavor to defeat him. The judge's friends have very promptly taken up the challenge and declare that, if nominated, Collins will carry the state by 100,000 majority. The Courier believes he would carry it by a large majority and against any opponent.—East Grand Forks Courier.

ONLY TOO TRUE.

There perhaps is no class of men more in touch with the financial and economic condition of the country than the commercial traveling men. Ask any of them where the small investor will find the best field for his surplus earnings, and they will tell you in the cheap farm lands of Northern Minnesota and North Dakota. In years gone by they have invested in city property and bank stock. This has been a failure and they want no more of it. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have gone into farm lands this season. This should furnish the key note for the farmer who has a little surplus money to invest.—Wabasha Herald.

The Rev. John Naille of Trappe, Pa., is the oldest clergyman in active service in this country. He was born on Feb. 18, 1801, and still preaches in the German Reformed church in his town, where he has been pastor for over 60 years.

There are a couple of New York society women who design their own gowns. They make water color sketches of what they want and send them to their dressmakers. The women are Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt and Mrs. Clarence Mackay.

General Joe Shelby's old colored body servant, "Uncle Billy" Hunter, in spite of his 70 years, is still vigorous and in the service of the Shelby family. He was born a slave on the Shelby plantation. At present he devotes most of his time to the care of his old master's grave.

THE FASHION PLATE.

The prettiest plaids are in the Scotch woolen goods, pretty soft shades which blend most harmoniously.

Some of the sleeves to the gowns with the sheathed skirts are so snug that they button from the wrist nearly to the elbow.

Corduroys are pretty and becoming and warm. Occasionally a jacket of corduroy is seen. They have a jaunty effect for all sorts of outings.

Women who like a fine felt and a severely masculine style go directly to the men's shops and get a small sized man's hat, with which they take a great deal of comfort.

Long coats reaching to the knees, with large hoods, are made of satin and trimmed with stitched bands of cloth in patterns. They make beautiful wraps for elderly women.

The woman who makes her children's clothes should learn to do smocking. It is exceedingly pretty, very smart, particularly on little linen frocks and smocks, and is not difficult to learn.

The so called golf capes, reaching half way to the bottom of the skirt, have much more elegant lines than the shorter capes. They are really intended more for sea voyages and traveling wraps.

Wine color is much talked of for fall and winter use. With the velvet hats birds or flowers of a peculiar light shade of red are seen. Occasionally a dark wine colored felt hat appears trimmed with velvet of the same shade, and the wine color appears as trimming for some of the outing hats.—New York Times.

THE CRUSTY BACHELOR.

Some little women are big gossips.

A good many men carry the burden of silly women folks.

A woman thinks she is mighty "independent" if she wears a rainy day skirt in dry weather.

When we admire a woman's figure, some other woman is pretty sure to say that it is made up.

No woman is eligible to a literary club unless she speaks of her pleasures as "little oases in her life."

When a woman claims to be younger than she really is, she will claim to be a college graduate when she isn't.—Atchison Globe.

The logs are in a portion of the river that has high banks and where the ice never thaws from three to four weeks from the time when the ice goes out above. The presence of the logs there means that the ice will freeze much deeper, and be held much longer next spring, thus resulting in flooding the residence portion of Jerome's addition to Crookston.

Lipscomb had his petition in the field early in the week and it was quite generally signed by those who had not already pledged support to other candidates. Wm. Mr. Kretzschmar intends to carefully consider all applicants and then use his own good judgment in the matter.

Who Has Seen Andy?

Red Lake Falls is stirred to its foundations by a case of robbery. Spencer Sylvester, who has been in that vicinity for some time buying stock, went to bed Sunday night with $250 in his clothing. Monday morning he awoke to find his money missing. His room mate, Andy Bell, was also gone, and he naturally thinks Andy took the stuff.

ON THE SIDE.

A judge of the old school, loving port wine and hating trouble, is said to have once summed up a very complicated case in the following terms: "You have heard the evidence, you have also heard what the learned counsel have said. If you believe what the counsel for the plaintiff has told you, your verdict will be for the plaintiff; but, if on the other hand you believe what the defendant's counsel has told you, then you will give a verdict for the defendant. But if you are like me, and don't believe what either of them has said, then I'll be hanged if I know what you will do."

According to the local papers of that village, an applicant for a license to hunt deer down near Aitkin, Minn., the other day asked the auditor if he had to show the license to the deer before he could shoot it, and asked the question in all seriousness. He was informed that all that was necessary was to notify the deer of his presence in the woods and his intention to shoot by posting the notice on the run way where he was shooting. After that the deer had to take his chances just like any other native.

An exchange remarks that this is the season of the football gridiron and the pigskin, the college warwhoop and the hair crop, the arnica bottle and repentance. Where is the American citizen who has not thrilled with pride to witness a touchdown and a knockdown, a tackle, a mixup, two or three broken legs and a basketful of anatomical fragments, and the boss hero of the eleven carried off the field on a stretcher, with his polorus jammed up through his thorax and his diaphragm driven up into the neighborhood of his medulla oblongata? With what swelling hearts do we read that the quarter back kicked three front teeth through the back of the tackle's neck, and that the half back, in a glorious scrimmage, had his leg broken in four places and scattered bones over the entire course! And after the battle is over, when night has drawn her sable curtains over the blood strained field, see the relic hunter who scrutinizes the gridiron for some fragment of flesh or bit of bone to commemorate the glorious day! Gaze, reader, gaze in your fevered imagination upon these chrysanthemum-topped heroes, hear the curdling cries and the crunching bones, see the field blood stained and gory, smell the redolent arnica and antiseptic bandages in the hospital wards, and shed a silent tear for the nation's dead.

An unusual case will come up at the next term of district court for Morrison county, the result of the appeal of Geo. Schaballa, from the justice court decision giving Mary Schaballa, his daughter-in-law, judgment for $75. It is a custom at Polish weddings for those dancing with the bride to pay for the honor, and a large sum is generally received, which makes a fine wedding present for the couple. Mrs. Geo. Schaballa claims that the wedding receipts from guests who danced with her were $90, which she gave to her father-in-law for safekeeping. She says she has never been able to get it back. The father-in-law claims that the money was given him in part payment for the abundant refreshments he had furnished for the occasion. Mrs. Schaballa sued for $90, got a verdict for $75 and the father-in-law has appealed.

An Osakis girl found a love letter that her father had written to her mother years and years ago. She read it to her mother, substituting her own name and that of her lover. The mother evinced deep disgust, and forbade her daughter having anything more to do with a fellow who could write such sickening nonsense. Then the girl gave the letter to her mother to read, and suddenly the house became so quiet that you could hear the bed tick.

RIGHT WAY TO SWEEP

To sweep a room is little. To get it ready for sweeping takes time.

Each upholstered piece of furniture should be carefully brushed and plain polished surfaces wiped with a slightly damp cloth, then rubbed with a dry one and either moved out of the room or covered with a dust sheet.

A paint brush does excellently to remove the dust that will lodge in carved parts, or if in the crevices a very tiny or stiffer brush or a wooden skewer can be used. If there are moldings at the top of the wall, use a long handled brush if it is perfectly clean. If it isn't, tie a duster over it. Do ceilings and walls in the same way.

Don't open the windows till the actual sweeping is finished, or the current of air will scatter the dirt over the room again.

Sprinkle salt or tea leaves on the floor and work from the corners to the center of the room. The stroke should be long, the broom always on the floor pushing the dirt before it, not setting it in motion by swinging it round. Carpets that are often taken up can be cleaned in the following way, which raises no dust and leaves the carpet looking very bright and fresh.

Get a bucket of lukewarm water, to which liquid ammonia in the proportion of a tablespoonful to two gallons has been added. Dip a clean house flannel in this, wring it as dry as you can and wipe the carpet with the grain. The dirt and dust will collect in lumps before your flannel. The cloth needs frequent rinsing, and the water must be changed as it gets dirty.

After the room has been swept and any dust there may be has settled the woodwork should be wiped with a damp cloth, using a little whiting on the cloth for dirty places in the case of paint or turpentine on a dry cloth for varnished.

Don't forget that the pictures need dusting. A careful housekeeper of my acquaintance insists on this attention being paid to the backs as well as to the fronts.

See that everything is moved for dusting. Dusty rims round ornaments proclaim a careless housekeeper.—The best plan is to have the first duster slightly damp and finish off with a dry one.

How to Make Tomato Mayonnaise.

Select firm and good sized ripe, ice cold tomatoes. Cut a slice from the top and scoop out the seeds and soft pulp with a spoon, being very careful not to break the tomato. Shred cress very fine and mix with a small quantity of mayonnaise dressing. Fill the tomato with the mixture, put a teaspoonful of dressing on the top of each tomato and serve on crisp curly leaves of cress.

LaBree Ave. — — Thief River Falls, Min

I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

WANTED.—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. HIGHWAYS OF INDIA.

POTENT FACTORS IN DIFFUSING EDUCATION.

Instrumental In Breaking Down Caste Barriers and in Improving Condition of the Masses—Economy of Good Roads.

Good roads which the English have constructed in India have perhaps done more to break down the almost inseparable barriers of caste and to ameliorate the condition of the masses than all agencies put together.

It cannot, of course, be justly claimed that good roads are original causes of civilization, for it requires public intelligence to appreciate their value, but they always promote the enlightenment which builds them. They are potent factors in diffusing the education which primarily created them, says Professor Sylvester Waterhouse of Washington university, St. Louis.

In the colonial days of this country it sometimes took four years to send a load of peltries from the trading post of St. Louis to England and receive in return a stock of merchandise. Letters from New York to the same point were not infrequently from four to six months on the way. If these exceptional conditions, due to scanty population and to a lack of facilities for rapid transportation over vast reaches of ocean and wilderness, had continued, the growth of American civilization would have been seriously retarded. But the authorities of this country early recognized the importance of good roads. Public moneys were spent upon the construction of turnpikes before appropriations were made for the improvement of our harbors. The policy of extending our highways and railroads has been actively encouraged by our government and vigorously carried out by the American people.

Good roads are always and everywhere educational. Enlightening commerce, they broaden the range and increase the profits of its exchanges; diffusing intelligence and the agencies of spiritual culture, they bear to all lands the benefits of the highest civilization.

The economic importance of good roads has been demonstrated by startling statistics. It has been shown that the traction force required to move 3,000 pounds at a speed of three miles an hour over a level road of iron, asphalt, loose gravel and soft sand is, respectively, 8, 17, 320 and 448 pounds. From this statement it may be easily inferred how costly bad roads are. Iron and asphalt are mentioned for the sake of comparison. They could not, of course, be used as the constructive materials of country roads. But the difference between good and bad roads is so great that the team which can draw only one ton on the former will, according to the character of the improvement, haul from three to five tons on the latter. It is estimated that the aggregate cost of transportation over public roads of the United States is now about $1,000,000,000 a year. This sum is largely more than one-third of the productive values of the farms of the country. Careful calculations indicate that fully one-half of this cost of haulage could be saved by the construction of good roads. In these computations the saving of $500,000,000 a year is limited to the transportation of farm products, but there would be a corresponding economy in the carriage to the consumers of vast quantities of merchandise and hardware. The losses which bad roads inflict are felt by every industrial interest in the United States.

The improvement of our highways would be variously profitable. Now farmers lose many days in the year waiting for good weather and dry roads, but the support of the men and animals is as expensive when they are idle as when they are engaged in lucrative work. With good roads the farmers need never lose any time. In wet weather, when they could not work on the land, they could carry their products to market. No rains would compel them to spend valuable time in idleness.

It takes much longer time and requires a far greater tractive force to haul loads over bad roads than it would to draw heavy loads over good roads. The unnecessary strains to which bad roads subject teams, harnesses and wagons are very wearing. Rough usage seriously injures the farmer's equipment. Improved highways would prevent avoidable depreciation of property and increase the gains of producers.

It is hardly worth while to build a few good highways. Systems of roads should be improved at the same time. A draft wagon, light enough to be used on muddy roads, could not avail itself of the full advantage of a rock road. The wagons used on hard roads weigh from 2,800 to 3,000 pounds, and they carry loads of three or four tons. Such wagons could not be employed on soft roads. They would sink into the mud and require as much force to move them as it would to haul their heaviest freight on a gravel road. Common and improved roads cannot be profitably combined. What is fit for the one is not suited for the other. Therefore the main and tributary highways of any district should all be constructed at once.

Road Progress.

Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York and Connecticut are probably the states which have made the greatest progress in country road building. They have all levied state highway taxes and have built roads by a system of state aid. While the rate of taxation has been low, the amount collected has been considerable. In New York $50,000 was collected by a state tax of 1 1-10 cents upon every $1,000 assessed valuation, and four-fifths of the whole amount was collected in the cities, where most of the property in the state is situated.

KITCHEN APRONS.

How to Make Them of Calico, Oilcloth or Gunny Sacking.

A serviceable and quickly made kitchen apron is the one of gingham or calico, made like a child's apron, low neck and no sleeves, simply joined over the shoulder and buttoned in the back. It consists of a shaped front, goring at the sides, arm's eyes shaped out and a low cut back and front, about the shoulders, and arm's eyes and neck bound or hemmed down. A wide hem finishes the bottom, and patch pockets make the apron better finished because more convenient. The back widths are slanted or gored and fitted to each side of the front width.

The same apron made of table oilcloth is a most convenient and serviceable apron to have. It saves a vast amount of washing, for it can be wiped off and is again ready for service. It saves the dress fronts from soil and wear, and for dishwashing and wash day is invaluable. Such an apron is quickly made and pays well. If the oilcloth is of neat design and color, the apron looks very neat and tasty and wears well. Once having used one, no housewife who has a great amount of dishwashing and general kitchen work to attend to will be without one of these oilcloth aprons.

Another apron fashioned and much used by another thrifty housewife, who also sews a great deal for others, she calls her "hard times apron." It is made of "gunny sacking," or such sacks as binding twine is put upon the market in. These sacks are strong and, for the kind, are firm and bear a great deal of wear. In whatever form these aprons are cut, they are finished at all raw edges by binding with new calico, cut in bias strips an inch and a half or two inches wide. They are usually made in the style that cuts the bib and front breadth in one piece, pointed ends passing about the hips and buttoning at the back and the ends of the bib joined at back of neck or shoulders, permitting the bib to be slipped over the head. —Christian Work.

How to Make Soft Soap.

Potash, 7½ pounds; tallow, 10 pounds; rosin, powdered, 8 pounds; water, 87½ gallons. Dissolve the potash in part of the water, add one-third of the grease and rosin and heat. Mix in the remainder of the grease, put in a barrel and add the remainder of the water a little at a time for several days. Stir often. It will be ready for use in about two weeks.

How to Make Ginger Beer.

One gallon of boiling water, one ounce of best bruised ginger, the same quantity of cream of tartar and one pound of loaf sugar. Put all together and stir until the sugar is dissolved. Leave until it is warm as new milk and then add a dessertspoonful of yeast on a small piece of bread. Cover the pan with a cloth and leave for a whole day. Then strain and bottle. Be careful not to fill the bottles too full, or they will burst. Cork tightly and tie down. This will be fit to drink after two days, but will keep longer.

How to Make Tomato Catchup.

One gallon of tomatoes, one pound sugar, one quart vinegar, one teaspoonful of cayenne pepper, one teaspoonful of black pepper, four teaspoonfuls of ground cloves, four teaspoonfuls of salt and four teaspoonfuls of ground mustard. Boil down one-quarter. Add four teaspoonfuls of ground cinnamon. Bottle and seal.

How to Preserve the Teeth.

To prevent the teeth from decaying unduly brush well every morning, using a good tooth powder and having a little carbonate soda in the water. After each meal rinse the mouth with tepid water in which a little carbonate of soda is dissolved, and before retiring at night brush the teeth again. If strong medicines have to be taken, have them made up in the form of pills if possible, as tinctures of iron, acids and so on have a bad effect on the enamel of the teeth.

How to Make Peach Custard Pie.

Line a plate with crust, cut the peaches in halves, lay over bottom and sweeten. Yolks of two eggs and white of one, a pinch of salt, one tablespoon sugar. Beat, add milk enough to fill the pie and bake. Make a frosting of the white and sugar to beat stiff. Brown in the oven.

How to Make Olive Sauce.

Mix an ounce of flour in four teaspoonfuls of olive oil, add three shallots chopped fine, half a lemon peel grated to powder, salt, pepper, a bay leaf, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar and a cup of soup stock. Cook 20 minutes. Strain and stir in the meat of six olives cut small. Mutton hash should be made simply and dry and the sauce poured around it or served apart.

How to Bake Eggs and Kidneys.

Eggs baked with ham or kidney form an excellent luncheon dish. Heat a baking dish and put in two tablespoonfuls of butter. When it is melted, break into it several eggs, sprinkle with salt and pepper and a few bread crumbs, place the dish in a hot oven for three minutes, then pour over the eggs a cupful of rich brown sauce and one-half cupful of cooked ham or cooked kidney chopped fine.

How to Make Potato Pears.

Boil and mash the potatoes, put them through a sieve and return them to the saucepan. Add a little milk, a small piece of butter, the yolks of two eggs, pepper, salt and nutmeg. Stir well and leave on a plate to cool, shape into pears, dip them in beaten egg and bread crumbs and fry in deep, hot fat. Make a stem for each with a piece of parsley stalk.

'Twill Be Expensive.

A case was tried in the Beltrami county district court now in session at Bemidji that has attracted considerable attention. A number of settlers on the "Big Meadows," through which the Clearwater river runs in that country, brought suit against Lammers Bros. & Nelson, the lumbermen, for damage alleged to be caused to their homesteads by reason of overflows incident to the opening of the flood gates in the dams above the meadows during the spring drives. The one test case tried occupied several days, B. S. Bennett, of Fosston, and H. J. Gjertson, of St. Paul, appearing for the plaintiffs and Steenerson & Rowe, of Crookston, acting for defendants. It was midnight Saturday before the jury brought in a verdict of $100 for one year's damge to Dars K. Larson. By mutual consent the other seven cases will be heard at Crookston next January. If the plaintiffs are as successful in their other cases it will make driving logs on the Clearwater river quite expensive.

GOVERNMENT DAM

The party of T. Milton Fowble, U. S. surveyor, which has been examining Red lake and Red Lake river, with a view of ascertaining the practicability of a dam at the outlet of the lake for the purpose of equalizing the flowage of the river and improving the navigation thereof, has about completed its work. There remains a few days' work which must be done on the ice, and operations are practically at a stand-still awaiting the closing of the lake.

While the engineers are of course very reticent as to the result of their work pending the final decision and report of Major Abbot, chief of this department, it is generally understood that the feasability of the scheme has been established and that a good dam site has been selected.

It will be remembered that this work has been done under the appropriation secured by Congressman Eddy for the purpose of making the survey only, and that if, as seems probable, Major Abbot reports favorably to the establishment of such a dam, it will still be necessary for the people of Thief River Falls and vicinity, who will be principally benefited by this public work, to pull together and impress upon the congressional delegation the necessity for a further appropriation to build the dam. The improvement of Red Lake river is not a pet scheme of the engineer department which will be carried through without an effort on the part of the people interested, but a matter governed entirely by the action of congress, the engineers merely carrying out the will of that body. Congressman Eddy, always stands ready to further the interests of his constituents in every possible way and in this matter will not be found lacking, but the earnest co-operation of the citizens and business men of this section will be necessary to secure congressional recognition.

SOME DUCKS.

Four and a Half Tons of Them Spoiled in Transit.

C. J. Knox returned to this city Monday from St. Paul, where he went to dispose of some wild ducks that had been shot in this vicinity this fall. The ducks were shipped by freight, and, owing to some misunderstanding, the car in which they were loaded was side tracked at Barnesville, where it remained for several days. When it arrived in St. Paul it was discovered that all of the ducks—about four and one-half tons—had spoiled. The matter has been settled by the Great Northern and Mr. Knox receives full pay from the company for the damage.

WATER ROUTE

From Grand Forks, N. D., to Lake Superior.

It is given out from Grand Forks that the first step in one of the greatest enterprises that has ever been conceived for the advancement of this great northwest has been consummated. This is nothing less than the construction of a canal from Grand Forks to Duluth. It has been known that the project was under consideration, but it was not thought that it was so far advanced as is now found to be the case.

A syndicate of eastern capitalists has engaged Ledure Guthrie, of that city, to go to New York and there make arrangements for this deal. All preparations are made and the route is decided upon. The preliminary survey of the country to be traversed by the canal will begin within the next two weeks, the work continuing all through the winter months. The plan is to use to advantage the Red Lake river to Red lake, through that lake, thence southeast through many of the other smaller streams and lakes that frequent that locality, into the Mississippi, and to a point due west of Duluth. From that point the actual canal work will be begun, there being no natural bodies of water to aid in the work. They now figure that there will not be over 150 to 200 miles of actual canal work to be accomplished, and figure that the entire canal can be ready for use inside of two years, if not less.

~~The company has received~~ its charter, and will be known as the Great Northern Canal and Transportation company. There is no connection with the Great Northern railroad.

The president of the company is G. McGowan, examiner of Trenton, N. J., and now head of the big rubber trust. The local attorney, Guthrie, states that many Grand Forks and Duluth men are in the deal, but would not divulge their names. The capitalization of the company is one million, and more will be provided as necessary.—Crookston Times.

Thief River Falls, Nov. 23, 1899.

Garret A. Hobart, vice president of the United States, died Tuesday after a long illness.

The Roseau County Times again has inside information that a railroad is to be built into that county next summer.

We would beg to ask our esteemed contemporary of the Press, what, in his opinion, is the cause of the sudden rise in the price of pumpkins.

Alger was knocked out and Otis is a bit groggy, but when the Washington correspondents spar up to your Uncle George Dewey we fear they have undertaken too large a contract.

And Pope had the nerve to put in a bill to the state for his expenses when he made his memorial trip to Mankato to explain why he took that five hundred dollars of the public library's money. But Auditor Dunn couldn't stand for his work.

The tone of acerbity which seems to creep into the communication of Mr. Bergh in last week's Press would lead us to believe that that urbane and highly cultured fellow townsman of ours is annoyed about something or other.

Pope's resignation is in the hands of the governor and Comrade Lind heaves a sigh of relief. Even a Populist governor can see through the holes in a ladder, but it takes a sickening wrench to separate a Populist officeholder from his job.

Washington dispatches state that Congressman Eddy will reintroduce the free homestead bill at the session of congress this winter. The prospects of its becoming a law are exceedingly bright, a fact which will be good news to the settlers in this section.

Farmers are still plowing in this vicinity and the oldest inhabitant hasn't a word to say. Persons who entertain the erroneous idea that Thief River Falls lies within the Artic Circle are invited to come and see for themselves, but all such are warned to bring a good supply of palm leaf fans.

New Jersey, where practically all of the big trusts are formed, went gold bug Tuesday.—Wadena Tribune.

Referring, we presume, to the fact that the state in question, which has built up a flourishing business in the organization of monopolies under Democratic rule, has at last seen the error of its ways, returned to the Republican ranks and promises to do better hereafter.

The annual report of the third assistant postmaster-general, which was made public last week, contained strong testimony in favor of the honesty and efficiency of the postal service. During the last fiscal year the postmasters of the United States and their assistants handled $196,653,544, of which $95,021,384 was receipts from the sale of stamps, boxes, money orders, etc., and the balance was disbursed for various expenses. Of that enormous sum the entire loss to the government by burglary, fire, bad debts, embezzlement and other forms of carelessness and dishonesty was only $19,358.

We are informed by grand jurymen as well as [by] Nels Bergh that there was no investigation made by the grand jury at the last term of court in this county in regard to the arson affair referred to by the News in its last issue.—Press.

The grand jurymen (as well as Nels Bergh) who misinformed Bro. Mussey found the old gentleman an easy victim as the above would indicate. We will state postively that the arson case above referred to was actually and in fact brought to the attention of the grand jury by Nels Bergh, and it can be proven. Now let Mr. Bergh "concern" himself and ask for a retraction and the public will find out who is lying.

He who guides the political destiny of the North Star state for the Minneapolis Journal—vice Jay Jerry, called up higher—informs us that while indeed the "Minnesota colony" at Washington had selected Tams Bixby for our next governor, that august body is now inclined to give us R. G. Evans instead. This seems all a very nice and comfortable family arrangement, but, will the Republicans of this state prefer to secure their candidate, ready made, at the Washington bargain counter or to exercise a little judgment themselves in the selection of a chief executive? It might be a good plan to consult the fellows who have to get along with the governor for two years here at home as to their preference in the matter.

In the torrent of vituperative billingsgate, which P. O. Bergh turns loose on the innocent public through last week's Press, it appears that rage has mastered prudence and in the vain attempt to throw mud upon the editor of this paper, Mr. Bergh inadvertently confessed himself guilty of a very serious offense—that of shielding a law breaker by silence. Over his own signature, replying to our question, "Does Mr. Bergh mean to say that he possesses convicting evidence that a resident of Thief River Falls is guilty of arson," he says:

"We mean to say that your statement that Mr. Bergh does not possess convicting evidence is false."

The News, in common with a majority of the residents of Thief River Falls, has little or no interest in the matter—except a desire to see fair play. If a resident of this city—who, by the way, has been prominent business man here for a number of years and has always possessed an unimpeachable reputation—is guilty of arson, let him be punished. If, on the other hand, this man Bergh is lying and circulating slanderous stories about an innocent man, he should be made to suffer the consequences.

Dentist.

J. E. Argue, D. M. D. will be here Dec. 4th to remain till Dec 16. Will be found at hotel.

Homesteaders desiring to make final proof can do so in Thief River Falls before L. G. Browning and thus save a trip to Crookston.

SHOULD SAY IT WOULD.

There are some who profess to have enough inside information to state positively that John Lind will not be a candidate for reelection as governor, but will be a candidate for the position now held by Senator Nelson. While Mr. Lind succeeded in being elected governor, his scheme to succeed Nelson will certainly fail.—Hubbard County Clipper.

THE POT AND THE KETTLE.

The Courier—East Grand Forks—thinks that a clear-out is needed in Crookston, where people are being rolled for their money altogether too frequently. The Courier may be sort of getting even for the remarks that have been warranted about East Grand Forks in this same line in former years, but there is a growing feeling that it is hitting painfully near the truth.—Crookston Times.

THE NEXT CENSUS.

Minnesota is fast taking first place in the Union. General Bristow estimates the population of Minnesota at 1,800,000, and places it as the seventeenth in that respect in the list of states; North Dakota is forty-fourth, with 235,000 people; South Dakota thirty-seventh, with 400,000, Wisconsin twelfth, with 2,138,000, and Montana forty-third, with 250,000.—Bemidji Pioneer.

EDDY WANTS FAIR PLAY.

Congressman Eddy has been talking to Jerry, J., the Minneapolis Journal man in Washington, about the Australian ballot system in Minnesota, and he thinks at least one change should be made. In his opinion the man who marks ballots should be done away with, except where the voter is physically unable to do that for himself. Here's his story by way of illustration: In a certain township in Otter Tail county the ballot marker fixed more than a hundred ballots, and, strange as it may seem, every one of those ballots were cast for the same set of officers, from governor down to constable, a most unusual thing, and quite impossible, as I look at it, had the 100 men themselves picked out their candidates. The fact is that the 'marker' in question impressed his personality and prejudices upon the ignorant voters to such a degree that every one of them voted the exact ticket which the 'marker' suggested." The fact that Otter Tail county gave Ringdal but 47 more votes than it did Eddy leaves one in doubt as to which of the congressional candidates profited by the prejudiced marker. — Crookston Times.

Capt. Homer D. Anderson, of Grand Forks, who has purchased the Red Lake Express, is in the city breaking up the steamboat preparatory to hauling it overland to Grand Forks. Capt. Anderson is the proprietor of the steamer City of Grand Forks and a numerous fleet of barges on Red river, and proposes hereafter to confine the operations of this boat to the lower river, using the lighter draught Express for the up river work. Though it may seem a pretty stiff job to haul a load of this size fifty miles, Capt. Anderson has successfully accomplished tougher contracts, having hauled a much larger steamer 150 miles, from Minnedosa to Devils Lake, and is confident of his ability to take care of the present problem.

ON THE SIDE.

Rumor has it that a case of an unusual sensational nature will be tried in the justice courts in this city after the first Tuesday in January, when the newly elected justices of peace take their oath of office. It seems that one of the esteemed church members of this city, whose melodious voice can be heard each Sunday morning singing praises to his maker in one of the local churches, so far forgot his professions while riding through the country one day this fall as to purloin some pumpkins from a farmer's field. The farmer happened to see this breach of the commandment, "Thou shalt not steal," and proposes to see if there is any law in the state which will protect a man in the possession of the produce raised by the sweat of his brow, even although the aggressor happens to be a public officer for the time being. Attempts to settle the case out of court have been futile, and the people are at present expressing little sympathy for the man who let the vision of pumpkin pies tempt him from the paths of virtue.

A letter from Ada, Minn., says the St. Paul Globe, from one of our noble brotherhood advises us that there the movement which we fear is coming to a strong demonstration. Two of the five physicians are of the "shrieking sisterhood," and one of them is the senior partner in a medical firm, of which the junior member is a mere man. Two very good-looking young women conduct a large dry goods store, assisted only by a half-grown boy, who walks around and does his duty like the carpenter in "Alice in Wonderland." The county superintendent of schools is a blooming maiden and was lately the victim of an amusing error. The principal of the Ada school (trousers) has to report frequently to the county superintendent of schools (skirts). He never flinches from his duty, however, no matter how often in the day he has to run across and see her. Some men live in the atmosphere of danger and rejoice. He ordered a ton of coal the other day and the driver delivered it to the house of the county superintendent on the ground that he thought that the school principal lived there. Meanwhile all Ada is a-grin, and the other men "also ran."

The other day, while our postmaster was hard at work at his desk, says his clerk, a slight noise caused him to raise his eyes, and he discovered a blushing maiden of sixteen with a money order in her hand which she wanted cashed. She handed it with a smile to the official, who, after closely examining it, gave her the money it called for. At the same time he asked her if she had read what was written on the margin of the order. "No, I have not," she replied, "for I cannot make it out. Will you please read it to me?" The postmaster jumped at the chance and read as follows: "I send you $5 and a dozen kisses." Glancing at the bashful girl, he said: Now I have paid you the money, and I suppose you want the kisses." "Yes," she said, "if he has sent me any kisses I want them, too." It is hardly necessary to say to those who are acquainted with Uncle Sam's official that the balance was paid in a scientific manner.

On reaching home, the delightful maiden remarked to her mother: "Mother, this postoffice system of ours is a great thing, developing more and more every year, and each new feature seems the best. Jimmy sent me a dozen kisses along with a money order and Irve made a mistake and paid me twenty; it beats the special delivery system all hollow."

LaBree Ave. — — Thief River Falls, Min

I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

WANTED.—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. R·I·P·A·N·S, [illegible] for 5 cents or twelve packets for 48 cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

UNJUST TO THE FARMER.

Cost of Roads Should Not Fall on Him Alone.

With all the advance of thought in the direction of better highways, there are still many who believe that their cost must necessarily fall upon the agriculturist, says Otto Dorner, chairman of the L. A. W. highway improvement committee. Just as the farmer was the pioneer settler in most of the states, so he has been the pioneer road builder. At his town meetings he has determined where new roads should be laid out, which of them should be "worked" and improved and how much of a tax should be expended upon each improvement. As it was left to him to plan this important work, so its expense has rested almost entirely upon his shoulders. Now that the cry for macadamized highways is to be heard in the city and country alike farmers believe, as a rule, that they are to be called upon to build them.

This is wrong. Farmers have enough in the way of taxes to pay without undertaking the building of elaborate gravel and stone roads. It is unfair that such a burden should be added to their already heavy load. Whatever may be undertaken in the way of constructing permanent highways should be done at the expense of those who are to reap its benefits. True it is that the saving in the cost of hauling crops would be considerable and that this saving would result almost entirely to the farmer. But that is no reason for asking him to pay the cost of building such roads. He is not the only one to use them. They serve to bring city people and city products into the country as much as they serve to bring country people and country products into the city. The merchant who has business with the farmer is as much benefited through a good road to travel over as is the farmer who comes to town on business of any kind. Neither is the use of roads limited to those living in the vicinity, and travelers from a distance share the benefits resulting from their improvement. It would be the height of injustice, therefore, to ask the farmer alone to stand the cost of good roads.

The proper division of the cost of good roads has been accomplished through state aid.

GOOD ROADS LESSON.

Cotton Growers Learn the Value of Improved Highways.

"It appears, as the result of careful investigation, that it costs in the United States just about three times as much to market our farm crops as it does in European countries, where good roads have been built," says Otto Dorner, chairman of the L. A. W. highway committee. "Farmers there are able to make their loads three times as great as ours, owing to better roads.

"But we are not obliged to go to Europe for illustrations as to good roads, for we have fortunately a few localities in our own country which furnish such examples. Mecklenburg county, N. C., not long ago began the construction of a system of macadam roads. It was customary there to load up two bales of cotton on a wagon to be hauled by a mule team. The mules could draw this load very well during dry weather. After a rain, when the roads were soft, the load was too much for even a pair of tough mules. After the county had begun to build roads this load was doubled several times, and it was found that the same two mules were able to haul as much as 12 bales, or 6 tons, in place of their former load, which amounted to only a single ton. And, more, the improved roads made it possible to haul this load in wet and dry weather alike, for, being properly built of stone, they were fit for use immediately after a heavy rain."

FAVOR GOOD ROADS.

Wisconsin Begins to Feel the Need of Better Highways.

The last Wisconsin legislature passed a law permitting towns to purchase roadmaking machinery on time payments, and also passed a resolution providing for an amendment to the constitution permitting of state aid in roadmaking. This resolution will have to be passed by the next legislature and then submitted to the people. After that any legislature can pass the necessary laws.

From the way in which the movement is progressing there seems now no doubt that the amendment will be passed and adopted. Even before that time, at the present rate of progress, there may be many miles of improved highways in the state. Once the farmers of the state have become convinced that good roads are a necessity for their betterment, the good roads movement will pass out of the experimental stage into one of accomplished fact. It begins to look as though that time was very near, even if it has not now arrived.

Handicapped by Mud.

The movement for good roads deeply concerns every commercial, financial and social interest in the land. We are handicapped in all the markets of the world by an enormous waste of labor in the primary transportation of our products and manufactures, while our home markets are restricted by difficulties in rural distribution which not infrequently clog all the channels of transportation, trade and finance.

A Good Investment.

People generally are beginning to realize that road building is a public matter and that the best interests of American agriculture and the American people as a whole demand the construction of good roads and that money wisely expended for this purpose is sure to return.—Maurice O. Eldridge, Assistant Director, Office Road Inquiry.

CLEANING WALL PAPER.

How to Remove Stains Without Injuring the Gloss.

It is not always desirable or possible to repaper a room where the wall paper has been soiled in a few places. To be able to clean such paper without injuring the gloss and general effect would be a great relief to many a housewife. This can be accomplished without much difficulty.

The method of procedure is to take four ounces of pumice stone in the fine powdered form and mix it with a quart of flour. When the two have been mixed with the hands, add enough water to knead the mass into a thick dough. Form the mass into several rolls about as long as the width of each strip of wall paper and two inches in diameter. Wrap some white cotton cloth around each roll, stitch it in place and then boil about three-quarters of an hour. By that time the dough rolls are firm, and the cloth covering can be removed.

These rolls of hardened flour and pumice stone are then used for rubbing over the soiled portions of the paper. Not only will ordinary dirt spots be removed, but grease will be absorbed by the rolls. After the rubbing the paper should be dusted off carefully with a clean cloth, and if any dirt remains the process should be repeated. This removes dirt much better than the bread process.—New Voice.

How to Bake a Ham.

First scrape the ham clean, place in a saucepan of warm water and let it simmer very slowly for about six hours. Take it out, remove the rind and rub into the flesh as much granulated sugar as it will receive. Place in a baking dish, pour over it a pint of cider and bake for an hour in a slow oven, basting occasionally with the cider. This is evidently the old fashioned method which your grandmother used.

How to Make Apple Bread.

Boil a dozen good sized apples that have been carefully peeled, cored and quartered in water enough to cover until they are perfectly tender. While still warm mash them in double the amount of flour and add the proper proportion of yeast and a level teaspoonful of salt. The mass should then be thoroughly kneaded without water, as the juice of the apples will make it sufficiently soft. It should be left to rise for 12 hours, then formed into loaves and baked when quite light. Apple bread was the invention of a scientific Frenchman, and it has always been highly commended for its healthfulness.

How to Make Potato Stew.

Take six or eight large potatoes and peel and slice them. Put a cupful of water in a frying pan with three slices of salt pork cut into small pieces and let them cook half an hour before adding the potatoes, with salt, pepper and a little sage. Cover closely and cook until the potatoes are soft. Then add one large tomato, sliced. Cook ten minutes longer, and then add a large piece of butter and serve.

How to Cure Moist Hands.

Many people suffer from this unpleasantness in summer, and here is a powder for it which has quite cured several cases. The hands must be washed three times a day in lukewarm water to which tannic acid has been put in the proportion of three drams to one pint of water. Afterward use a powder composed of powdered salicylic acid, 3 parts; talc, 7 parts; starch, 90 parts. This powder is to be sifted inside the gloves.

How to Make Oatmeal Cookies.

A very good substitute for macaroons. Two-thirds cup of butter, same quantity brown sugar, one cup rolled oats (raw), one cupful flour, one egg, one teaspoonful of baking powder. He doesn't—he loves it because it is Hamm's delicious brew. It is the medicine his kind aunty has mixed in it that he dislikes. Never mind he is to have a drink of the pure article afterwards to take the bad taste away.

ALLOTMENTS

Work Will Be Finished by the First of January.

Secretary Hitchcock has given Chippewa Commissioner Hall until Jan. 1 to complete his labors alloting lands, etc., on the Chippewa reservations. Hall says he will be through at that time and if this means that the time is near at hand when the surplus lands on the reservation are to be opened for settlement it will be pleasing news to the people of this section. The Indian commission has already cost the government $150,000, an enormous sum considering the work performed. For the last year the expense has been $13,000, during which time 175 allotments and 74 changes in allotments were made on the White Earth reservation.

During the year 58 Indians were removed to White Earth at an expense of $3,000. Only a few more allotments remain to be made and none will be made at Red Lake at present.

A JUST REWARD.

F. H. Whitney, of the St. Cloud Reformatory, Promoted.

Superintendent Houlton today appointed F. H. Whitney principal keeper of the reformatory, in place of Dee Norton, deceased. Mr. Whitney has been chief engineer of the institution for the past ten years, and during Mr. Norton's absence has filled his position. The new appointment is a promotion for Whitney, who is an excellent man for the place. He is one of the popular citizens of the city, being alderman from the Seventh ward.—St. Cloud Journal-Press.

Mr. Whitney is quite well known in this city, and is a son-in-law of John N. Whitman.

Farmers and the Census.

The twelfth census of agriculture will be taken on June 1, 1900, but it will be of the crops, products, fruits, etc., of the calendar year 1899 only.

Farmers who do not keep book accounts of their transactions may forget the items which the census enumerators are required by law to gather. If they do, since statistics cannot be created and written in by the enumerators or officers at Washington, those forgotten items will never appear in the census reports, and the business of the communities for which they are missing all compare less favorably than it should with that of those which give fuller returns.

Agriculture is the foundation of material wealth and prosperity. It is, therefore, important that the statistics which represent it should be full and accurate. In order to insure that accuracy and fullness and to aid the people in answering the questions which the census enumerators will propound, an attempt is being made to induce all farmers and producers to begin at once to prepare written accounts showing the acreage, quantity and value of each crop raised by them in 1899 and the acreage and value of all their farm products for 1899. If they prepare such accounts and retain them until the enumerators arrive, they may rightfully claim the honor of rendering the twelfth which comes at the threshold of the twentieth century, the most perfect census of agriculture ever taken.—Hutchinson Times.

INDIAN TIMBER

To Be Disposed of in a Different Way.

Representative Eddy has given consideration to the question of legislation making changes in the system of cutting and disposing of the pine on the Chippewa reservation. He is preparing a bill to be presented to congress, and is being assisted in drafting the proposed legislation by the Indian commissioner. The principal feature of the measure is the provision adopting the Redcliff plan of manufacturing the timber on the reservation. It is also provided that where the timber is accessible to driveways the Menominee system shall be utilized.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

$1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

Thief River Falls, Nov. 30, 1899.

And you notice the fool newspapers that jumped on Dewey jumped right off again.

Now if the Pioneer Press can be induced to hold off and not precipitate a blizzard by one of its fatal weather editorials, we can postpone the redemption of our winter overcoat.

After carefully looking over the newspapers in the case, we are prepared to advise Charles Mitchell and the city of Alexandria not to allow that foot ball team to stray about where the big, rude boys of Fergus Falls and St. Cloud can get at it and ruin it.

The Crookston Times last week completed eight years of usefulness. Always bright, newsy and well representing the restless energy of the great Northwest, we wish for the Times eight times eight years of future success and then some more success.

When Charley Towne gets up on his hind legs and blatantly asserts that Hanna is trying to make McKinley king of the United States, there is left but one reply—the one made famous by Horace Greely: "You lie, you villain, you know you lie."

OUR EXCHANGES.

WELL SAID.

The fact that the idle gossip of some of the newspapers caused an unfeeling audience in a Washington theatre to hiss at the picture of the hero of Manila should bring a blush of shame to the cheek of any man who calls himself an American. This incident in a measure illustrates that the habit of the big American journals of devoting an endless amount of space to public men becomes a pernicious one when carried too far.—Wadena Pioneer-Journal.

DID NOT ARRIVE.

Those meteors last week were something like Lind's promised reforms—eagerly watched for but unaccountably delayed.—Bemidji Pioneer.

"'TIS AN ILL WIND."

John Lind says he would go and assist the Boers in their fight against the British if his duties as governor did not compel him to stay at home. How fortunate for the Boers even if it is a little hard on Minnesota!—Polk County Journal.

HOME RULE.

Tim Byrnes, he of the genial smile, came on from Washington to tell the Republicans of Minnesota that Bob Evans is the right man to nominate for governor. Tim is a good fellow, and so is Bob, but the Republicans who live in Minnesota are going to name the next governor without the aid or consent of the Washington colony.—St. Cloud Journal-Press.

ENOUGH HOT AIR THERE NOW.

It is said that upon the earnest solicitation of friends, Wm. J. Bryan will enjoy a much needed rest for a time and he is planning to spend the winter in the south, probably in Texas.—Wadena Tribune.

For rent—A building suitable for restaurant. Inquire of P. E. Smidesang, Wylie, Minn.

ON THE SIDE.

Mr. L., a business man of this city, who has had an account of long standing against a certain merchant of Crookston, recently had occasion to visit that place and incidentally dropped in to the latter's place of business to see if he could be induced to dig up. The merchant was out—said the clerk—for an indefinite period. It was doubtful if he would return again that day—or the next—it would be entirely useless to wait. Mr. L. was apparently satisfied with the answer, but began to examine carefully the stock displayed in the store and to ask prices as if intending to purchase. After half an hour or more had been spent in this way, the growing nervousness of the clerk convinced our townsman that there was something queer going on, and, stopping behind the counter, he discovered the coy debtor crouched under the show cases in a very uncomfortable but equally unobtrusive position. The recalcitrant one was persuaded to quit his obscure retreat, and, after a little argument, accepted an invitation to liquidate in full.

When Mr. L. came home he wore a smile which could be measured by a yard stick.

A story is told of a judge who lately had the hypnotic plea raised before him by a burglar. The prisoner claimed that he did not know that he was "burgling;" that he did it automatically and unconsciously, under the direction of a hypnotist.

The judge said he would give him the full benefit of the law and also of his hypnotic misfortune. He thereupon sentenced the man to five years' penal servitude, but told him he could, if he chose, send for the hypnotist and have himself made unconscious for the entire term of his imprisonment.

"The same power," said the judge, "which enabled you to commit burglary and not know it ought also to enable you to suffer imprisonment with hard labor and not be aware of it. At any rate, this is the best I can do for you."—Collier's Weekly.

Going the rounds of the press, are the following interesting and curious waifs, sent forth by someone who forgot to attach his name: No century can begin on Wednesday, Friday or Sunday. The same calendars can be used every twenty years. October always begins on the same day of the week as January, April as July, September as December, and February, March and November begin on the same days. May, June and August always begin on different days from each other and every other month in the year. The first and last days of the year are always the same. These rules do not apply to leap year when comparison is made between days before and after February 29.

The Anoka Herald says: A certain Minneapolis man visited the Rochester insane asylum this summer for the purpose of seeing a demented friend who was confined therein, and the attendant who accompanied the visitor advised him if approached by any of the inmates to simulate insanity, for his own protection. As they were moving through a corridor occupied by patients classified as harmless, the visitor was accosted by a very sane appearing young man who announced that he was the victim of a grevious outrage, he having been confined to the hospital for years for insanity, while in reality he was as sane as the visitor himself. In order to carry out his part, the latter said. "But I myself am insane, and have been for two years." "What is the nature of your delusion?" asked the patient. "Oh, I went crazy on free silver," replied the visitor for want of a better excuse. The insane man eyed him carefully for a moment and seemed to be considering his case. Then he announced, "Why, man, you're not crazy, your'e simply a d—n fool."

The East Grand Forks Courier says: The following rather clever specimen of the rhymster's art is going the rounds of the press, credited to a North Dakota soldier who is alleged to have found happiness in the Philippines:

"I would like to write a sonnet and put loving trimmin's on it to the pretty little girl I left behind me. But she's got another feller, and I simply want to tell her that her loss with bitter tears will never blind me. Here in beautiful Manila, far across the bounding billow, I have found another sugar plum, God bless her! And although she is the color of a fried New England cruller, it will never drain my pocketbook to dress her. Her's a figure like a Juno, doesn't try to hide it, you know, with the finery the Yankee girls so covet, and her mouth is a creation built for blissful osculation, with the very cutest nose on earth above it. And her smile! O! Holy Moses! What a vision it discloses of a rosy portal gemmed with grinders pearly; O, there are no flies upon her and I fear I am a goner to the wiles of this sweet Filipino girlie. So the girl I left behind me isn't very apt to find me shedding tears of disappointment should I lose her. For I'm really quite enraptured with the native belle I've captured, and she's gone upon her North Dakota snoozer. So exultantly I tell her that her once best steady feller, whom she thinks she's downed forever in the soup, has been happily re-lovered, has quite easily discovered that she's not the only chicken in the coop."

The Fergus Falls Journal says: We inadvertently omitted the notice of the marriage of Andrew Tollefson and Miss Carrie Simonson, which occured in this city a few days ago. Mr. and Mrs. Tollefson were divorced a few years ago, but both became tired of a life of single blessedness and decided to re-marry. Judge Frankberg, who performed the same ceremony for them some years ago, officiated.

Warden Wolfer, of the state penitentiary, was swapping stories with St. Paul friends the other day, and here is one on the "Oirish:" "The time of the big Stillwater fire three years ago the sparks and burning brands were falling in the prison yard pretty thick and it looked for a little while as though the whole plant would go. Some stables were threatened so dangerously that I had the horses taken out. The prisoners were watching the fire—those that could see the reflection of the flames—and listened to the alarm with marked apprehension. First thing I did when I saw the stables were in danger was to run to the guard and sing out to him: 'Let Ole out! Let Ole out right away!' Ole was a prisoner who had charge of the horses. And from one of the upper cells came the cry: 'That's roight. Save the Swedes and let the poor Oirish burn up.'"

Pumpkin Pie.

[CONTRIBUTED.]

The shades of night were falling fast,
As hurridly down thro' Norden passed
An editor with an empty craw,
Who remembered the pie made by his ma.
Oh! Pumpkins! Big, round, yellow Pumpkins!

His nerve was strong, his eye was keen;
There was no one nigh, he couldn't be seen.
So halting his steed from its steady gait,
He purloined three pumpkins and didn't wait.
Oh! Pumpkins! Big, ripe, juicy Pumpkins!

Then putting the whip to his fiery horse,
His conscience not having the least remorse,
This justice heaved a relieving sigh,
And sang a hymn, "The sweet bye and bye."
—Oh! Pumpkins! Sweet, sweet Pumpkins!

Then came the farmer and demanded gold
From the editor for pumpkins he had stole,
And gave the editor a lecture free,
For this same editor was a J. P.
Pie! Golden Pumpkin Pie!

Then came the sheriff and led him hence
To another justice for recompense.
He pleaded not, with countenance meek
And took an adjournment for one week.
Pie! Crystal Pumpkin Pie!

Today is Thanksgiving day and it is being quite generally observed by the people in this city in a quiet manner. A large number of turkeys have been disposed of by the local dealers, but, owing to the unaccountable raise in the price of pumpkins, few people can enjoy that prince of delicacies—Pumpkin Pie! But let us be thankful for small favors.

Theft or Conspiracy?

Last summer Mrs. Sam. Goslin bought a "Singer" machine of Ed. Gilbertson. The contract was that Gilbertson took Mrs. Goslin's old machine and gave her a new one. She was to pay $30 boot money. The money was paid in $10 an $5 payments. The last payment was made to one P. Sommerfield, of Grand Forks, N. D. His receipt was dated 6—13, 1899, and signed P. Sonnfl. About ten days ago this Sommerfield came to town and claimed that the machine was sold too cheap, and demanded of Mrs. Goslin $8. This she paid, but Sommerfield was told that if he did not return this $8 he would get into trouble. He did return the money, and got out a writ of replevin before Mussey, with Hibner as attorney. The suit was returnable on Saturday last. The parties joined issues, both claiming the machine, and the case was continued, at Hibner's request, until Tuesday, November 28, at 1 P. M. Sommerfield came to town on Monday and on Tuesday morning judgment was rendered for the sewing machine company and against Mrs. Goslin. On examination of Mussey's docket it was found to be changed to 9 A. M. An attempt will be made to claim that the undersigned consented to the change. Whoever so asserts is a LIAR and the truth is not in him. The whole transaction is a deliberate attempt to swindle Mrs. Goslin out of her sewing machine, and Mussey is a willing tool in the attempt. This is published in the interests of the public that they may take warning and guard themselves (if possible) from the same kind of a swindle.

SOME PUMPKINS.

They Tempt an Editor from the Path of Virtue.

Sheriff Sampson on Monday arrested H. E. Mussey, of this city, for petty larceny on a warrant issued by Justice Johnson. The complaining witness is John Schlossar, one of the well-to-do German farmers of the town of Norden. The complaint sets forth that on the 15th day of October, 1899, the said H. E. Mussey "did feloniously steal and carry away three pumpkins" from the farm of the complainant. Mr. Mussey was taken before Justice Johnson and made no plea to the charge. Trial is set for Monday, Dec. 4th, at 1 o'clock p. m. Mr. Mussey was released on his own recognizance.

The affair created somewhat of a sensation about town as the defendant is the editor of a local paper, a prominent church member and a justice of peace. It is the outgrowth of a previous dispute over certain justice fees, in which Mr. Schlossar feels himself to have been unfairly used by Mr. Mussey.

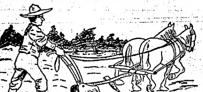
LaBree Ave. — — Thief River Falls, Minn



I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

WANTED.—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. RUIN THE HIGHWAYS.

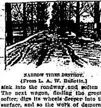
Narrow Tires Destroy the Work of the Road Builder.

Next to water, the greatest enemy of good roads—yes, of all roads—is the narrow tired wagon. Narrow tires and water, acting together, have given our country roads a third dimension. They are not only so many miles long and so many rods wide, but they are deep—so deep, alas, at times that travel over—or, rather, through—them is next to impossible.

A heavily loaded wagon always leaves its tracks on the highway, and the depth of these tracks depends upon the material of which the road is built, the weight of the load and the width of the tires. The rut formed by the passing wagon forms a trough for the rain, which, instead of running off to the side, as it should do, remains to sink into the roadway and soften it. The next wagon, finding the ground softer, digs its wheels deeper into the surface, and so the work of demoralization and destruction continues.



NARROW TIRES DESTROY.
[From L. A. W. Bulletin.]

A wide tire, on the other hand, instead of forming a rut, will roll and harden the road surface. By the use of wide tires every loaded wagon can be turned into an effective road roller and made to improve the roadway instead of helping to destroy it. All that is necessary to make the best road in the world is to make it solid and to give it a hard, smooth surface. Nothing so much tends to accomplish this as the frequent use of road rollers. Wide tires are road rollers and therefore roadmakers. Narrow tires are road destroyers. If wide tires could be adopted for general use, every loaded wagon which today helps to cut up and destroy country roads would become an active factor in their improvement.

Experience has repeatedly proved that hauling on wide tires requires less tractive force than is needed for the narrow tired wagon under the same conditions. Director Waters of the Missouri agricultural experiment station, who has made very extensive tests on the subject, characterized especially by their scientific accuracy, declares that six inches is the best width of tire for a combination farm and road wagon and that a large number of tests show, without a single exception, a difference in draft in favor of the broad tires ranging all the way from 17 to 100 per cent.

Now that the adoption of state aid has solved the financial problem connected with road improvement, in the United States care should be taken that the roads we build are not destroyed by narrow tires. Country districts receiving financial aid for road purposes out of the state treasury should do all in their power to encourage the use of wide tires. This has been accomplished in some places by exempting all wide tired vehicles from taxation.

LOSS FROM BAD ROADS.

Drain Upon Agricultural Energies Caused by Them.

No other hypothesis than ignorance of the facts or indifference to their own interests can explain why the farming population of the agricultural states, which does the bulk of the voting, has allowed itself to lose such an immense aggr[illegible] of earnings annually on account [illegible] bad roads.

Through a special agent, appointed for the purpose, the department of agriculture has been collecting data showing the cost of bad roads the country over. Replies from 10,000 letters addressed to reliable farmers and teamsters in various parts of the United States have been received. By equating their contents the conclusion is reached that the average cost of hauling a ton a distance of one mile is 25 cents, when for the same amount a ton can be carried 200 miles by water and 50 miles by rail.

The American farmer is at an expense three times greater per mile for hauling his produce than the European farmer. This is because the service standards abroad are lower and because the roads there are a great deal better. This drain upon the agricultural energies of the country will continue until this annual surface treatment is supplanted by a system of fundamental and permanent construction.

Automobiles and Roads.

Great improvement in public roads is sure to attend and follow the multiplication of automobiles. One writer predicts that "before the end of 1900 the total mileage of macadam and asphalt will be increased by fully 100 per cent." More than $300,000,000 is said to be pledged already to the manufacture of this class of vehicles. Till the storage battery is perfected and cheapened the means of propulsion are practically limited to gas engines and petroleum products.

State Aid System.

The state aid system successfully answers the objection still made by many that we cannot have good roads without overloading the farmer with taxes, of which he is already paying more than his share.

Motors and Good Roads.

The motor vehicle makers will be compelled to back up the good roads movement. Their success depends upon its advancement.

MONEY IN HOGS.

The Profit Lies in Getting to Market Promptly and Often. Method of Feeding.

The profits of hog killing, writes Charles Haines of Ohio, are in getting to market promptly and often. No breeder or feeder loses anything by constantly keeping his hogs in a condition ready for market. Care, judgment and skill pay proportionately as well in raising porkers as thoroughbreds, but remember that life is too short to waste in feeding scrubs. The lower the price of pork the more important it is that the farmer have the best machine to work up corn at a profit. Pigs intended for pork should be crowded as rapidly as possible to be the most profitable. The advantage of growing improved stock does not lie merely in its better adaptation to the market wants and to the fact that it will respond more promptly and continuously to feed. The early age at which it matures is one of the sources of profit to its owner. Early maturity is chiefly a question of feeding for generations with a view of making rapid and continuous growth, the early maturing quality being transmitted as it gradually increases by heredity. Breeding at an early age also probably has much to do with the creation of the quality. It is possible to push it so far that the results will be inconsistent with full and healthy development, but if this be avoided early maturity is one of the most valuable attributes of the improved animal.

As to the feeds and manner of feeding, nearly every breeder has his own way about them. I have never been an advocate of cooked feeds for hogs, young or old. Humanity is accustomed to being fed in the main on cooked food, and because it is more palatable to man it has been assumed that it is more palatable and even more digestible when fed to domestic animals. This is by no means clear, however, and, in fact, the results of numerous experiments are all the other way with but few exceptions. More than a dozen different series of experiments have been undertaken to determine what effect cooking or steaming has upon the flesh and fat making power of various feeds, and in nearly every one of these the result showed that a given amount of feed would make a larger amount of gain uncooked than cooked, with a possible exception in the case of potatoes, in which the proportion of albuminoids is very small and the starch very large. I would say provide your hogs with good, wholesome feed, changing the feeds frequently. Do not feed corn alone, but with it give slops made from ground feed. In the winter when the weather is very cold feed liberally of corn at night and no slops unless they are fed warm, as the corn will help to retain the animal heat, the slops having a tendency to cool and chill the animal. In the morning, when they have the day and warmth of the sun (if there be any sunshine) in which to exercise and retain the animal heat, I would feed slops and less corn. This manner of feeding will keep them cool. They will worry less, thrive better and give good results. Another thing, I would rake up and burn to a charred condition all the corncobs, water the charcoal thus obtained and sprinkle it with salt and sulphur. This I consider one of the best (if not the best) preventives of hog cholera and other diseases known among swine. In the winter provide your hogs with shelter and warmth, in the summer with good shade.

Wasting the Corn Crop.

Farm and Ranch has frequently spoken of the wasteful methods of handling the corn crop in Texas, where the custom is to save only ears with the shucks, leaving nearly one-third the feeding value of the crop standing in the field to be burned up by the sun. Some farmers top their corn and save that much for feed, but that is a great waste. Many farmers tell us that corn cannot be saved in stalk, yet we see a very few farmers who actually do save it in good condition. W. R. Spann of Dallas, after filling his three large silos, cuts and shocks the rest of his corn, and his Jersey cattle eat it readily, only wasting the butts. We were in his field last week, where the men were cutting and shocking, and there was an air of plenty in the large stalks and heavy pendent ears that told of good management and prosperity. When the ears of corn reach the proper size, they will mature as well on the cut as the uncut stalk. Why should Texas waste so much good fodder and ship so many poor steers out of the state to eat other people's fodder?

Training Shepherd Dogs.

The natives of New Mexico seem to have an original way of training shepherd dogs. A pup is taken from its mother as soon after birth as possible. The breed of dog is immaterial. The young of a sheep or goat is taken away, and the pup is substituted. After the first few days the pup is never fed except just before the flock goes to pasture in the morning and just after the sheep are brought in at night. As soon as he can walk he goes out with the flock and stays with it all day. Whenever he begins to anticipate supper by trying to drive the flock in before sundown he gets punished. After he is about a year old he takes the flock out, guards it from other dogs and coyotes during the day and brings it in at the proper time at night without supervision. I have tried all kinds of temptation on a dog that was encountered in the hills with his flock, but in spite of all he would remain faithful to his duty, driving his flock to a safe distance before venturing to make the acquaintance of my own [illegible] —Orange Judd Farmer.

ROSEAU'S FIRST.

A Big Fire Destroys One-Third of Roseau.

About one-third of the business portion of Roseau went up in smoke last Friday morning. The fire originated in the Hotel Roseau from a lamp, and before it was known the up-stairs was all aflame. The fire consumed the general merchandise store of Sjoberg Bros. Hotel Roseau, S. M. Skoglund's tailor shop and residence and the Pioneer drug store, which also contained the postoffice. The contents of all the buildings were partially saved.

Loss: Sjoberg Brothers, store and hotel, $5,000, insured for $3,000; J. M. Skoglund, loss $800, no insurance; C. A. Carson's drug store, contents, $250, insurance $150; on building $800, insurance $400.

'TWAS WARM.

November, 1899, Was Warmer Than in Former Years.

There has been a great deal of favorable comment upon the high temperature of the month just closed and a comparison with the corresponding month of many prior years will tend to show just much warmer or colder the month has been than some of its fellows. The appended table shows that the month has been the warmest of any corresponding month, with one exception, for twenty-six years. That month was November of 1887, when the mean was 45 degrees, as compared with 39.6 for 1899. That month was a record breaker even to the oldest and most experienced inhabitants. That was the year when at Christmas the Mississipi below St. Paul was not frozen over and when a steamboat excursion was run from Red Wing to St. Paul on the river. The coldest November in the lot of 26 was that of '75, when the highest average of the mercury was 15 above. But that was a good, old-fashioned winter such as our fathers tell about. The table, which is decidedly interested reading follows:

WOLF BOUNTY.

The Law Passed by the Last State Legislature.

At the request of many of our subscribers, the NEWS this week publishes the wolf bounty law passed by the legislature last year:

Section 1. Every person who shall kill a full-grown wolf during the months of January, February, March, April and May shall be entitled to a reward of seven (7) dollars, or a cub wolf any season of the year three (3) dollars, and any person who shall kill any full grown-wolf at any other season of the year shall be entitled to a reward of five (5) dollars, one-third (⅓) of which shall be paid by the county wherein the wolf or wolves shall be killed, and two-thirds (⅔) thereof shall be paid by the state, and all counties wherein the interest and welfare thereof require are hereby empowered to grant such rewards herein provided, and to increase the same so far as concerns the liability of said county.

Sec. 2. The person or persons so claiming such reward shall within thirty days after the killing of such animal exhibit the carcass of the animal so killed with the head and ears entire to the town clerk in the presence of two witnesses of the town wherein such animal was killed, and make oath that the animal so exhibited is the animal killed by such claimant, stating the time and place and where such animal was killed by him, and that the claimant did not spare the life of any wolf within his power to kill.

A New Town.

Albert Berg, secretary of state, is accredited with an ambition to become the founder of a city in northern Minnesota, also of a county. He and C. A. Moody and John Zeloh have claims on Lake of the Woods at the mouth of Warroad river. The new Winnipeg-Port Arthur railway crosses their line, and a station is to be established on Berg's farm. Congressman Eddy and a government engineer inspected a harbor of the incipient city last summer, and the congressman will try to get an appropriation for dredging the harbor. The scheme for a new county calls for a slice of Beltrami and a slice of Roseau counties, the two to be combined in a county to be called War Road.

THE NEWS,

By John W. Eastman.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

$1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

Thief River Falls, Dec. 7, 1899.

The wily burglar is making things lively for the police of St. Paul, and the guardians of the law are as much at fault as a bull dog after prairie chickens.

R. G. Evans is receiving many handsome compliments from the state press just now. Mr. Evans would undoubtedly be the next governor of Minnesota if he resided outside of Hennepin county.

There is imminent danger of an armed conflict and bloodshed in Kentucky over the inauguration of a governor. Although a Democratic returning board has found a Republican plurality in every one of the 119 counties, aggregating nearly 3,000, Mr. Goebel, the Democratic candidate, is said to be determined to claim the office and seat himself in the governor's chair by force if necessary. He is a man of desperate character and his associates are of the same sort. They would hesitate at nothing to accomplish their purpose, and therefore people who know him and have just come from that state predict serious trouble.

Referring to the staff of the Roseau Times, the editor of the Sauk Rapids Free Press says: "With Rod at the helm and Will at the rudder, things ought to hum in that neck o' the woods." While we agree with the Free Press in its evident intention to express appreciation of the Times' management, we would strongly advise Bro. Wood to confine his metaphors to things typographical and not again venture upon the perilous sea of nautical lore. True, the galley is common to both professions, but, by careful comparison, one might distinguish between the many oared trireme and the brass lined dump. Also being intimately acquainted with Will, we object to him being placed even metaphorically "at the rudder." Bill is no fish.

The capture by Lieut. Munro, a former resident of Minnesota, and fifty men of the Fourth cavalry of the Filipine Gen. Conon, with 800 officers and men, with rifles, several American and seventy Spanish prisoners at Bayambong, province of Neuva Viscaya, was a successful bluff. Lieut. Munro tapped the rebel wire, telegraphed to Conon that he was advancing with a large force, and demanded his surrender. After negotiations, Conon consented to capitulate to a "superior force," whereupon Lieut. Munro telegraphed that he would enter the town with a small guard and receive the garrison's surrender. He captured the whole Filipino force and secured their arms, the rebels supposing Munro had an army behind him.

OUR EXCHANGES.

NOW WILL YOU BE GOOD?

I read a history that makes the America boy's heart burn in his breast at every line he reads. I read of a people who had grown from a colony to an empire; of a people that built their cabins in the forests two centuries ago, and now look with level eyes into the face of the greatest nation on earth, finding none greater, stronger, nobler than themselves; I read how this people have made their name respected in every land, their flag to be saluted on every sea; I read how their statesmen sit in the council of the nations, and her scholars are revered in every hall of learning. And so I read on until I came down to the history of Dakota, and there I read that a man up in Sioux Falls wanted everybody to know that he was ashamed of his country. God save the mark!—Bob Burdett in the Los Angeles Times.

FIRE AT WILL! FIRE!

Party leaders on both sides of the house are seeking for some way to fire Congressman-elect Roberts without making the matter a partisan issue. We would remind them that the only way to fire him is to fire him.—Princeton Union.

A LONG RANGE MOUTH.

That gallant officer, Gen. C. Mack C. Reeves, who gained glory in the Philippines by the fighting his regiment did,—in his absence—has been appointed warden of the State's prison at Stillwater. He'll do. The privates say he can swear like a grown person.—Ortonville Herald-Star

"ANTI-ISMS."

The heterogenous, inharmonious, incompatible, incongruous, antagonistic, mutually hostile fag ends of "isms" and fads which are trying to get together under one banner in opposition to the Republican party, having nothing else in common but hatred of the republicans, remind one of nothing so much as a remnant sale where the buyer is expected to take the whole lot at the marked down price, to chose out.—Minneapolis Journal.

EASY TO GUESS.

A Boston paper says Eugene V. Debs is going around Massachusetts predicting that the worst panic of all is on the way. On the other hand, President J. J. Hill, of the Great Northern railroad, recently expressed the opinion that there were 20 years of continuous prosperity before the people of this country. Which is the best judge of business conditions?—Minneapolis Tribune.

ROLLIS.

It is a little winter-like today.

Rumor has it that we will soon have a hardware store.

H. F. Star spent Saturday and and Sunday in town.

Harry Drew has just completed a new sheep barn.

Mr. Willmore, of Crookston, is a guest of the Lee family.

Bert Perry, of Beltrami county, spent Sunday with E. F. Burns.

Mrs. Milton Forder and her son, Bert, went to Thief River Falls last week to spend Thanksgiving with E. Zoh and family.

A number of people gathered at the home of E. F. Burns Tuesday night. Card playing and dancing was the amusement of the evening and all report a good time.

Mike Polanskey was married Monday morning to Miss Lampher, of St. Cloud, Stearns county. Mr. Polanskey is one of our prosperous young farmers, and we join their many friends in wishing the newly married couple unalloyed happiness.

Hilda Stewrude, whom we mentioned in our last items as being sick at Crookston, died Monday, Nov. 27. She was burried here Friday. Rev. Fekke conducted the funeral services, which were largely attended, and which showed the esteem in which Miss Stewrude was held.

Heating stoves from $2 up at H. M. Hicks.

WILL IMPROVE.

The O. K. Mill to Be Remodeled and Enlarged.

The O. K. Mill will close down shortly before Christmas and some extensive improvements will be made. Considerable new machinery will be placed therein and the mill will be enlarged to accommodate its rapidly increasing business. O. S. Thompson, an experienced miller and millwright, will have charge of the improvements and he will probably remain here in the future in charge of the mill. Although the improvements contemplated will necessitate the closing up of the mill for a period of about a month, all of the patrons will be accommodated, and a large stock of flour, etc., will be kept on hand.

Under the management of Messrs. Hanson & Barzen the O. K. mill has built up an enviable reputation and their brands of flour are unexcelled by any company doing business in this section of the state. It is a home institution and should receive the support of all citizens of Thief River Falls.

I. O. O. F. DANCE.

Tomorrow Promises to Be a Grand Success.

The dance to be given by the Odd Fellows in their new hall tomorrow evening promises to be one of the most successful social functions ever attempted in Thief River Falls. A large number from Crookston, Red Lake Falls, St. Hilaire and other towns in this vicinity are expected to be present, and a majority of the citizens of this place expect to attend. Tickets, including supper, will be $2, and everyone should turn out and give the Odd Fellows a helping hand.

ON THE SIDE.

The following unjudicial and certainly injudicious language is attributed to Judge Wofford, of Kansas, in sentencing a murderer recently:

"When you go down to the penitentiary behave yourself, and some fool governor, who wishes to distinguish himself for philanthropy, benevolence and kindness, may pardon you. Yours is an extraordinary case, and some governor may think he can become distinguished by pardoning you. Therefore the jury did you a great benefit not to hang you. They have given you a chance to be pardoned.

"We have had examples lately of governors seeking to become heroes by pardoning murderers and criminals in this state. The hero factory has been working overtime in the last eighteen months. If a man can become a hero by wading a river with the water up to his shirt tail, why can't a governor become a hero by pardoning you?"

GRAPE HARVEST IN PORTUGAL.
THE PORT GRAPES CARRIED TO THE TREADING VATS.
Scene at the Vineyards of Boa Visto, valley of the Douro: Women cut the bunches of grapes into small baskets, carry them a short distance and fill large baskets holding near 100 pounds. Then men with sheepskins thrown over their backs, and plaited straw knots on their heads, shoulder the baskets and move off in single file down the rugged winding paths and flights of steps to large vats, where the grapes are mashed for wine. The soil containing a large amount of iron.

Speer's Port Grape and Burgundy Wines are made from the same grapes grown on an eastern mountain slope in Passaic valley, New Jersey, the soil also abounding in iron produces the real Blood-making, Life-preserving Wines of the World—the old, original Port wine grape of Portugal. No other wines equal these for invalids, weakly persons and the aged. None put in market until nine years old. For Sale by Druggists and Grocers.

Also the P. J. Sherry, Burgundy, Socialite, Claret vin. 1881, and Climax Brandy vin. 1878, all used extensively in Hospitals and among the Medical faculty as the best to be obtained. The unfermented Grape Juice is extensively used in New York churches for communion service.

JURY DISAGREED

In the Case of Minnesota vs. H. E. Mussey.

Circuses do not visit Thief River Falls this season of the year, but the people have amusement just the same. There was a large crowd at the city hall yesterday afternoon to witness the case of the State of Minnesota vs. H. E. Mussey, charged with stealing three pumpkins, and all unite in saying that it was as good as any three-ring circus on the road. Justice Johnson acted as ring master and he was assisted by twelve good and true jurymen.

The case first came up before Justice Johnson on Monday, and Mr. Mussey took advantage of his constitutional right to demand a jury trial, and it was postponed until yesterday afternoon. Francis Hibner—he with the broad sunshiny smile—appeared for Mr. Mussey, and H. W. Lee represented the state. The complaining witness was John Schlossar, a very determined looking farmer, and his countenance would impress upon any small boy the fact that he might be the possessor of a water melon patch and a shot gun loaded with rock salt—but this time, however, it happened to be a pumpkin patch.

It was a little after 1 o'clock when Justice Johnson called for order, and, after a few jurymen had been dismissed and others drawn in their places, the trial commenced.

John Schlossar, the complaining witness, was the first one to take the stand for the state. He testified that on Sunday, Sept. 17, he saw the defendant, H. E. Mussey, steal three pumpkins from his field; told him to stop, but he either did not hear or would not pay any attention to him. Later he called at Mussey's office and demanded pay for them. Mussey wanted to settle for 25 cents, but he asked $3. Said that he had been made to pay the costs by Mussey in a justice court case before him, and that was why he asked such a big price for his pumpkins.

Rosa Schafranek, an exceptionally bright little girl, who makes her home with Mr. Schlossar, was the next witness. She said that she was 13 years of age. That on the 17th day of September she had seen the pumpkins stolen from Mr. Schlossar's field. Mr. Mussey was driving through the country in a double-seated rig. Was accompanied by two women and two or three children. A little boy got out of the buggy and went into the pumpkin patch, taking three pumkins, one at a time. She had told them to stop. They could have heard her if they wanted to, but paid no attention.

N. W. Tarrant testified that Mr. Mussey had called at his place of business and told him of the transaction.

Paul Saulter testified that he had met Mr. Mussey and others driving on the road about a half a mile from Schlossar's farm on the 17th of September, and saw two or three pumpkins in the wagon. Knew that it was on the 17th of September because it was his birthday.

John Saulter testified that one day last week Mr. Mussey called at his home and told him he had taken two pumpkins from his field and forced him to take 25 cents in payment for the same. Said he did not think any pumpkins had been taken from his field. He lived about a half a mile from Schlossar.

Mr. Mussey was the first witness in his own behalf. He testified that on the 17th of September he was out in the country riding with his wife, two children, Miss Frank and Mar Todd. He came across a pumpkin patch, and, as he was a lover of pumpkin pies, and there was no one around, and pumpkins were very scarce in town and could not be bought, he concluded to take some. Sent his little boy into the patch and he took two of them and brought them to the buggy. Did not think they were taken from Mr. Schlossar's field. Said he was in the habit of taking pumpkins when out driving in the country and thought it no sin. He also rehersed the case which came up before him as justice of peace, in which Schlossar was the complaining witness and the La Bree boys were defendants. Told how Schlossar had come into his office and demanded pay for the pumpkins and insulted him.

Miss Frank and Mrs. Mussey testified to practically the same story as did Mr. Mussey.

Homer Mussey also testified to the same story with the exception that he started after the third pumpkin, but his father called him back and they drove on.

Mr. Lee then made his plea to the jury. He made an exceptionally good speech and told the jury that it was the principle of the thing and not so much the amount stolen that was objected to.

Mr. Hibner made the closing speech and prefaced his remarks by telling the jury how successful he had been in winning former cases. He then attempted to prove that the pumpkins were not feloniously stolen by Mr. Mussey.

The jury retired shortly after six o'clock and remained out until 11 o'clock in the evening and could not agree upon a verdict. Nine of them were for conviction and three were for acquittal. The case will be tried again next Monday. The costs now amount to nearly $50 and, of course, this amount will be increased by another trial. The pumpkins are going to cost someone more than 25 cents.

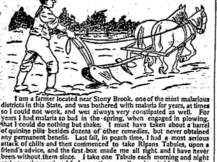
Labree Ave. — — Thief River Falls, Min



I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

INDIANA GOOD ROADS.

THEIR IMPORTANCE IN THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE STATE.

Central Section Covered With a Network of Improved Highways—Governor Mount to Make a Display at the Paris Exposition.

Governor Mount's determination to make a pretentious display of Indiana roads at the Paris exposition and the work which he has already begun in collecting pictures from every section of the state have occasioned a great deal of comment of an adverse nature from the people of his own and of adjoining states. They take the ground that the display will not only subject Indiana to adverse criticism, but will give the skilled road builders of European countries a poor opinion of the Mississippi valley section.

The display which Governor Mount is arranging under his own personal direction will, however, be interesting not only to the expert road builders of European countries, but of special interest at present to the people of Indiana and surrounding states. It is not Governor Mount's intentions to give the European countries "new wrinkles" in road construction, but rather show them what a community can do with a swampy, boggy, wild territory in a short space of less than a century. He will show the old wooden bridges and the old miller going to market on his horse, which sank belly deep many times. He will show how, less than a half century ago, doctors had to carry saddlebags and the mail was transported on horseback for the reason that that was the only way of reaching points located in bogs. With these pictures as an introduction he can show some stretches of Indiana's 50,000 miles of graded and gravel highway and 8,083 miles of pike, which will compare favorably with the roads of southern France and Italy and excel those of some European countries.

The whole central section of Indiana is now covered by a network of free pikes and graded gravel roads. The farmers can reach their markets any season of the year. Northern Indiana has made wonderful strides in the last few years in building graded and gravel roads. The eastern section is practically free of poor roads. In Wayne county alone there are over 850 miles of as good roads as can be found in the Mississippi section. The most notable pike in the nation, the great National road running from Washington to St. Louis, passes the entire width of the state and divides the Hoosier community into two equal parts. It is apropos that the display be made in 1900, for it marks the close of about 100 years of Indiana's development, in which roads have been the greatest factor.

The men who laid the foundation for Indiana by blazing their way through forests and brambles, who felled logs across the streams and made the first temporary crossings, who pushed their horses to bogs and then threw brush over the deepest holes that their animals might not sink beyond the control of their legs, had little to work with while they were laying this foundation. That, however, for the most part, was a great deal less than a century ago. After making these first blazings, bridges and foundations they found that they must have more permanent roads, and this necessity was the mother of the old plank road regime.

While these plank roads lasted they were good, but they were found to be defective because of their short life. Gravel had been found in the meantime, and the building of gravel roads began. Finding this load too great, the landowners turned the highways over to "road companies," and they inaugurated the toll road system. The state recently passed laws which enabled the counties to purchase these toll systems, and today there are less than 200 of a total of 50,000 of Indiana's graded and gravel roads that are under levy of tollgates. A fraction over 107 of these 200 miles are in one county—Fountain. The tollgate in Indiana, except in this one county and a few communities, is a faint outline of the past.

In connection with Indiana roads, Lake county, lying adjacent to Chicago, made some experiments last summer which will attract attention of scientific road builders. In their construction draintile is made one of the most important of the materials. The county is building 125 miles of these highways at a cost of $1,400 per mile. They are probably the only roads of the kind in the world. They have a 38 foot right of way. The road proper, however, is but 12 feet wide. Three feet under the regular grade and nine feet each side of the center of the road are run two lines of 7 inch draintile. Over them the road proper is built.

The road proper is 12 feet in width and is boxed. There is a foot of crushed stone in this boxed section, and on top of it is a 3-inch surfacing of screenings, which, in fact, makes a macadamized road. Rounded from the ditches at the extreme of the right of way is a bank of clay, well banked to the screenings. The clay is baked by the sun. It joins the screenings flush, thus making a widened roadbed of probably 18 feet. The grade is well pitched, so all water drains readily to the ditches. All that goes down through the macadam is carried away by the tile, and the tile also serve to keep the surfacing dry and compact. Should the ditches fail to carry off the water it also drains to the tile. It is claimed this will make a road that will stand and will be a great step toward perfection. These roads will join those of Cook county, Ills., and will form the connecting link between Indiana and Chicago.

HER THEORY.

Comes Rather Late, but There's Something in It.

"Charley, dear," said young Mrs. Torkins, "did you read anything about the court-martial at Rennes?"

"Yes, a little."

"Wasn't it all too dreadfully confused for anything?"

"It was very much so."

"But I think I have a clew to the mystery. I am surprised that no one has thought of it before."

"You're going to make Gaboriau look like a little white marble in a jewelry store window, I suppose?" he commented apprehensively.

"Now, Charley, dear, don't you try to be sarcastic, because sometimes I don't realize that you are being sarcastic and fail to notice you, and then you are annoyed. It was you yourself who gave me the clew by your candid explanation of what made Dicky Dodd talk so queerly. You know that every once in awhile those witnesses at Rennes would go away to refresh their memories—or so they said."

"Yes."

"You know what appetites those people have for absinth frappe and dossiers and pousse cafes and bordereaus and such things."

"What of it?"

"Well, between you and me, I don't think it is at all strange that they talked at random and all at once. They had been mixing their refreshments."—Washington Star.

The Distinction.

"I noticed," remarked a friend of the orator, "that in your speech on corruption in politics you used the phrase 'pulling and hauling' several times. Isn't that a repetition? Don't the two words mean the same thing?"

"Not necessarily," replied the orator. "They have similar meanings, but they are not synonymous. Generally speaking, the stronger your pull the bigger your haul."—Kansas City Journal.

Conclusive Logic.

Clara—No, I am afraid he isn't greatly smitten by me.

Nettie—Why not? I am sure he was very careful to hold the umbrella over you so that not a drop of water should fall on you.

Clara—That's just it. If he had been really smitten, he would have been so agitated that I should have been lucky to escape a drenching.—Boston Transcript.

His Generosity.

Manager (to actress, who has made a hit)—Bravo, my dear; I'll raise your salary—

Actress—Oh, how good of you—

Manager (continuing)—On the four sheet posters from $200 to $300 per week, but as this will involve a little printing bill you will have to stand a small cut of $15 a week until further notice.—Newcastle (England) Chronicle.

A Quibble.

"I see, Maria, that the census office has a new rule. The census taker doesn't ask you what your age is. He asks what was your age on your last birthday."

"Yes, but I'm not sure I have reached that yet."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Leaves, Too, Are Turning Now.

"I don't see how you can assert her hair is red. It is distinctly auburn."

"Er—when did you see her last?"

"About a week ago."

"Oh, it had just begun to change then."—Indianapolis Journal.

The Basis of Value.

"My sweetheart gave me a pair of silver backed brushes that cost $25."

"Were you mean enough to go and price them?"

"No, but I had to pawn them."—Detroit Free Press.

How Some Men Like It.

"Do you believe in the observance of the golden rule?"

"Yes. I always like to have other people keep it in mind when they are dealing with me."—Chicago Times-Herald.

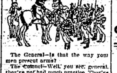
She Would Scream—Softly.

Gracie—Johnny Upjohn, if you try to put your arm around me I'll call mamma.

Johnny—Where is your mamma?

Gracie—She's down town.—Chicago Tribune.

A Full Explanation.



The General—Is that the way your men present arms?

The Colonel—Well, you see, general, they've not had much practice. They've only had their guns a week. Their last arms they presented to the enemy.—Pick Me Up.

A Quandary.

Ofttimes when I put on my gloves
I wonder if I'm sane,
For when I put the right one on
The right seems to remain
To be put on—that is, 'tis left;
Yet if the left I don
The other one is left, and then
I have the right one on.
But still I have the left on right;
The right one, though, is left
To go right on the left right hand
All right if I am deft.

It Cost Sheldon Hartenberg Just $16.29 to ATTEND A DANCE.

Others Paid Only Two Dollars.

It cost Sheldon Hartenberg just $16.29 to spend a few hours dancing at the Odd Fellows' hall last Friday evening, while other participants paid but $2.

Some time ago three dance tickets were stolen from Robert Sotheran's room in the Hotel Ogahmah, and the fact was made known to the committee in charge of the dance. A list of the tickets sold to the different people was made out, and, as it did not appear that anyone had sold a ticket to Hartenberg, who presented one at the door, the conclusion that he had the stolen tickets was quickly surmised. He was arrested Saturday and taken before Judge Johnson, where pleaded not guilty. Mr. Johnson, however, did not believe him, for he imposed a fine of $5 and costs, and ordered him to pay $6 to the lodge for the tickets he had stolen, making his total fine $16.29.

Hartenberg had presented two of his friends with tickets, but, as they were innocent of the manner in which he obtained them, they were not called upon to settle.

"OKLAHOMA JOE."

That Is the Name Given to Grant Lee.

The following "pipe story" is told by a Washington correspondent of the St. Paul Dispatch. While the names of people mentioned are all familiar, the facts of the case are badly mixed up. The story is as follows:

"Speaking of the opening of the reservation calls to mind a most famous contest which is still pending in the general land office at Washington.

"Mrs. Cunningham, of St. Paul, who had been an employee in the family of Senator Davis when he was governor, wanted to make entry on a quarter section of the rich Red Lake lands. She went to Davis and secured a letter of introduction to the local land officers at Crookston, which would enable her to obtain all of the information desired about the method of procedure in making entry. Mrs. Cunningham was on hand twenty-four hours before the doors of the receiver of the land office opened to receive applications. She had made her selection of a choice piece of land, and had been informed that no matter if there was a "squatter" located thereon the person who entered first filing on the land would be entitled to the patent. There was a family named Lee which had settled on this particular tract, and among the sons and daughters was a very tall specimen, who had been dubbed by the Red Lakers as "Oklahoma Joe." He had been south at several reservations, and knew a thing or two about getting in at the start and staying in at the finish."

"When the land office door opened, Joe was away back in the line, but as soon as he saw an opening he gave a whoop and a bound and jumped directly over the heads of six other applicants, including Mrs. Cunningham. He filed his entry first, and now the question is, can this sort of procedure be held as legal. The first decision rendered was in favor of Joe Lee, but it was not because he made a big jump for his claim. The officials held that possession before actual entry constituted nine points of the law."

NEW DEAL.

Disposing of Chippewa Indian Reservations.

PURCHASE BY GOV.

Treaty Proposed by the Interior Department.

A Washington dispatch to the St. Paul Dispatch says that an entirely new treaty to be negotiated with the Chippewa Indians of Minnesota will soon be proposed. Those who are in favor of this proposition say that it will, if agreed upon, end the continual controversy between the Indians, the government and the lumbermen.

The principal features of the proposed new treaty are here outlined:

First—The enactment by congress of a law vesting the interior department with full power to negotiate and treat with the various bands and tribes of Minnesota Indians, for the purpose of outright purchase by the government of all lands on either ceded or unceded reservations.

Second—The secretary of the interior shall further be empowered to suspend, pending negotiations, all operations under the Nelson act of 1889, under which the timber lands are now being disposed of.

Third—The appointment by the president of the United States of a commission to treat with the said tribes of Indians, to the end that all their rights, titles and interests to any and all lands in Minnesota may be transferred back to the federal government. The fund to be paid by the United States for such lands to be placed in trust, and the interest to be paid annually to the Indians.

Fourth—In all cases where allotments have been made the Indians, are to hold the same, provided they improve the lands and show a disposition to cultivate the same within two years after occupying.

Fifth—The establishment by the United States of a national park on the Cass lake reservation, to be dedicated for the public good, and to preserve a portion, at least, of the vast forests of Northern Minnesota, which are fast being denuded.

The above proposition was discussed in extenso here at a conference held between Secretary Hitchcock, Land Commissioner Hermann, Indian Commissioner Jones, Gen. C. C. Andrews, fire wardens of Minnesota, and one or two members of the Minnesota delegation.

It is clear that something must be done towards relieving the present conditions. The situation now is very unpleasant to all interests. No timber operations are being carried on at the Leech Lake and Cass Lake reservations this winter. Special agents are out there watching every person who is about the reservations.

The Indians claim that they have been, are and will continue to be the victims of unscrupulous speculators. Therefore it is urged that the remaining lands, unallotted and unsurveyed, upon which the timber remains unsold, be purchased outright by the government, and the entire deal closed up.

In consideration of this important piece of legislation, which will affect the state of Minnesota and the entire Northwest, it is said that strong efforts will be made to bring about an understanding between the interior department, the Minnesota delegation to congress and the Indians.

For this purpose there will be several conferences. Senator Nelson thus far has not committed himself to any proposition, although he is said to agree on the general proposition that something should be done. The park proposition is made entirely secondary.

GONE HOME.

James Meehan, Sr., Left Monday for Milwaukee.

James Meehan, senior member of the firm of P. & J. Meehan, left Monday for Milwaukee, where he will make his home in the future. Since selling out last spring both members of the firm have been busy closing up the affairs of their business, and everything has been attended to with the exception of making a few small collections. Mr. Meehan leaves many warm friends in the city and he expects to return from time to time and renew his acquaintance. He will not again enter into active business. P. Meehan will remain in this city about a month longer.

A CHILLY REPORT

Made by Major Abbot in Regard to Improvements.

Major F. V. Abbot, in charge of river and harbor improvements in the northwestern states, has made his report to the house of representatives, and the result is to turn down the proposition to improve the Red Lake river by building a dam at the outlet of the Red lake to control the flow of water, aid navigation and prevent floods. Major Abbot shows that out of 32,000 square miles drained by the Red River of the North, but one-sixth of the whole could be used for reservoir purposes, including the country about Red, Ottertail and Traverse lakes. The Red lake system is the only one seriously considered, and of this the report recites as follows:

The lakes have a great area, but their banks are so low that it is probable that the water could not be raised much, if any, above its present highwater level without escaping in all directions. This scheme is, therefore, impracticable. Control by levee is the only other resource. The cost of constructing levees continues for many miles along such a stream, with clay and quicksand banks subject to landslides, with tributaries to be attended to at intervals, and dependent for its safety on its solidity. It is impossible to estimate the cost of artificial bank from data now obtainable, but that it would be out of all proportion to the entire value of the lands to be protected is evident at first sight.

Nothing can be accomplished by the improvements covered in the Red River of the North by the river and harbor act of 1899, and for this reason, if for no other, the locality, in my opinion, is not worthy of the improvements made, to govern and repress floods of the river and to prevent undue erosion of the banks.

WAS DISMISSED

But Will Come Up in the District Court in February.

The much talked of case of the state of Minnesota vs. H. E. Mussey, charged with stealing pumpkins from John Schlossar, came up before Justice Johnson Monday. The case was set for trial at 1 o'clock, and Mr. Schlossar and the attorney for the state, H. W. Lee, appeared at that time and remained until 1:30. Mr. Lee had an important case coming up before the district court of Polk county Tuesday and asked for an adjournment until Wednesday. He then left for Crookston, driving to St. Hilaire. Mr. Mussey and his attorney, F. Hibner, appeared later and, at the latter's request, the case was dismissed for non-appearance upon the part of the state. The case will now be appealed to the district court, which convenes at Red Lake Falls in February.

HOMEWARD BOUND

Scandinavians Set Sail for the Fatherland.

Over 600 Scandinavians set sail for the fatherland last week in the steamship St. Paul. Of this number over 350 were from Minnesota and the remainder of the northwest. A peculiarity of the people who returned home was that they were nearly all bachelor farmers; they have returned for the purpose of claiming the girls they left behind them, and it is their intention to return to this country after the Christmas holidays. At Southampton they will disembark, a special train will then convey them to Grimsby, where they will reembark on a Wilson liner and cross the North Sea to Guttenburg and Christiania. Many homes across the sea will be made happier this Christmas than they have been for years.

HE SKIPPED

Sever Simle Leaves the City, Never to Return.

LEFT LAST WEEK.

Takes Between Five and Six Thousand Dollars.

Sever Simle, of the firm of Simle & Locken, harnessmakers, left this city last week, taking with him between $5,000 and $6,000 in cash, half of which belonged to his partner, H. Locken. Where he is at present is of course unknown, but it is surmised that he is on board of a steamboat headed for Norway, his native land.

The exact amount he has stolen from his partner is unknown. They started in business here about five years ago and Mr. Simle has always transacted all of the business, paying all of the bills and collecting all of the money. They did not keep a set of books, and of course Mr. Simle has always had an excellent opportunity to steal money from the firm. A short time ago he sold his farm, getting the cash for the same. He later borrowed $1,000 from the First State Bank of this city, giving a chattel mortgage on the stock of goods, and then left the country, taking with him all of the money. The credit of the firm has always been good, and, as a result, a large stock of goods was purchased on time from the different wholesale houses, and Mr. Simle made a special endeavor to dispose of it as rapidly as he could. The stock was invoiced last Saturday, and adding outstanding accounts due the firm, it is found that the assets amount to $4,500. The bank, however, holds a chattel mortgage of $1,000 upon this. Between $5,000 and $6,000 is due to wholesale houses, and they, with Mr. Locken, will be heavy losers. There are not many local losers, with the exception of a widow woman, who lives west of town, who was defrauded out of $300.

Mr. Simle has been a resident of this city about five years. He is a man about 40 years of age, light complexion, 6 feet high, and has a wooden leg. He came here from Meckonick, N. D., and the people over there do not speak of him in the highest terms. While a resident of that place he endeavored to commit suicide by shooting himself, and few people regret that he was unsuccessful. He also took up a subscription over there to raise enough money to buy himself an artificial leg. He succeeded in raising $150 and then went to work and whittled himself out a wooden one, keeping the money he had raised by subscription.

His partner, Mr. Locken, is a good, honest and industrious citizen and has the sympathy of the entire community.

Thief River Falls, Dec. 14, 1899.

Premier Greenway, long the chosen political leader in Manitoba, has lost his grip. In the election just held only fourteen Liberals were elected, while the Conservatives elected twenty-four. The Northern Pacific railroad was greatly interested in the election.

Judge Collins will announce next Saturday as to whether or not he will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor. If Mr. Collins decides to become a candidate and secures the nomination, he will be elected by the largest majority ever secured by a Republican candidate.

A petition signed by Admiral Dewey, Gov. Roosevelt, General Miles, Fitzhugh Lee, Archbishop Ireland, Admirals Sampson and Schley, President Eliot, of Harvard, and many other distinguished citizens and soldiers has been presented to congress, urging a law to prohibit the use of the flag for advertising purposes and otherwise desecrating our national standard. It is a timely piece of legislation and should be seriously considered by the law makers.

While the people living in the village of Roseau and the country north of here entertain hopes that the Great Northern will be extended from this city to the Canadian boundary, there does not seem to be any tangible reason why it should. The country is at present only partially developed and the trade from that country is now secured entirely by the Great Northern. Until a competing line is built into that country, we predict that the Great Northern will not be extended.

The Appleton Press, one of the leading Democratic papers in this congressional district, is not a great admirer of Lind, Pope, Town and their ilk. The Press, we believe, voices the sentiments of a large majority of the old time Democrats when it says: "The refusal of those Democratic chieftains, P. B. Winston and A. T. Ankeny, to permit a conglomeration of Populists, ex-Republicans and political orphans to outline and dictate a creed that shall define Democracy is highly commendatory of the real Democracy and good sense of these gentlemen."

SITUATION IN SOUTH AFRICA.

The chances seem to favor a long struggle in South Africa, and it is by no means certain that the British will achieve the ultimate victory. The Boer territory lies entirely inland and England's navy cannot participate in the hostilities except as a land force. The Boers have, however, an easy outlet to the sea through the Portuguese province of Lorenco Marquez, with the fine harbor of Delagoa Bay, but fifty miles from their frontier. The laws of neutrality prevent the English from operating against the Transvaal through this territory, but cannot prevent the Boers from smuggling in by this route large quantities of war material. With the exception of this bit of Portuguese possessions, the Transvaal is completely surrounded by British territory, however, the British are compelled by the nature of the country and the necessity for supplies to confine their operations to the lines of railroad, which are few and vulnerable, while the Boers are operating from their own territory and on interior lines, and thus are not confined to any particular line of communication.

Early in the war the English in Natal were defeated in a series of engagements and driven back to Ladysmith, where they now lie besieged. The relieving force sent from the south by Gen. Buller seems stuck at Escourt, some forty miles away, and the Boers are preparing to contest every inch of their further advance. This is the situation in the east. On the west the Boers pushed forward into English territory and invested Kimberley and Mafeking. No attempt to relieve the latter place has been made so far, but a column under Gen. Methuen pushed up the railway toward Kimberley, meeting with greater resistance at every point, till it reached Modder River which it occupied, not without a desperate fight. Methuen does not seem able to make a further advance at the present time and meanwhile the Boers have slipped around and destroyed the railway in his rear as well as in front so that this column seems also stuck, some twenty miles south of Kimberley. Two lines of railway enter the hostile territory on the south, and here the Boers have seized British territory and advanced their lines to the towns of Colesburg and Burgersdorp which they now occupy. General White advanced against the former place but is still far off and waiting developments. General Gatacre started for the latter point, but, before he was within thirty miles of it, met a crushing defeat at Stormberg, and his army is now laid up for repairs.

It will be seen that the Boers have carried the fighting in every direction beyond their own territory and are prepared to defend the places siezed, and, if defeated, fall back slowly, taking advantage of the mountainous country, which offers every element of successful defense. Of their bravery and fighting qualities there can be no question, and England has certainly undertaken a large contract. The Boers will at least make it the most expensive bit of real estate England ever acquired, and should another power take a hand in the affair it is hard to see how the Transvaal could be subdued.

H. E. Mussey's Feelings Damaged to That Extent.

An unexpected turn of affairs has taken place in the notorious pumpkin case. H. E. Mussey has begun a suit against John Schlossar for $3,000 damages, alleged to have been inflicted upon his feelings by reason of Schlossar having him arrested for stealing pumpkins. This pumpkin case will probably not be settled until Gabriel blows his horn and then the Recording Angel will settle the dispute as to whether or not the pumpkins were taken with felonious intent—and we'll all love one another!

There Was Pine on the Forties.

The U. S. land office today disposed of a number of isolated tracts of land in various localities out east. The rule has been that these have usually been sold at $1.25 per acre. They are in tracts of 40 acres and under, and no one wanting a homestead will look at them. Those sold today have considerable pine growing on them, and the price paid was from $6.25 to $15.25 per acre. The buyers were the Crookston and Thief River Falls Lumber companies, and the sales aggregated $2,670.—Crookston Times, Nov. 12.

GRAPE HARVEST IN PORTUGAL.

THE PORT GRAPES CARRIED TO THE TREADING VATS.

Scene at the Vineyards of Boa Visto, valley of the Douro: Women cut the bunches of grapes into small baskets, carry them a short distance and fill large baskets holding near 100 pounds. Then men with sheepskins thrown over their backs, and plaited straw knots on their heads, shoulder the baskets and move off in single file down the rugged winding paths and flights of steps to large vats, where the grapes are mashed for wine. The soil containing a large amount of iron.

Speer's Port Grape and Burgundy Wines are made from the same grapes grown on an eastern mountain slope in Passaic valley, New Jersey, the soil also abounding in iron produces the real Blood-making, Life-preserving Wines of the World—the old, original Port wine grape of Portugal. No other wines equal these for invalids, weakly persons and the aged. None put in market until nine years old. For Sale by Druggists and Grocers.

Also the P. J. Sherry, Burgundy, Socialite, Claret vin. 1881, and Climax Brandy vin. 1878, all used extensively in Hospitals and among the Medical faculty as the best to be obtained. The unfermented Grape Juice is extensively used in New York churches for communion service.

Speaking the other day of spruce lumber and its shrinking propensities, Collectors Moody told the following, and vouches for its truth: "When I built my house three years ago, I laid the upper floor with spruce lumber that was considered seasoned. I was advised by a person who had had some experience with this timber to not nail the floor, as it was liable to shrink so that I would have to move the boards. I took the advice, and since that, from time to time, as the spruce boards shrank, I had them driven together and a pine board put in. A few weeks ago, in performing this operation, it was noticed that the whole floor was of pine, the spruce floor having shrunk entirely out of existence.—Warroad Plaindealer.

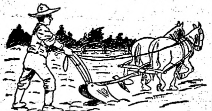
LaBree Ave. — — Thief River Falls, Minn



I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

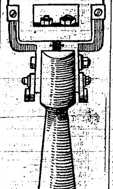
ELECTRICAL DEWOOLING.

A Machine Said to Shear a Dozen Sheep an Hour.

A process has recently been patented by a Bradford (England) syndicate for removing wool from skins by means of an electrical apparatus, says The Electrical Review. The invention originated with a Bradford lady, Mrs. S. L. Johnson, and consists of an electric cautery, or fleshing knife, in such a handy form that the wool may be shorn or cut from the skin rapidly and without injury either to the wool or to the pelt. The form of the apparatus, which is held by the hand, is shown in the accompanying illustration. Electric cables, which pass through the handle and which are not shown in the illustration, are connected to the two terminals, and thence the current is passed through a wire of platinum-iridium alloy, which is thus rendered incandescent. The wire is fastened to and supported by a highly refractory substance, specially made for the purpose, the current required being about 00 amperes at four volts. The method of removing the wool is simply to push the cautery along the surface of the skin. The redhot knife, if it may be so called, immediately mows down the wool, and the only limit to the speed at which the work can be done is the deftness of the operator. The work is performed so quickly that the heat in no way injures either the skin or the wool. It is estimated that a girl, with a few hours' practice, would be equal to dewooling from eight to a dozen skins per hour, and the cost of the current is so exceedingly small, being estimated at the seventy-second of a cent an hour, as to be almost a negligible quantity.



ELECTRIC SHEARING MACHINE.

Permanent and Profitable.

Not only is stock farming the most profitable system of agriculture in all civilized countries, but it is the most permanent, says Farm and Ranch. Nowhere has it ever been adopted and abandoned. We have heard the opinion expressed that land is becoming too dear for raising cattle or hogs or sheep. This is a broad, flat mistake. The richer the land the better it is adapted to the feeding and developing of live stock. No one will dispute this proposition. As the productiveness of land, other things being equal, regulates the price, it will be seen that the dearer the land the better for raising stock, as a general rule. Beef, pork, mutton and dairy products are profitably produced in the older states and in Europe on lands worth from $100 to $800 per acre. The most valuable farming lands in the world are the stock farms of this country and Europe, because the fertility is maintained and even improved, and the intelligent labor and thought required to make stock farming successful are reflected on every feature of farm life, and the civilizing influences cluster around it, and the comforts and luxuries of life are made to abound. Texas farmers alone should market 1,000,000 fat cattle, 6,000,000 fat hogs and mutton sheep by the square acre. It can be done, and in course of time we expect to see these figures exceeded. Then will prosperity take up her abode on the farm.

Horses in Large Cities.

The great cities of the world use up an enormous number of horses every year, and these must constantly be resupplied by horses from the country or from foreign parts. It is stated that in the suburbs of London alone there are 750,000 horses in use and that 100,000 horses must every year be sent into these suburbs to take the place of those worn out. The city of Berlin takes 100,000 new horses every year. A large number of the horses used in omnibuses and on tram lines both in England and on the continent are imported from the United States. The horses from the United States are shipped from the ports of New York and Boston to the ports of London, Liverpool and Glasgow, and quite a large number are transshipped at London for the ports of Antwerp and Havre. The ocean rates on horses from New York and Boston are from £5 to £6 per head, including feed and attendance, insurance for the voyage and for ten days after landing and dock charges.—Household Words.

Precautions in Dipping.

One of the most important precautions to be taken in the dipping of sheep is to avoid exposure to cold rains immediately after.

EASY TRANSPORTATION.

Good Roads Raise Value of Farms and Farm Products.

Bad roads constitute the greatest drawback to rural life, and for the lack of good roads the farmers suffer more than any other class. It is obviously, unnecessary, therefore, to discuss the benefits to be derived by them from improved roads. Suffice it to say that those localities where good roads have been built are becoming richer, more prosperous and more thickly settled, while those which do not possess these advantages in transportation are either at a standstill or are becoming poorer and more sparsely settled. If these conditions continue, fruitful farms may be abandoned and rich lands go to waste.

Life on a farm often becomes, as a result of "bottomless roads," isolated and barren of social enjoyments and pleasures, and country people in some communities suffer such great disadvantage that ambition is checked, energy weakened and industry paralyzed.

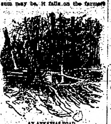
Good roads, like good streets, make habitation along them most desirable. They economize time and force in transportation of products, reduce wear and tear on horses, harness and vehicles and enhance the market value of real estate. They raise the value of farm lands and farm products and tend to beautify the country through which they pass. They facilitate rural mail delivery and are a potent aid to education, religion and sociability. Charles Sumner once said, "The road and the schoolmaster are the two most important agents in advancing civilization."

THE HEAVIEST TAX.

Mud Is the Most Expensive Burden of the Farmer.

Most American roads are so poorly constructed that they are of little use except in pleasant weather, when, as a rule, the farmers would like to be doing something besides teaming their produce to market, says the Chicago Tribune in a recent editorial. The American farmers complain, and often with justice, of the high freight rates of the railways. But they are taxing themselves over 10 cents more per ton per mile of haul to the nearest railroad depot, when they could get rid of that tax by the simple device of building decent roads.

It is impossible to figure out the cost of the bad roads bills which the farmers pay yearly needlessly and without complaint. One road reformer says those bills foot up $250,000,000 annually. That is a mere guess, but it may be near the truth. Whatever the sum may be, it falls on the farmers exclusively and thus cuts down their net receipts from their corn, wheat and other crops. It would not be difficult for the farmers of an Illinois township to ascertain the weight of all the produce they take to and from the nearest market during a year and thus find out what bad roads are costing them. When they have the information, it may be they will vote for a higher road tax.



AN ARKANSAS ROAD.
[From L. A. W. Bulletin.]

Every year about $30,000,000 is spent in this country in the repairing of mud roads. The money is expended to no purpose, for the farmers keep on paying it out while refusing to contribute a larger sum, which, if judiciously expended, would give them permanent roads, which it would cost but a trifle to keep in perfect condition. Then they would not have to keep so many horses as they do now. There would be less wear and tear of horses, harness and wagons. The farmers would be able to get their products to market at all times, while it happens now often that they cannot market those products when prices are highest because of impassable roads. The taxes which bear hardest on the farmers are those they unthinkingly impose upon themselves.

All Want Good Roads.

There need be no doubt that the taxpayers of most American cities are willing and ready to contribute to the cost of building country roads. Their necessity is as thoroughly realized in the cities as it is by the farmers who become stalled on a muddy road with a load of grain hauled half way to market. City people know the country better than they have ever known it before, and their business relations with country people are growing more and more intimate. They are quick to see the convenience and saving which would result from the construction of good roads and know that they themselves would be in large measure the gainers.—Otto Dorner.

Profit and Loss.

The difference between good and bad roads is often equivalent to the difference between profit and loss. Good roads have a money value to farmers as well as a political and social value, and, leaving out convenience, comfort, social and refined influences, which good roads always enhance, and looking at them only from the "almighty dollar" side, they are found to pay handsome dividends each year.

TO MAKE LUMBER.

Straw and Refuse Matter to Be Utilized.

As the nineteenth century closes there looms up before the eyes of the commercial world a new industry, destined to be of incalculable value to the coming generation, and adds to the glory of the inventive genius of the American nation. It is in the same relation to the economics of the world, as those inventions which cheapened the manufacture of iron, made power for manufacturing purposes at less cost, and permitted, through the inventive genius of Edison and other scientists of equal ability, the introduction of new methods for producing light and heat, and at the same time giving to the people greater advantages for less expenditure of money than heretofore known in the history of matters pertaining to general use and the comfort of mankind.

For many years Oliver L. Gardner, a citizen of the city of Brooklyn, state of New York, labored to provide a substitute for lumber for inside decorations for private houses, public buildings, railroad cars, steamboats and other places requiring the use of wood and other materials, and after a period of twelve years and at an expenditure of hundreds of thousands of dollars, he perfected his ideas, so that now he presents to the world a finished product which can be purchased and sold at much less cost than any form of decoration now known to the history of the world. As in the case of all other inventors, his ideas were looked upon with considerable incredulity but he continued his work of introducing his product, in a small way, so that now the test of time as to durability and as to the cost of manufacture fully verifies all statements made by this indefatigable work.

The base of this material is a waste product—straw—which, with certain chemical combinations, produces a material harder than lumber, more durable and at much less cost, and from the demands for this material, which has been created by the persistent work of this inventor, it has developed into a business amounting to many thousands of feet a day, and finds for its users our largest railroad companies, blackboard manufacturers, prominent builders, decorators of the highest class, picture frame manufacturers and many other forms applicable to existing and well known necessities in the commercial world. This material can be nailed, screwed, sawed and operated in the same manner as wood, and owing to its solidified structure it is much more durable.

Prominent capitalists in this country have recently purchased control of this invention and organized a corporation known as the Artificial Lumber Company of America, and will erect in different parts of the United States, Canada and Mexico factories for the manufacture of this valuable material, and thereby the inventor will receive a good return for his many years of labor and large expenditure of money, instead of passing into history as a contributor of valuable inventions without financial benefit, as has been the case with many of our scientific men during the past century.

SCRAP IRON.

It Is Not Worth as Much as New Machinery.

A car was loaded with scrap iron here—Sunday, says the Ada Herald. The contents probably bought for about $400 or less. The original cost of the castings, rods, etc., when they were parts of new harvesters, mowers and other machinery can not be estimated, but it is safe to say not less than $1,000 were paid for the machinery. This comparison would not be alarming if the machines had served their time, but right there is a great leakage in our system of farming. The agricultural implements are subjected to an inexcusable amount of abuse by a great many farmers, both in the method of handling and by exposure to the elements. And there are a great many who, when a weak spot appears in the machinery, haul it aside and go and buy a new machine instead of repairing the old. One reason for this is the unreasonable high price for repairs, but the main one is the neglect to overhaul the machines before the busy season sets in. It is safe to say that one-half of the harvesting machinery bought by our farmers is discarded before serving half the time it should.

Value of Eggs and Poultry Marketed.

Some time ago a paper read before a farmers' institute at Princeton contained the statement that the number of chickens marketed in the United States last year amounted to 3,350,000,000 and of eggs 13,000,000,000. The total value of chickens and eggs produced was $290,000,000.

By way of showing the comparative importance of the poultry industry it was further stated that the value of our tobacco crop has rarely been as much as $43,000,000. The value of our potato crop is less than $80,000,000 on the average, the value of our barley crop is not often as much as $30,000,000. An oat crop worth $200,000,000 is unusual. Our annual output of pig iron has rarely exceeded $130,000,000 in value. Coal, by far the most valuable of our mineral products, gives a total annual output of some $200,000,000.—San Francisco Call.

Of Interest to Pensioners.

The pension department has adopted a new rule which makes it absolutely necessary for pensioners to take their certificates to the notary or magistrate who executes their quarterly vouchers. The number of the certificate is no longer inserted on the vouchers at the pension office, but must be written in by the magistrate when the voucher is executed. This, therefore, makes it absolutely necessary to take their certificate. It is quite likely that for some time this new ruling will cause some delay at pay day, for there will be many who will forget all about their certificates and will have to wait until they can go back home after them, as there is a heavy fine waiting the magistrate who executes the vouchers, if he is caught at it.

Good Advice.

"Now is the time to catch on," says Denny Hannifin, the noted North Dakotan, who has boomed everything in the line of real estate from Fargo to the Missouri river. "Land in the Red River valley has not begun to sell for what it is worth," says Denny, wherein his head is level, and he is not indulging in any of the bluster or blarney usually ascribed to sons of the Emerald Isle.—Crookston Times.

THE NEWS,

Thief River Falls, Dec. 21, 1899.

The next president of the United States will be nominated at Philadelphia on June 19, 1900.

Dr. Cole, of Fergus Falls, is being mentioned as a possible successor to Congressman Eddy. We predict, however, that Mr. Eddy will again be renominated by acclamation.

Rev. W. B. Riley, in the opening prayer at the anti-imperialist meeting held in Minneapolis last week, asked God not to give the United States troops in the Philippines success. We wonder if that is the way all the antis feel.

Judge Collins has formally announced that he will not be a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor. It now appears that Capt. Van Sant will be nominated—and probably by acclamation.

Congressman Eddy has secured a place upon the public land committee, the mines and mining committee and the committee on Indian affairs. He will be in a position to do a great deal of good for his constituents in this section of the state this winter.

Pettigrew has at last found his proper level in the estimation of his associates. Washington dispatches inform us that the senate no longer regards his freak outbreaks as anything more serious than the impotent snarling of a common scold. Pettigrew has something else to be ashamed of now, the country can't find time to be ashamed of Pettigrew.

The fire fiend got in its work at East Grand Forks last Friday night and, as a result, the fine plant of the Daily Courier is now a twisted mass of scrap iron. The fire originated in a small building occupied by a tobacconist and destroyed the two adjoining buildings, one occupied by the newspaper and the other by the justice office of Judge Sullivan. The forms and mailing lists were saved and the plucky Courier appeared Saturday as usual, in spite of difficulties. The total loss foots up about $8,000, about two-thirds of which is covered by insurance.

The wires bring us the sad intelligence that Major-General Lawton, U. S. V., has been killed in a small skirmish near the town of San Mateo. Gen. Lawton was one of the most able and brilliant of the American leaders in Luzon, and with him it was that the Minnesota regiment saw its most active service. He was a veteran of the civil war and an officer of the regular army and his abilities were to have been recognized by an appointment to the rank of brigadier in the regular service. Kill just as the success of the Philippine campaign seems assured, he did not live to see the fruits of his labor.

W. E. Curtis, the Washington correspondent of the Chicago Record, gives the merchants of this country an idea of the business that can be expected from our new possessions. The exports from Spain to Cuba have averaged about $26,000,000 a year and consist of flour, vegetables, preserved fruits and foods, boots and shoes and other leather goods, paper and stationery, firearms and ammunition and all sorts of miscellaneous merchandise which could be furnished by our merchants and manufacturers. The exports from Spain to Puerto Rico are of similar sorts and have averaged about $8,000,000 a year. The exports to the Philippines have been about the same in value and character, and this indicates what may be expected by our merchants from the new colonies.

In spite of the many times the question has been "settled" by wiseacres all over the country, the argument as to the closing year of the century grows hotter and hotter as the year draws to its close. It rests entirely upon the difference of opinion as to whether the first year of the Christian era was called the year 1 A. D. or whether the numeration of years began when the era was one year old, in other words, is this the 1899th year or have 1899 years years elapsed since the initial point of the present accepted calendar. If the former assumption holds good it is clear that the year 1 opened the first century, which closed at the end of the year 100 and that likewise the present, or 19th, century ends at the close of the year 1900 and the 20th century begins with 1901. If, however, it is held that the numeration could only begin at 1 when the era had completed a full year, just as the age of a person is reckoned, then it is equally clear that the end of the 99th year completed the first century and that in like manner the present year 1899 is the final year of the 19th century. The same dispute was in progress at the close of the last century and we have no doubt that it will be at the end of the next.

THE WAR IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Geographically there is little change in South African situation as outlined in last week's News, and yet important events have occurred which have entirely changed the moral aspect of the affair and have plunged England into deepest gloom. As was pointed out, the British cities of Ladysmith on the east and Kimberley on the west were closely invested by the Boers and the relieving columns of Buller and Methuen respectively seemed unable to proceed. The record closed with the defeat and utter demoralization of the forces under Gatacre, which were pushing forward from the south and center to cut the Boer territory in two. Since that time Gatacre has been unable to make another attack and the column of Methuen at Modder river, twenty miles south of Kimberley, has been surrounded by the Boers until it is in nearly the same condition as the city it was sent to relieve. Fear is expressed openly in England that Methuen may be forced to surrender and at all events his operations have been changed from offensive to defensive and he has been compelled to fall back and intrench in order to maintain his position.

But the most serious event of the week took place in the east. The Tugela river is to Ladysmith what the Modder river is to Kimberley, and there the commander-in-chief himself, Gen Buller, was directing the operations of the relieving column. The crossing of the Tugela had been carefully planned for weeks, and the most complete preparations were made to insure the success of the movement. The Boers, however, not only prevented the crossing but captured eleven guns and inflicted upon the English a loss of life greater than in any previous battle of the war. It will be seen that the Boers still hold every bit of English territory they have seized and have repulsed every column sent to dislodge them. The British realize now that the existance of the empire is threatened and are sending every available man to the scene of hostilities. Gen. Lord Roberts, of Indian fame, has been ordered to supersede Gen. Buller as commander-in-chief, and Gen. Kitchener, the hero of Soudan, will accompany him as his chief of staff. Without the intervention of another power the English must win in the end, for they have the men and money to gradually overwhelm the plucky Dutchmen, but there is no certainty that the rest of Europe will keep hands off the matter and should some continental power take this opportunity to pay off old scores the British Empire may lose the whole of South Africa.

OUR EXCHANGES.

INCONSISTENT.

Here's another sample of Bryan consistency. In 1896 he said prices were too low and that the adoption of the gold standard would make them still lower; in 1899 he says prices are too high and that the enactment of the gold standard will make them higher.—St. Cloud Journal-Press.

SHOULD HAVE NINE CONGRESSMEN.

According to State Superintendent Lewis' calculations, the school population of Minnesota is now 392,000. According to the ratio between school children and population by the census of 1895, the state now has a total population 1,760,000. By the time the census is taken next year this should be increased to 1,810,000. If the basis of representation in congress after the next apportionment is not raised above 200,000, Minnesota should have nine congressmen.—Wabasha Democrat.

GRAPE-HARVEST IN PORTUGAL.

THE PORT GRAPES CARRIED TO THE TREADING VATS.

Scene at the Vineyards of Boa Visto, valley of the Douro: Women cut the bunches of grapes into small baskets, carry them a short distance and fill large baskets holding near 100 pounds. Then men with sheepskins thrown over their backs, and plaited straw knots on their heads, shoulder the baskets and move off in single file down the rugged winding paths and flights of steps to large vats, where the grapes are mashed for wine. The soil containing a large amount of iron.

Speer's Port Grape and Burgundy Wines are made from the same grapes grown on an eastern mountain slope in Passaic valley, New Jersey, the soil also abounding in iron produces the real Blood-making, Life-preserving Wines of the World—the old, original Port wine grape of Portugal. No other wines equal these for invalids, weakly persons and the aged. None put in market until nine years old. For Sale by Druggists and Grocers.

Also the P. J. Sherry, Burgundy, Socialite, Claret vin. 1881, and Climax Brandy vin. 1873, all used extensively in Hospitals and among the Medical faculty as the best to be obtained. The unfermented Grape Juice is extensively used in New York churches for communion service.

A large number of Christmas presents have been sent through the mails this year by people of this city to friends abroad.

Work on the Thief River Falls Lumber company's new planing mill has been suspended awaiting the arrival of machinery.

Next Monday is Christmas and it will be observed very quietly in Thief River Falls. There will be no exercises at the Methodist church.

W. B. Faller has accepted a position with the Thief River Falls Lumber company and leaves next week for the Red lake, where he will remain during the winter.

Attorney F. A. Grady, of Red Lake Falls, was in the city yesterday. Mr. Grady has been confined to his home for the past five weeks by an attack of typhoid fever.

All of the stock holders of the Thief River Falls Lumber company are expected to arrive in the city the first of next week to look over the improvements recently made.

Do not miss the great clearing sale at the Diamond store—commencing Dec. 28 and continuing for one week—in dress goods, prints, flannel, linens, etc. Also a continuance of their clothing sale.

The Cosgrove Company will give two entertainments in this city on the evenings of December 28, 1899, and January 1, 1900. It is a comedy company and the entertainment will be given in the Odd Fellows' hall.

Henry Bye was down to Crookston the first of the week to defend his rights in a contest for a valuable pine claim up in the Red lake country. Dr. Grundy, L. J. Higgans and J. F. Mays accompanied him, and were witnesses in the case.

The diphtheria scare in Crookston is stirring the people up and a meeting was held there last week to investigate the conditions. The Tribune says that the number of deaths in the city have made it necessary that extra precaution be taken by the people.

L. E. Maxwell and Chris Porter have taken the contract to haul the Red Lake Express overland from this caty to Grand Forks. They will load it upon logging sleds and will start when a sufficient amount of snow has fallen to make sledding good. Sixteen horses will be required to haul it over, and they will receive $300 for doing the job.

Joseph Duchamp left yesterday for the Red lake with eight teams, taking supplies to the lumber camps. Mr. Duchamp has taken a contract from the Thief River Falls Lumber company and also from John Patterson and expects to have eighteen horses upon the road between this city and the Red lake country during the remaining part of the winter.

A St. Cloud woman, the widow of a soldier, has been drawing a pension of $9 per month for herself and $2 apiece for each of her four children since 1890. She obtained this pension by making affidavit, and proving by witnesses that she was without any means of support other than her daily labor. Now the government has found out that she owns a home and a brick block opposite the Grand Central in St. Cloud, which has been rented for $100 per month. The government now sues to recover the pension money paid her.

The warm weather is spoiling sleighing.

W. A. Kratka has gone to Iowa where he will remain during the winter.

Miss Anna Meehan, teacher in the Germantown district, is spending her vacation at home.

L. N. Nolan, whose illness has been noted, has been taken to a Crookston hospital to receive treatment.

The city schools will close tomorrow for a two weeks' vacation and the teachers are preparing to spend the holidays at their respective homes. Miss Frank goes to Warren, Miss Stanchfield and Miss Richardson to Minneapolis and Prof. Wood to Winona.

As usual the Red River valley is more favored in regard to winter weather than localities far to the south of us. In the southern part of the state, northern Iowa, Wisconsin and along the lakes down to Chicago heavy storms with snow were raging last week, while people here were not interrupted in their usual outdoor work.—Ada Herald.

ON THE SIDE.

The janitor in a public school down in the central part of the state saw a notice on the blackboard the other day which read: "Find the least common multiple." He didn't know exactly what a least common multiple was, but he took a look over the building from cellar to garret and didn't see anything that was out of place, and gave it up. Next morning another notice was posted. It read: "Find the greatest common divisor." This was too much for him, and for fear of being accused of swiping the things, he resigned his position.

An exchange tells of a man who, to be good for one time, got up and started the fire and then affectionally went and called his wife, but found her dead. The shock was more than she could stand and her convulsed spirit passed away. Thief River Falls husbands should remember this and not run any risks. Good women are scarce enough now.

It is getting to be quite a fad—this sending a present to Admiral Dewey. The citizens of Bemidji propose to get on the band wagon, and they are going to send the Manila Bay hero a black bear for a Christmas present. What's the matter with Thief River Falls joining the procession and sending the admiral one of John Schlossar's pumpkins?

The New York World says:

Here are some interesting facts which do not help to solve the labor question:

Thirty girls are employed in the finishing room of Redcliffe Bros.' big woolen mills at Shelton.

One, Annie Schlocovitch, a Pole, made her daily lunch on limburger cheese and garlic. And she always lunched in the workroom.

The other twenty-nine girls protested to the mill owners against Annie's odorous diet. The mill owners said she could eat asafoetida if she pleased.

The twenty-nine girls struck.

Annie refused to give up her beloved garlic and limburger.

The mills are crowded with orders. Annie was discharged.

The windows of the finish room were kept open all night; the twenty-nine returned to work the next day.

RAISED A NOTCH.

The Postoffice Now in the Presidential Class.

As an indication of the growth of the city, it may be stated that the Thief River Falls postoffice has been raised to the presidential class and the salary of the postmaster will be $1,100 in the future. The receipts at the postoffice for the past four years have been large enough to entitle it to be in the presidential class, but, owing to the fact that the business in the summer months has always been light, the postoffice officials have not made the change. Jan. 1, 1900, is the date fixed for the change.

TO SELL OUT.

John Cyr to Buy P. Morisette's Barber Shop.

John Cyr arrived in the city today and will close a deal with P. Morisette for the latter's barber shop. The new proprietor comes from Fisher, where he had conducted a shop for the several years past, having recently sold out.

Mr. Morisette will leave in a few days for Colorado Springs, Col., where he will make his future home. He is the pioneer barber of Thief River Falls, having started in business here when the town first came into existance and has remained here ever since. He leaves many friends in the city who regret his departure, which is caused by the fact that his wife's health will not permit her to reside in this country.

Moose Dung's Friend Dead.

Chief Aushwash, the veteran chief of the Ojibways of Lake of the Woods, died Tuesday morning. The chief was a Canadian Indian, but had always lived at the mouth of War Road river. He was very old, his age being variously estimated at from 85 to 100 years. He was a warrior at the time of the great battle between his people and the Sioux, on the big ridge near Two rivers, over fifty years ago, where he was scalped and left on the field for dead. The body of the old chief was taken to Buffalo Point for burial.—Warroad Plaindealer.

ROLLIS.

Mrs. O. J. Rollis is receiving a visit from her sisters, the Misses Isaacson, of Argyle.

Hugh Burns is home from the Meehan farm, where he worked this season.

Mr. Stowrude, of Winona, is here visiting his brother, Andrew.

Mrs. F. W. Drehmel received the sad news that her sister in Iowa died at her home there from child birth. She leaves a husband and a large family of children.

O. J. Rollis pulled into town with a large load of goods Saturday night.

There will be a Christmas tree at Jim Rynehart's on Christmas night.

Mike Polansky was in Thief River Falls last week.

E. F. Burns was in Thief River Falls last week on business.

THE BRIDGE

Being Built by the G. N. Across the Red Lake River.

Wm. Hogan, a civil engineer in the employ of the Great Northern, was in the city the first of the week and made final arrangements for the construction of a bridge across the Red Lake river, which will connect the new planing mill of the Thief River Falls Lumber company with the Great Northern line. A crew of men arrived Tuesday and a pile driver and other bridge building tools arrived today and work is now being rushed. It is expected to have the bridge completed by the time the planing mill is finished.

WILL IT GO NORTH

Great Northern Said to Be Making Preparations.

Persons who should be in a position to know claim to have inside information that the Great Northern will build from Thief River Falls to Roseau next spring. We have heard similar pipedreams before, but this time the story seems to come with more authority. The proposed road will not touch the Thief lake country, but will swing to the north and west to avoid the swampy land near the river and pass through the towns of Excel, Holt and Newfolden. A large grain elevator will be errected at some point at or near Newfolden.

The same authority informs us that the Great Northern expects to extend the Red Lake Falls branch to Dugdale at about the same time thus connecting this branch with the Fosston extension. When these roads are completed trains will be run from Dugdale to the Lake of the Woods and the Crookston and St. Hilaire branch will be used merely as a freight cut off.

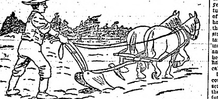
LaBree Ave. — — Thief River Falls, Min



I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

SELECTIONS

PRESIDENTIAL SUCCESSION.

No Tribunal to Determine When "Inability" Begins or Ends.

A correspondent asks The Post to answer these questions:

First.—On the death, disability or removal from office both of the president and vice president who would act as president?

Second.—Is the speaker of the house of representatives ever in line for the presidency, and if so when?

The secretary of state stands next to the vice president in the line of succession to the presidency.

The speaker of the house of representatives is not now in the line of succession. He was from 1792 to 1886.

So many and such important events have happened in this great and busy country in the past four or five decades that not a few of them have left only a faint impression on the memory of the masses. Among the almost forgotten things, if we may judge by the frequency of inquiries relating to it, is the change of law, made about 13 years ago, in the matter of presidential succession. The constitution provides that: "In case of the removal of the president from office or of his death, resignation or inability to discharge the powers and duties of said office the same shall devolve on the vice president, and the congress may by law provide for the case of removal, death, resignation or inability both of the president and vice president, declaring what officer shall then act as president, and such officer shall act accordingly until the disability be removed or a president shall be elected."

In compliance with this provision congress in 1792 provided by law that the president pro tempore of the senate, and, next to him, the speaker of the house of representatives, should succeed to the presidency in case of the removal, death, resignation, etc., of both president and vice president. This stood 94 years, or until 1886. Among those who, as president pro tempore of the senate, stood first in line of succession were Senator Thomas W. Ferry of Michigan and Senator David Davis of Illinois, the former occupying that position by reason of the death of Vice President Wilson; the latter because of the death of President Garfield.

In 1886, after the subject had been discussed at various times for many years, congress enacted a law substituting for the president pro tempore of the senate and the speaker of the house the members of the cabinet in the following order: The secretary of state, secretary of the treasury, secretary of war, attorney general, postmaster general, secretary of the navy and secretary of the interior. The head of the department of agriculture had not at that time been made a cabinet official.

It will be seen that, after long delay, congress at length discharged in a sensible and ample manner a part of the duty devolved on it by the constitutional provision quoted above. But another part of that duty remains untouched in spite of solemn warning. There is no tribunal to determine when "inability" begins or ends. President Garfield lingered on the brink of the grave for more than two months. Of course any president is liable to "inability," but there is no way in which a sick president could be relieved of duty except by death. This is, in our opinion, quite as serious and important a subject as that which was legislated upon in 1886. Has it not been neglected long enough?—Washington Post.

Luminosity of Gas Mantles.

The delicate white mantles used in Welsbach lamps consist of a mixture of two rare earths—thoria and ceria. For some reason not yet clearly understood these substances must be combined in a definite proportion in order that they shall give the maximum of light. Pure thoria, or pure ceria, made into a mantle gives only about one-eleventh as much light as a mantle containing 99 per cent of thoria and 1 per cent of ceria. The remarkable thing is that so slight a quantity of ceria added to the thoria should so enormously increase the illumination, especially in view of the fact that a combination of equal quantities of thoria and ceria gives practically no light, becoming barely red hot in the gas flame.

An Ingenious Gas Burner.

A self lighting gas burner is an ingenious adaptation of scientific principles. Two coils of metal of different coefficients are arranged round the burner, and to these is attached a pointer of platinum black, which absorbs oxygen. When the gas is turned on, it comes into contact with this pointer, which is just above the opening in the burner. A flame is created and the gas lighted; then the heat causes expansion of the coils, which draws down the pointer and so prevents it from interfering with the diffusion of light. As the coils cool—after the gas has been turned off—the device assumes the first position again.

A Chinese Dream.

A missionary to China comments upon the heart breaking experience he had at the Nanking arsenal, where he observed a modern, up to date equipment of English machinery employed in making obsolete war material. The Chinese military officials are just now taking pride in their most important production, a breech loading Mauser, which, they state with great pride and acclaim, is capable of driving a bullet through four inches of wood. They imagine that this is the most powerful weapon of its kind in the world.

A PAIR OF ANTIQUE BOOTS.

Worn by Lord Fairfax When He Founded Winchester In Virginia.

Among the valuable antiquities left by ex-Governor Holliday there is a pair of ancient riding boots which were owned by Lord Fairfax and often worn by the man who founded the city. The boots are the oddest kind of footwear and are made of leather in an exceedingly queer fashion. They have passed through several generations of the Holliday family. Dr. Mackey, the late ex-governor's grandfather, was a warm friend of Lord Fairfax, and these gentlemen were together much of their time.

The boots that are now such a relic were worn by Lord Fairfax on special occasions, and they were considered the handsomest pair of boots of their day. Dr. Mackey always greatly admired them and upon one occasion asked Lord Fairfax to will them to him. Lord Fairfax did as he was requested, and upon his death Dr. Mackey became the possessor of them. They have been in the Holliday family until now. At the request of the late ex-governor they will be sent to the Virginia Historical society.

It is almost impossible to describe the oddity of their appearance. They are made of very heavy leather, are about 24 inches high and 12 inches long; the height of the heel is 3 inches; they are 5 inches long and 4 inches wide. The soles are sewed to the uppers, but the heels are attached by pegs nearly as large as a lead pencil. In design they are what is known as the box toed boot. There is enough leather in them to make several ordinary pairs of riding boots. A flap of leather nearly eight inches wide turns over at the top of each. The leather seems quite well preserved.—Winchester (Va.) News Item.

Bathing the Babies.

Don't bathe your little ones too much in cold weather. They should be kept cleanly. But their lives may be washed away by the overscrupulous mother. Science has affirmed what intuition long ago discerned, that the body exhales a certain imponderable atmosphere which for the lack of a better term may be designated as magnetism. To continually wash that away is to deplete the vitality. Neither should the underclothing be too frequently changed. Understand, zealous young housemother, this is no plea for filthiness. But your experienced physician will assure you that many a washed out, feeble, anaemic little one is injured by too much bathing. A sensitive, delicate little neighbor of mine used to cry and resist his mother at his daily bath and change. Finally a shrewd old country woman said to her:

"You wash away the life of Victor. Give him some sand to play with. Don't put him in a tub, but give him a quick, tepid sponge bath three times a week, and you'll see how he picks up."

The result justified the warning. To which it should be added that the temperature and bloodmaking power of child or adult should always be studied. No thin blooded, cold person can stand the amount of bathing which is demanded by one having strong vitality and the power of rapidly making rich red blood.

East and West.

When one of the regiments of volunteers from the Pacific coast was lately at San Francisco being mustered out after a year's service in the Philippines, a lady who belonged to a volunteers' aid association engaged one of the soldiers in conversation. She asked him:

"Were you well treated while you were in the east?"

"East, ma'am? I've never been east," he answered. "I was born in Californy, and I've never been farther east than Salt Lake City."

"But I mean the far east," she said.

"Well, ma'am, Salt Lake's 'far east' to me. Never been farther."

"But you've been in Manila, haven't you?"

"Sure."

"But we call that the east, you know."

"Manila east? Well, I reckon it's a heap west of here. We started here and sailed straight west all the time till we got there."

"Yes, I know, but you can get east by sailing west, you know."

"Well, ma'am," answered the soldier, "I've been wantin to go east all my life, but if I've got to go that way to get there I'm goin to stay right here all my life. I've got enough of goin east that way."—Youth's Companion.

Liquid Air In Surgery.

As in the case of the X rays, it is possible that one of the earliest practical uses of liquid air will be in surgery. Already experiments have indicated that a spray of liquid air can be applied as a local anaesthetic, but the application should never be made except by an experienced operator. In a minute a small part of the body can be frozen as hard as ice, and surgical operations conducted with the aid of liquid air are attended with no hemorrhage. In The Medical Record Dr. A. C. White describes various experiments with liquid air, including the successful treatment of such diseases as sciatica, neuralgia and ivy poisoning. Boils and carbuncles can be aborted with liquid air, and it is useful in the treatment of ulcers.

A Shorthand Typewriter.

A typewriter for shorthand that has lately been invented has only six keys. The type or characters are dots and dashes, and by ringing the changes on these it is possible to make a long alphabet. The keys can be worked simultaneously, the lines begin and end automatically, and a long roll of paper can be used. It is claimed that with the help of this machine shorthand can be written at a very great speed.

THE THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS.

VOL. XVI. NO. 51. THIEF RIVER FALLS, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1899. TERMS: $1.50 IN ADVANCE.

SAY IT IS GOLD.

Rocks Taken from the Red Lake River.

It has been long known to geologists that the entire northern portion of Minnesota bears traces of rich gold bearing rock and that it would not be surprising if at any time someone should discover a veritable Klondike in this section of the country. Along the Rainy river paying ore has been uncovered and the mining operations at that point are of more importance than is generally known to the public. Recent developments tend to bring the gold fever nearer home to Thief River Falls and it is not beyond the bounds of possibility that gold mining may replace logging as the principal industry of the Red Lake region.

While engaged in the improvement of Red Lake river this fall, the crew of the government fleet found a number of boulders remarkable alike for their great weight in comparison to size and for their peculiar appearance. Nick Hanson, a member of the crew, took enough interest in the matter to secure one of the largest of these rocks, weighing about eighty pounds, and send pieces of it to Duluth to be assayed. The experts there pronounced it a very rich specimen of gold bearing ore and expressed the greatest interest in the find.

The original rock is on exhibition at the store of Sam Cheeley and has been examined with considerable interest by citizens of this place. An attempt will be made to find the parent ledge from which the boulders were broken.

Look Out for Trouble.

Dairy Inspector Chadbourne has been warning the merchants this week of the near approach of the time when the new baking powder law goes into effect. A law was passed by the last legislature requiring each can of powder to bear a label showing just what ingredients are contained in the compound and providing for the prosecution of dealers who attempt to sell powder without such labels. This law will be put in force Jan. 1, and the food and dairy department proposes to rigidly enforce its provisions. All the merchants in the state have had notice and if they have not already complied with the law they should do so at once. It is understood that two firms will fight the law and through them many merchants may get into trouble. The fine is fixed at not less than $25 and imprisonment is also provided for.

Full Amount.

At a meeting of the county commissioners of Polk county that body withdrew the offer previously made to the bondsmen of ex-County Treasurer Beaudry, in whose office there was a defiency caused by the embezzlement of Deputy Treasurer Mathews, to settle for half the amount of the deficit, and the full amount of the deficit for the years 1897 and 1898 will be enacted. This will necessitate the payment of nearly $4,000 by the bondsmen.

HAPPY ENDING

Of a Chapter of Very Strange Coincidences.

A strange and suspicious series of co-incidences which might have resulted seriously for a respectable old gentleman of this vicinity took place in this city last week. The matter was eventually cleared up and what might have been almost a tragedy became a comedy. This happy result came about wholly through the honesty of the children of Mrs. Bakken, a widowed lady of the East side.

Two farmers, who had marketed their wheat, met about noon in the Diamond store and proceeded to settle their accounts both with the store and between themselves. Shortly after this one of them discovered that he had given the other a fifty dollar bill instead of a twenty, and called upon him to refund the difference. The second farmer, an old and well known resident living north of here, examined his pockets and, failing to find the bill, they together requested O. P. Johnson to look through his cash for it. This search was equally futile and it began to be suspected that the old gentleman had knowingly secreted the bill. This seemed more probable from the fact that he claimed to have lost the purse since the transaction which contained the greenbacks in question. At this juncture Officer Benzie was called in, and, upon search, the suspect was found to have in his possession two purses with goodly amounts of money in them, but no fifty dollar bill.

In the meantime Arthur Bakken presented himself at the office of the NEWS and handed in the missing purse, which contained seventy dollars in two bills and some other valuable papers. His sisters had found it in front of the Diamond store and had given it to him for the purpose of having it advertised. A person who knew of the find subsequently saw the farmer in the clutches of the law and being led towards the lockup. Inquiry developed the facts of the case and the property was restored to its owners, who promptly divided the fatal fifty into its proper proportions and went each on his way rejoicing.

The girls were given a five dollar bill as a reward for their honesty, and all was joy.

Christmas at "Billie" Porter's.

A large number of people living in the Second ward celebrated Christmas eve in a good old fashioned way at the residence of W. G. Porter. Over sixty people were present and a large Christmas tree decorated with presents proved an attractive feature for the young people. James Farr acted as Santa Claus and he distributed many presents to the people assembled.

WILL RUN AGAIN

Congressman Eddy a Candidate for Re-election.

Representative Frank M. Eddy of this congressional district, will be a candidate for re-election. It has been known all along that Mr. Eddy would be up for re-election, but last week was the first time he made formal public announcement. He states that if he is to have opposition he wants his constitutents to know that he is in the field. Dr. Cole, of Fergus Falls, it is said, will be the candidate pitted against Eddy.

WHEAT AND FLAX

A. K. Bush Tells Why They Should Be Grown Together.

Among the topics discussed at the recent farmers' institute held at Fergus Falls, none aroused greater interest that the plan of raising wheat and flax together—a plan which is being advocated by A. K. Bush, of Dover, Minn., who states that it is rapidly coming into general favor in the southern part of the state, although something entirely new here. Mr. Bush states that this plan tends to prevent the wheat from lodging on heavy ground; that it keeps out cinch bugs and to a certain extent prevents rust. The quality of both grains is materially improved by the mixture. He states that two parts of wheat should be mixed with one of flax, and four or five pecks of the mixture sown to each acre. The crop can be harvested with a binder and handled in exactly the same manner as clear wheat. It can be threshed as wheat is ordinarily threshed, and the mixed grain taken to the elevators, where the farmer can secure pay in proportion to the amount of each, as determined by the flax test. The grains are readily separated afterwards by the flax-cleaning machines. Mr. Bush has been engaged in farming in Olmsted county since 1855, and speaks from practical experience.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Of the Wedding of W. C. Stranahan and Miss Fontaine.

Mrs. Louis Fontaine entertained a number of lady friends at five o'clock tea today. The affair was a very pretty one, and was given as an occasion at which the hostess might announce the approaching marriage of her daughter, Miss Blanch, to William Clinton Stranahan, which will occur during Christmas week. The bride is known to nearly everyone in Crookston as a young lady of charming personality and rare musical accomplishments, and the groom is known as a young man of exemplary habits and character. After their marriage the young couple will reside in Aberdeen, S. D., where Mr. Stranahan will represent the Marshall-Wells hardware firm of Duluth.

The above, taken from the Crookston Daily Times of December 21, refers to young people well known here. Mr. Stranahan has for a number of years been selling hardware to the merchants here, and is a brother of L. P. Stranahan of this city.

Always to the Front.

The announcement recently made by the Minneapolis Times that it had secured for exclusive use in the northwest, the New York Herald's special and unrivalled cable news service (at a price which would stagger a less enterprising newspaper), is but another proof that it is at all times the leader of the northwestern dailies and is determined to furnish to its readers the very best reliable news obtainable, and to bublish it first at whatever the cost.

This new cable and domestic service, together with the Associated Press service and the Times' own corps of special correspondents, places that enterprising newspaper easily in first place among the twin city dailies.

The Times' readers can now be assured of just as complete and reliable a service as if they lived in New York or London. We congratulate the Times in its enterprise.

The Pine Supply.

Some newspapers are just now discussing the probable ending of the lumber business in Minnesota. An estimate was made that the business would end soon, and Frederick Weyenhaeuser gave the following opinion on the matter: The idea that the pine supply of Minnesota will be exhausted in five years is foolish, and the statement that only 7,000,000,000 feet of standing pine remain is wide of the truth. Our mills, the Pine Tree Lumber company at Little Falls and the Cloquet Lumber companies at Cloquet, have timber enough to stock them for fifteen or twenty years, and we are buying more all the time. Our new mill at Lake Nebagamon will be sawing for fourten years. I would be willing to accept an estimate of twenty-five billion feet in Minnesota and pay a good price for it. I believe the total amount is nearer forty billion.

Thief River Falls, Dec. 28, 1899.

The Polk County Journal last week published one of the finest illustrated editions it has ever been our good fortune to peruse. It was a work of art and the publisher is deserving of much praise for exhibiting such enterprise.

Liberty of speech and freedom of the press are the twin guardians of our independence, but how utterly ridiculous, in the light of history, are those who misuse these high privileges in a spirit of anti-everything. The following, which the St. Paul Dispatch brings to light again after a hundred years repose in the files of a now forgotten newspaper, might well be from the pen of Atkinson:

If ever a nation was debauched by a man, the American nation has been debauched by Washington. If ever a nation has been deceived by a man, the American nation has been deceived by Washington. Let his conduct be an example for future years. Let it serve to be a warning that no man may be an idol. Let the history of the federal government instruct mankind that the mask of patriotism may be worn to conceal the foulest designs against the liberties of the people.

Cosgrove's Merry Makers.

The entertainment to be given in the Odd Fellows' hall next Saturday and Monday evenings promises to be a treat for the people of Thief River Falls. The Cosgroves have been playing at all of the leading cities in the Northwest and are spoken well of by the press. They played Christmas night in the city of Crookston, and the following from the Tribune will be of interest to the people of this city:

"Cosgrove's Merry Makers gave their concerts last night in the Grand opera house under the auspices of the Knights of Pythias. The entertainment is quite harmless, and a medium for diverting one's thoughts from the daily grind can be counted a success, for that reason adverse criticism is disarmed, and one feels compelled to let it go at that. The Cosgroves are certainly brilliant artists, but they entertain in a manner that is sure to please some, if not all. Their program contains many numbers, and the performers work hard in a strong effort to please. The audience last night was pleased, therefore the concert was a success. Ada and Lillian Cosgrove posed ala delsarte movements; they were graceful, in some of them, and the limelight effect was pleasing to the eye. Several musical numbers were rendered, and the program was finished after fifteen minutes had been spent with the cinematograph."

High-Priced Cattle.

Never in the history of the American cattle trade has there been more striking demonstration of the paramount importance of good blood and generous "keep" than is afforded by the present course of the markets for beef cattle at leading yards. The "spread" between well fed steers of the right quality and unfinished stock devoid of breeding is so pronounced a feature of the trade that "he who runs may read."

The $7 notch was reached several days ago by consignments of Short-horns and Galloways, and on Monday of last week some Aberdeen-Angus and Herefords commanded $7.40. The end is probably no yet. It is fully anticipated that even this extraordinary price will be exceeded during the next few days.—Chicago Stock Farm.

ON THE SIDE.

The publishers of this paper probably constitute, if not in every sense, the biggest publishing firm in the state, certainly, for the same number of members, the biggest in avoirdupois. The combined weight of the three is 727 pounds.—Warroad Plaindealer.

St. Hilaire has a publishing firm—and there are only two of 'em—that we believe can out weigh the Warroad trio, but, owing to the fact that there is not a pair of hay scales in that town, we cannot back up our assertions with figures.

Master Sabin Durham is eight years old. His father keeps the Riverside hotel in Warroad. Mrs. Durham is a Norwegian, and young Sabin can talk a little Scandinavian. The other day he was getting off some of his siminative speech in the hotel office, and someone asked him: "What are you, anyhow?" The answer was prompt and decisive: "I'm half Norwegian and half Durham."—Warroad Plaindealer.

A meeting of the citizens of Roseau was held last week at Pelan and over 200 delegates were present. It was held for the purpose of trying to induce the Southeastern to extend its line west from Warroad to Drayton, N. D. A free right-of-way through Roseau county is offered, and it is said that the Canadian road is entertaining seriously the proposition of building the road.

DAWN OF THE AGE OF LOVE.

BY MICHAEL CORDAY.

The celebrated painter Milate during his last days looked with fondness toward two youthful beings—his daughter Janine and his pupil, Marcel Jacquemin. She was still but a young girl, in all the budding grace and fairness of her 15 summers. Marcel had attained his eighteenth year, an orphan, whom chance had thrown in Milate's path, and the latter had been instantly struck by the boy's talent and persuaded him to study art.

Janine and Marcel loved each other with youthful fervor and absolute tenderness, which was both ardent and delightful, but where desire did not enter.

A project was thus awakened in the father's heart and so forcibly impressed itself on his mind that it speedily became a species of consolation for all the agony that he was compelled to endure. He wished Marcel and Janine to marry, he desired to unite the child of his flesh to the one of his intellect and thereby to be revivified in them, and he passionately longed for the realization of his desires.

He felt that his days were numbered, inasmuch as the crisis in his illness was fast approaching, the attacks were more frequent and of greater duration, and he trembled at the thought that he might not live to execute his unique idea and desire. Then his morbid condition came to his aid and suggested the following stratagem: Marcel and Janine had attained the age when the law would permit them to marry even if nature and reason had not yet sufficiently matured them, and they could therefore be united by the sacred rites of the church, and yet their positions could remain unchanged until the time when they all would have considered it propitious for the union had he not been menaced by this frightful fear. The grim monster of death could then assail him, and he should disappear with the certainty of having left happiness behind him.

Milate accordingly revealed his plan to the three persons that he so tenderly cherished. At first they revolted at the thought of there being any necessity to take such a hasty step. But Mme. Milate invariably bent to her husband's will, and the youthful couple were swayed equally by anxiety and delight. The double ceremony of church and state was therefore quietly performed, and the painter assisted, although in great agony. Then, as if he had strained his powers and endurance to the utmost limit, he died eight days after the date of the union he had effected.

After the first pangs of her sorrow had been allayed Mme. Milate was troubled as to how and when she should authorize the young people to begin their new life.

"What moment or day would be the auspicious one?" she mused, and how might she make it clear to them? Marriage regulated and foresaw so much, but this was an exceptional case, and she keenly felt the responsibility of her position.

She consulted those who had been her husband's most trustworthy friends, hoping thus to come to a wise decision. But some, austere in their judgment, spoke of the young couple waiting still for the succeeding ten years. Others consented to reducing the period to seven, five or three, as if it were a question of military service. Some who thought but of sentiment urged the speedy union, and they cited Daphne and Chloe as examples. There were still more who affirmed that all depended on their dispositions. The friends who had fondly dreamed of their son, marrying Janine Milate were slyly revengeful and said, "Your daughter is so delicate," or "It is running a great risk." After these various consultations the painter's widow was more undecided than before.

Then her thoughts reverted to Marcel, and she reflected as to confiding her anxieties to him. She could question him as to his opinions on this serious subject. If they were reasonable and worthy of approbation, she could intrust the future to him. She could enter into a sort of compact with him that he would undertake to execute. He could swear, and she would thus be relieved of all surveillance and concern. However, she was ever dismayed over the abnormal character of the situation and fearful of openly broaching the subject to her son-in-law. Thus she waited, looking to and yet fearful of what chance might offer and longing for some sudden inspiration that would be advantageous to her children and at the same time make all raillery impossible.

Marcel and Janine meanwhile were supremely happy. The young painter used the easel and brushes of his master and worked in Janine's presence, while she would occupy herself with some embroidery. Their repasts and promenades were always taken in each other's society, with Mme. Milate ever near at hand, discreet, but vigilant. Then, when evening came and at about 11 o'clock, Marcel would regain the little room on an adjoining street which he had occupied since his marriage.

And thus their existence passed fraught with infinite happiness and so strong a confidence in the future that words seemed useless, while Mme. Milate would silently long that it might thus be indefinitely protracted.

A year passed in this way, and then a difference became apparent to the mother, a difference which gave her an uncertain tranquillity. Janine and Marcel were verging into maturity. One day, when returning to the studio after a brief absence, she surprised them in each other's arms, with their lips pressed closely together. She then realized that the denouement was near at hand. The uninterrupted surveillance fatigued her and, moreover, now seemed out of place. Should she simply close her eyes, she mused, but in that case some dissimulation would be necessary. She would have to ignore the truth, and in that way her misapprehension might be prolonged. Then followed a time when she longed that the young people might take the initiative themselves. Her unuttered prayer was hearkened to, for on a winter's night, when a snowstorm was raging furiously without, Janine took compassion upon poor Marcel, who was lamentably preparing to depart. She opened the sash, then quickly closed it and murmured:

"It is too cold for you to leave tonight."

Thus it was that Janine and Marcel had attained the age to love.—Translated From the French in Cincinnati Enquirer

ONLY A CIVIL ENGINEER

By Edith Hastings.

When Milton Hume arrived in Boston, he was in a greatly discouraged state of mind. Educated as a civil engineer, he had worked at his profession assiduously and achieved some prominence.

He had been cheered in his efforts by the hope of attaining a sufficient competence to warrant him in asking Colonel Rogers for "his eyes," otherwise known as his daughter, Millicent. They had met at the house of a mutual friend, and Milton was at once captured by her many graces of mind and heart and soon found that if papa would consent she would not say him nay.

Papa seemed to be, however, an insurmountable obstacle. He had been prematurely retired from the army on account of failing vision and was well known in "army circles" at Washington, chiefly on account of his irascibility of temper and his intolerance of people outside the army.

In justice to the colonel it must be said that he never visited his ill temper upon Millie, who was as sweet tempered as she was beautiful—that is, not until he discovered that the attentions of Milton Hume were becoming significant. Millie was at once court martialed and summarily convicted of having deliberately encouraged the attentions of a good for nothing civilian, a mere nobody, of whom no one had ever heard. "Why," said the irate colonel in summing up, "I have seen him actually working among common laborers, and in his shirt sleeves at that."

Millie was sentenced to imprisonment within the paternal abode and warned not to communicate with her lover on pain of being disowned. Milton was the recipient of a curt note from the colonel forbidding him to call or write, and, on meeting that wrathful gentleman the next day, was informed that an attempt to do so would be met with "personal chastisement with a cane, sah."

The threat did not alarm Milton, but the colonel was Millie's father, and the only thing possible to do was to wait and hope for the clouds to lift.

Instead of lifting they became blacker than ever. Milton became involved financially by crooked dealings of his partner, and instead of nearing the desired competency found himself heavily in debt. Sacrificing everything material that he possessed he shook the dust of Washington from his feet and went to Boston, where he had hope of employment, but not before a stolen interview with Millie was engineered. Eternal vows of constancy were exchanged and the usual quantity of tears shed, accompanied by uncomplimentary remarks on the fickle jade, Fortune, on his part and cheering words on hers. "Something tells me," said Millie, "that everything will come out all right, and this new departure of yours may make your fortune."

But the fortune did not materialize, the field was overcrowded, and after several weeks of unsuccessful effort he found himself nearly at the end of his resources with no employment in prospect.

One morning as he started on his quest for a position he was electrified by the announcement of "War with Spain!" His mind was instantly made up. Hurrying to the nearest armory he enlisted as a private soldier in a volunteer regiment. Showing much zeal and aptitude, he was made a corporal and in that humble capacity marched bravely away.

A hurried letter apprised Millie of what had happened, but did not add to her happiness, as the colonel informed her that a private soldier was all "that engineer fellow" was good for, and she knew that in the colonel's mind a private soldier was irrevocably outside the social pale. She, however, had still some faith in the future and did not entirely despair.

One day in the wilds of Cuba Corporal Hume's regiment halted on the edge of an apparently impassable gorge. With his usual lack of foresight the commanding general had not sent any engineers with the advance, although the movement was an extremely important one. The men, exhausted by the heat and the long march, threw themselves on the ground, glad of a chance to rest. Not so the colonel. He swore vociferously at the gorge, but, being neither Moses nor Joshua, it did no good. The gorge was still there.

This was Hume's opportunity. Waiting for a break in the colonel's incantations, he approached, and, respectfully saluting, informed him that if he could have a detail of 20 men he could bridge the chasm in an hour. "You can have the whole blasted regiment if you need it," was the reply.

The bridge was quickly constructed, and the regiment safely passed over, thanks to that engineer fellow, but in the battle of the following day he was severely wounded.

Long weeks of suffering succeeded, but one day as he was sitting in front of the field hospital, weak, but convalescent, an orderly appeared and asked the surgeon in charge if Lieutenant Hume was there. "No," said the surgeon, "this isn't the officer's ward. That's on the other side of the hill."

"Beg pardon for contradicting superiors," said the orderly, "but read this," at the same time handing him a paper.

It was a communication from Washington appointing Milton Hume a lieutenant of engineers for bravery on the field and skill in emergency.

Of his subsequent recovery, expert service where experts were much needed, it is not necessary to speak. Suffice it to say that several months later a tall young gentleman in the uniform of a captain of engineers walked up the steps of Colonel Roger's house with a very confident air.

The welcome he received from Millie may be imagined, but the surprise and consternation of the colonel cannot be expressed.

That "that engineer fellow" could have become an "officer and a gentleman" was past belief. It was contrary to all traditions of "Ahmy Success." Due investigation at the club, however, proved that Captain Hume's position was unassailable, so he concluded to make the best of the situation.

The colonel has even been heard to speak of the whilom "engineer fellow" as "my son-in-law, Hume, of the engineers, sah."—Boston Post.

Merely Sounded the Alarm.

"He is a brave man," said one Parisian citizen as the personage who fights duels in the newspapers passed.

"A very brave man," answered the other. "I have known him to call out a dozen men in one day!"

"Impossible!"

"Yes. They were members of the fire department."—Washington Star.

The work of building the bridge across the Red Lake river for the Great Northern at this point is not progressing very rapidly. A great deal of trouble is being experienced in driving the piling, and it may be found necessary to build a pier in the center of the river. The present crew will be greatly increased after the first of January and the work will be rushed.

Fire in the warehouse of the United States Express company in St. Paul Sunday night destroyed some 2,000 packages, presumed to be Christmas presents. The packages were what is known as "transfer freight," that is, freight not originating in the twin cities, but consigned to northern and western points. This means that a great many people will miss their Christmas presents.

LaBree Ave. — — Thief River Falls, Min

I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and hav said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

OUR FAMILY OPAL.

By R. K. Munkittrick.

My great-grandfather was the first one of the family to become the possessor of the opal. A widower for the third time, he engaged himself to my old Aunt Cornelia, and the opal was set for the engagement ring.

As soon as he had given her the ring he began to regret his engagement. Aunt Cornelia concluded that the old man was cooling off in his attentions, but she didn't blame him. She regarded it all as ill luck, which she attributed to the opal.

Now, another curious feature of the case was that my great-grandfather's eyes, from looking long and fondly into Aunt Cornelia's, had suddenly acquired a peculiar habit of incessantly whirling, her only infirmity.

A day or two later she noticed that my great-grandfather's were whirling and thought that he was mimicking her and making light of her optical peculiarity. She would listen to no word of explanation, but broke the engagement on the spot and handed him back the opal ring.

That night he made a misstep on the way up stairs and sprained his ankle, and on the following day a railroad was wrecked, and the stock he held in it dropped from 100 to 60. He then had the opal set in a scarfpin and gave it to one of his nephews for a birthday present.

Suddenly Bill's salary was cut down in the fullness of its bloom. His hair began to fall out, and the doctor, not knowing just what the matter was, ordered a sea voyage on general principles. Fearing shipwreck, Bill gave the opal scarfpin to his brother before sailing. Bill went to sea and returned with a full head of hair and his salary restored.

After Bill had sailed his brother, who went to the wharf to bid him goodby, started up the street, when his hat blew off and went spinning along so fast that he could not overtake it, and a street urchin started the cry, "Stop thief!"

Others took up the shout, and finally a crowd followed in hot pursuit, until he was overtaken and arrested. His explanation was laughed at, the police theory being that he had fled from the scene of his crime without his hat.

So Bill's brother was locked up overnight and had the mortification of seeing his name in print in the morning, when he was discharged.

So he gave the opal to Tom, and Tom was very glad to have it and lost no time in sticking it in his scarf. Bill's brother on the way home picked up a $10 bill on the sidewalk and when he arrived home found a man waiting to make arrangements to mortgage his property to him for $5,000 at 6 per cent, a gilt edged investment, which made him believe that the other man had been presented with an opal.

Tom bought a turkey on the way home and left it in the train rack when he stepped off. And when he went into the house he was horrified to learn that his wife had been cajoled into purchasing $2 worth of glee club tickets.

"I am surprised that you should yield to the arguments of those ticket fiends. Indeed, you are a jewel of consistency," he said, with biting sarcasm.

"Talking about jewels," she replied, with a vim equal to his own, "I believe that opal you have there has changed our luck. Where did you get it?"

"Cousin Luke gave it to me."

"That explains it. Luke would never give you or any one else anything of any value to himself. What time did he give it to you?" asked his wife.

"At 2 o'clock this afternoon."

"And it was at 3 that I bought those tickets. I didn't want them at all, because I needed the $2 they cost to buy some velvet and other things to cover my old hat and make it do for winter and thus save the price of a new one and give you a chance to buy an overcoat. But I couldn't resist. Have you had any bad luck today?"

"I left a turkey on the train," said Tom.

"Of course you did," snapped his wife, "and I suppose you had counterfeit money palmed off on you in change. Just take out your money and see."

He fished some silver out of the pocket in which he carried his small change, and, sure enough, there was a lead 50 cent piece.

"That about cancels my purchase of the glee club tickets, doesn't it?" she said, with an air of triumph seldom equaled in a battle picture. "Now look at your bills."

He thrust his hand into his vest pocket and found that it had been cut out—stolen—money and all.

She buried her face in her hands and sobbed:

"Oh, Tom, why did you buy me those tickets?"

"I didn't," Tom protested.

"Yes, you did, and no one else did, and"— —

She was interrupted by a crash. The cook appeared, frightened out of her wits, and shouted hysterically:

"The boiler's burst, and all the hair is scalded off poor Fido."

So Tom rushed out and met me. "Here's a beautiful opal scarfpin," he said. "Wouldn't you like to have it?"

I thought of the ill luck it had brought my poor great-grandfather and Aunt Cornelia, the antique virgin with the whirling eyes. I was almost afraid to accept the proffered bauble. I did summon up courage and took it, however, determined to dispose of it in such a way that it would not be likely to cause any more trouble in the family.

So I entered a jewelry shop and, tossing the opal carelessly on the velvet pad that lay on the glass case, said: "Will you kindly appraise this so called precious stone, this opal? You as a dealer don't share the superstition that possesses me, and will therefore probably purchase it at a fair valuation. It has made trouble enough for me and mine, and I want to rid myself of it at any price."

The dealer examined the stone for a moment and said with a smile:

"Opal your grandmother. This is not an opal. It's a cat's eye!"—Criterion.

Simply Horrible.

"No, Weary, I shall never approach that man's inhospitable door again."

"But, Limpy, it's six miles to de next house."

"Can't help it, if it's 20. That man once did me the greatest injury that can be paid to a gentleman of my profession."

"Did he hit you with a bed slat, Limpy?"

"Naw! He turned de hose on me."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Story of Cattaraugus.

While waiting for a train at a railway station a boy asked me for a drink of water. As he took it I noticed an unusual deformity of his hands.

"Whose child is that?" I inquired of the station agent.

"Oh, he don't belong around here," said that official. "His folks live over at The Breakers, a wild, mountainous section along the Cattaraugus creek. His mother is visiting Jim Crandall's folks up here on the hill, and she brought him here with her."

I spoke about the peculiar deformity of the child's hands, and the station agent replied:

"Yes, very strange, very strange, and there's a story around here about his folks, which most of the country people believe, though I can't say whether it's true or not."

"Let me hear the story," said I. Handing him a cigar and lighting one for myself, we settled back in our chairs, and he began:

"You see, many years ago, before this road was built, people didn't do much traveling, but staid at home and did their trading with peddlers, who were quite numerous about here and who found it a profitable pursuit. One of the most popular of these wandering merchants was a man named Israel Goodman, who usually carried a select assortment of cheap laces, ribbons, jewelry, table linen, etc., and whose arrival at a farmhouse was hailed with delight by the feminine members of the family.

"Goodman, who did a thriving business, was supposed to carry quite a sum of money with him and was frequently advised by the farmers to carry some weapon with which to defend himself in case of attack. To these repeated warnings he would invariably answer:

"'Nein, nein! I will nefer carry a gun. I haf a shtrong arm, a goot shtick, und I am not afraidt.'

"One afternoon late in November Goodman was seen upon the road leading to G——. Snow was falling, and the wind, which had been blowing fiercely all day, increased in severity, until by nightfall it had become a perfect blizzard.

"The road, a lonely one through an almost unbroken forest, became drifted and clogged by the falling snow, and Goodman, who was still five miles from his destination, sought shelter in a rude log cabin inhabited by a family named Kelley, whose reputation for honesty was none of the best and whose source of income was peeling bark for the tanneries and selling whisky to the Indians of the Cattaraugus reservation. The traveler was received with apparent cordiality by the members of the family, which consisted of the father, four sons and two daughters, and upon Goodman's entrance the elder Kelley proceeded to illuminate the room by lighting two tallow candles and sticking them into the necks of bottles placed at either end of the table for that purpose.

"Presently supper was announced, and the guest was bidden to be seated in the high backed, rush bottomed chair of Indian manufacture, the best the establishment afforded. During the progress of the meal frequent inquiries were made by the elder Kelley about the condition of trade along the road, and he cast repeated glances at the traveler's pack, which had been deposited in a corner of the room. Supper over, a bottle of whisky was produced and passed around, each one, women included, taking a long pull at the bottle.

"As the effect of the whisky became apparent the old man became quarrelsome and finally demanded that the pack be opened and its contents distributed among the members of the family. To this proposition, of course, the traveler objected, and, thinking the best way out of the difficulty would be to pay for his accommodation and venture forth again upon his journey, he drew out his purse and offered some money to the old man, who at the sight of the money sprung up and grappled with the peddler, attempting to get his purse away from him. In this he was joined by his eldest son and, although the peddler fought desperately, he was no match for his two opponents, who beat and kicked him unmercifully and soon had him prostrate upon the floor.

"As he still refused to give up his money, the father and son dragged him to a corner of the room, where there was a trapdoor opening into the cellar, and upon the peddler's second refusal to share his property the father shouted to some one below to pull the bolt, which was done, and instantly the trap swung downward, the body of the unfortunate traveler falling with it, but not entirely disappearing from view, for in his fall the man clutched the sides of the opening in the floor and made frantic efforts to pull himself back again, whereupon the old man seized an ax and, swinging it high above his head, brought down its keen blade with crushing force upon the hands of the struggling unfortunate, who, with a shriek, fell back into the cellar, cursing his murderers and calling down on them the vengeance of heaven, until his cries were stilled by the blows of the confederates who had sprung the trap.

"A quarrel arising out of the division of the peddler's articles, one of the women informed the authorities, who instituted a search of the place, and the woman's story was confirmed by finding the peddler's body, with that of several human skeletons which had been buried in the cellar. Kelley and his two older sons had disappeared, however, and, although diligent search was made for them, they were never captured.

"The strangest part of the story is that all of the descendants of the family, of whom the boy you noticed is one, have been born without fingers, and the country people believe the Almighty hearkened to the voice of the dying peddler and in this manner visited his judgment upon the descendants of his murderers."—Pittsburg Press.

VOL. XVI. NO. 52. THIEF RIVER FALLS, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, THURSDAY, JANUARY 4, 1900. TERMS: $1.50 IN ADVANCE

NEARLY CONSUMED

The Fire, Smoke and Water Do Great Damages.

The handsome residence recently built by Supt. E. Rogers, of the Thief River Falls Lumber company, was greatly damaged Sunday evening by fire, smoke and water. The fire broke out while Mr. and Mrs. Rogers were attending church and was discovered by U. G. Richards. It started in the basement, and was caused by some defect in the furnace. The house was so filled with smoke that the firemen were unable to gain an entrance, and for over an hour two streams of water were poured upon the flames, which were finally subdued. The loss is hard to estimate, but the damage done by smoke is by far the greatest. The furniture in the house is ruined, and the walls of the house are damaged either by fire or by smoke to a considerable extent.

Mr. Rogers has insurance to the amount of $1,200 upon the house and $800 upon the furniture, written by companies represented by C. L. Dobner, and an insurance adjuster will arrive in a few days to adjust the loss.

The firemen did noble work in saving the building, and are entitled to a great deal of praise. The night was a bitter cold one and the firemen endured many hardships in their fight.

CHANGES MADE

In Management of the Thief River Falls Lumber Co.

Some changes were made in the management of the Thief River Falls Lumber company on Jan. 1. L. P. Stranahan, who has been bookkeeper, resigned. U. G. Richards, who has been in charge of the lumber sales, has been made cashier, and Marshall Chambers will be in charge of lumber company's books and office.

Mr. Stranahan has accepted a position as traveling auditor for the Shevlin-Carpenter Lumber company, and while his new duties will necessitate his removing from this city, his family will remain here until spring.

Stranahan-Fontaine.

One of the prettiest home weddings that ever occured in Crookston was celebrated at 4:30 this afternoon at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. L. Fontaine, the occasion being the marriage of their second daughter, Miss Blanche Irene Fontaine to Mr. William Clinton Stranahan. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Fr. Grandchamp. The marriage was a quiet one, only the most intimate friends of the family being present, and the bride was without attendants. The ceremony was performed in the spacious parlors of the handsome home, and tables were spread in the sitting and dining rooms for a wedding supper. The decorations were in red and white, smilax being festooned about the rooms, the flowers which were profusely scattered about being roses and carnations.

The happy couple will leave at 7:15 tonight for Fargo, where they will, for a day or two, be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Stranahan. They will visit Duluth and the twin cities later, and their future home will be made in Eau Claire, Wisconsin. Mr. and Mrs. Stranahan begin their wedded life with bright prospects, and their many friends wish them a happy future.—Crookston Times, Dec. 28

SEVENTH DIVIDED.

The Seventh Will Be Cut in Two Next Year.

Politicians all over the state will welcome the news that the new apportionment, based on the census of 1900, will make two congressional districts out of the present Seventh district of Minnesota. This means that the congressman to be elected next fall will be the last one to represent the old district as a whole. If appearances are any criterion to judge from it would seem as though Congressman Eddy will be the unanimous choice of the next Republican congressional convention, and if such is the case it is a certainty that he will be elected by a larger vote than ever. In every political organization there are some sore spots, but they are always, or nearly so, amicably adjusted before the critical moment arrives—the moment when the polls are open for the people to assert their rights. Everybody with ordinary horse sense knows that it is a sheer impossibility for a man to locate a government building on more than one site, nor can he be expected to cause the appointment of two or more postmasters for the same office, and Congressman Eddy is no exception to the rule. There is not a harder working statesman in Washington than Mr. Eddy, and the importance of the measures which he has under way will hardly permit the experiment of putting a new man in his place during the last two years the district remains as a whole.

FARMS SOLD.

Town of Excel Will Have Some New Residents.

Nat Campbell has sold the La Bree homestead situated at Thief River Falls, for $3,500. The farm is considered to be one of the finest in the country. It comprises 160 acres, 125 under plow, the balance pasture and timber. The purchaser resides at Manvel, N. D. —Crookston Tribune.

There were other real estate transfers made in the town of Excel last week, among them being the sale of the Hank Barret farm, the John Pederson farm and the Nicholson farm. The land was all purchased by parties from North Dakota, who will at once remove here and take up their residence. The price paid was from $8 to $11 per acre.

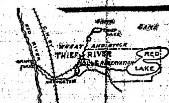
Always to the Front.

The announcement recently made by the Minneapolis Times that it had secured for exclusive use in the northwest, the New York Herald's special and unrivalled cable news service (at a price which would stagger a less enterprising newspaper), is but another proof that it is at all times the leader of the northwestern dailies and is determined to furnish to its readers the very best reliable news obtainable, and to bublish it first at whatever the cost.

This new cable and domestic service, together with the Associated Press service and the Times' own corps of special correspondents, places that enterprising newspaper easily in first place among the twin city dailies.

The Times' readers can now be assured of just as complete and reliable a service as if they lived in New York or London. We congratulate the Times in its enterprise.

WHY THIEF RIVER FALLS IS A SUCCESS



It is immediately surrounded by a section of the world famous Red River valley, unequalled for agricultural purposes.

Its wheat market is unsurpassed in the Northwest—with three elevators and a large flouring mill, it has every facility for handling and shipping the grain.

The vast meadows to the north and east offer inexhaustable wild hay and grazing ground for stock of all kinds.

It is the terminus of the railroad and the only outlet for the trade of this rich region.

It is also at the foot of the navigable portion of the Red Lake river and the base of supplies for the great lumber regions tributary to Red lake.

Five steamboats ply continuously during the summer between Thief River Falls and the Red lake, loaded to the guards with men and supplies.

Two saw mills, one of which employs 300 men, working night and day, convert the logs into good, hard money.

There is standing timber in sight to insure thirty years' sawing, and the rapidly growing farming and grazing community will by that time have made the city independent of lumber interests.

While all the immediate vicinity is under cultivation and the back towns are being speedily settled, there still exists, within a day's drive, a sportsman's paradise and that the sportsmenn are not insensible of this fact is attested by the number of hunting parties constantly passing through the city during the open season.

The wealth of furs and hides secured by the reservation Indians as well as by the hunters and trappers of the more remote regions to the east and north are all marketed here.

Its geographical situation in the midst of the rich, open country but holding at the same time the key to the wealth of the forests, insures success.

Its location on the banks of the Red Lake river at the site of a great water power insures success.

The healthfulness of the city and perfect natural drainage of its site insures success.

And Thief River Falls is a success.

HE WILL LOCATE

On the Red Lake Reservation East of Here.

Gus Kern, a resident of Stearns county, has been in the city the past few days looking over the Red Lake reservation and has decided to locate here next spring. Mr. Kern states that his wife is a quarter blood Chippewa, and, as such, she and her five children are entitled to take allotments of land on this reservation. Over a section of land will be taken, Mr. Kern states, and he intends to build buildings and cultivate the land. Mr. Kern has recently disposed of a farm which he owned near St. Cloud and has plenty of money to develope the land here.

Get Ready for the Census.

Farmers who have marketed their crops and have the data fresh in their heads had better make some notes now so as to be prepared for the census man.

This year the census taker will make his official visit in behalf of the United States. He will ask you many questions, which, if asked by any other person, would be considered impertinent. He will ask how many bushels of each kind of grain you raised this year, and its value; how many bushels of potatoes and all kinds of vegetables and roots, either for table use or for feeding and the value; how much of all kinds of fruits, large and small, and the value. All of these questions will have reference to the products of the year ending Dec. 31, 1899. In the matter of domestic animals, or "live stock," the question will have refesence to the time at which the enumeration is made.

NO STAMP

Is Needed on Notes of Less Than $100.

The committee on ways and means in congress will bring into the house soon after the holidays an unanimous report to abolish the revenue tax on notes for amounts of less than $100 each. In the country sections a great deal of litigation has grown out of this particular tax. Farmers trading among themselves and exchanging notes for small amounts find it difficult and often impossible to obtain the required stamps to legalize their notes. Sharp and tricky traders contest the payment of unstamped notes, thereby causing no end of trouble. As the amount of revenue derived by the government from this source of taxation is not great, congress is likely to relieve makers and receivers of these small notes from the annoyance of placing stamps on them.

FIRST MEETING

City Council Organizes and Is Ready for Business.

The members of the city council elected for the ensuing two years met in the city hall Tuesday evening and after taking the oath of office proceeded to organize. C. J. Knox was elected president, and after this excellent selection had been made the council settled down to business. A communication from Mayor Kretzschmar was read and later his honor appointed Wm. Benzie superintendent of police and the appointment was confirmed by the council.

A communication was received from James Farr applying for the position of city engineer. After some discussion it was decided to ascertain the wishes of the members of the fire department in regard to its chief and engineer and action was deferred.

E. E. Brown, of the East Side, and R. B. Vining put in applications for the position of street commissioner. After some discussion in regard to salary, and the advisibility of hiring a street commissioner before spring, it was decided to postpone action for a month or so. The city clerk volunteered to do the work gratis until spring.

The matter of salaries was next brought up and it was decided to make the salary of each alderman and mayor $100, and the same to be expended upon the roads leading into the city under the direction of the council. The money will be expended in townships where the farmers are willing to do their share of the road building.

It did not take the council long to arrive at the conclusion that the services of F. Hibner, city attorney, could be dispensed of, and the salary of $200 which has heretofore been paid to him will be saved.

The salary of city engineer was fixed at $35 per month, and that of chief of police was made $40. The city clerk will receive $300 a year and will be required to act as street commissioner for five months of the year—from Nov. 1 to April 1.

Dr. Grundy was elected health officer and his salary is to be $25 per year.

City Treasurer Wullin stated that this council inherited a debt from the last council—unpaid orders—of about $1,200.

The plat of Meehan's addition to Thief River Falls was approved.

The following is Mayor Kretzschmar's message in full:

In entering upon the duties of mayor of the city I wish briefly to outline to you my views of the policy that the ingoing city administration should pursue during the coming term.

To the outgoing mayor and council I in common with other loyal citizens of our city tender my sincere thanks for the honest and faithful endeavor they have made to give this city a good administration for the two years past and which has proved conductive of so much good to our city.

In the appointment of city employees I wish preference should be given to those who in the past have discharged their trust faithfully and to the satisfaction of all good citizens, thereby complying with the spirit of the law, under which the city is organized, and also promoting the efficiency of the executive branch of the city's administration, which is largely in the hands of the appointive officers.

The present salaries paid city employees are, in my opinion, not too big. If we expect good and honest service we must pay for it, enough, at least, that they make their living when working for the city.

To the police of the city I shall look for the enforcement of our city's ordinances and laws of the state, ever expecting that the police in the discharge of their duties exercise due discretion and judgment.

As to improvement in the coming year I like to see a certain amount of money, but not to exceed $500.00, appropriated from the current expense fund for the purpose of keeping the roads leading into our town in order, and I would suggest that such appropriation, if made, be given to a committee to work in conjunction with a committee of business men of the town and in fairness to taxpayers of the city who are not directly engaged in business the business element should in lieu of such appropriation subscribe an appropriate sum of money to be added thereto and the whole amount deposited to be drawn on for improvements of roads only.

The sanitary condition of the city should not be lost sight of and I recommend that a sewer be built from the iron bridge to the city hall and that it be made sufficiently big to carry the water off. In order to carry this recommendation out I would suggest that the city council establish the different wards as separate sewer districts of the city.

In order that better care can be taken of the city's tools I recommend that a shed be built on the west end of the city hall and that the stairway now inside be removed to the outside, thereby giving better accommodation to the council and public. Also that a sufficiently big fire proof safe be procured for the safe keeping of the city's books and papers.

The newly acquired park of the city I wish to see improved to the extent of clearing off the grounds, trimming the trees and having the streets around graded.

Before concluding, I wish to advise that steps be taken to have the name of the city changed, the present name being too long, and a more appropriate name, such as Quinn Falls, Tween Falls or Lake Falls, could be had. This proposition I consider an important matter for the city and should not be lost sight of.

To citizens in general I wish to say: I earnestly solicit your support and co-operation in the discharge of my duties. On Sundays let all places of business be closed, and more especially so the saloons of the city. Observe the Sabbath day in the spirit in which it is given to mankind and do not allow any drunken person in places of business or on the streets to disturb the peace and dignity of Sunday, as that will not be tolerated.

Welcome all worthy strangers to our town, and at home and abroad have a good name for it; let us all do our best to advance the interest of our town; do not block enterprises even if it does not suit your own personal interest, and there can be no good reason why ours should not be, in time, the banner city of Northwestern Minnesota.

It is further my wish that the council and fire department would work together. Of course the law gives the council the right to elect the chief, but, when the good common sense is manifested, why should they not harmonize, for we all know that in case of a fire, it is our fire department we must rely on for good work and preservance and the chief is the important one.

The office of street commissioner I think should be left vacant for the winter months. There is not much going on in the way of street work and the clerk could, without without any extra pay, keep the time for labor necessary to be employed in clearing sidewalks, crossings and what little repairs there are to be done during the winter months. Yours respectfully,

Carl Kretzschmar,
Mayor.

FIRST MEETING

City Council Organizes and Is Ready for Business.

The members of the city council elected for the ensuing two years met in the city hall Tuesday evening and after taking the oath of office proceeded to organize. C. J. Knox was elected president, and after this excellent selection had been made the council settled down to business. A communication from Mayor Kretzschmar was read and later his honor appointed Wm. Bonzie superintendent of police and the appointment was confirmed by the council.

A communication was received from James Farr applying for the position of city engineer. After some discussion it was decided to ascertain the wishes of the members of the fire department in regard to its chief and engineer and action was deferred.

E. E. Brown, of the East Side, and R. B. Vining put in applications for the position of street commissioner. After some discussion in regard to salary, and the advisibility of hiring a street commissioner before spring, it was decided to postpone action for a month or so. The city clerk volunteered to do the work gratis until spring.

The matter of salaries was next brought up and it was decided to make the salary of each alderman and mayor $100, and the same to be expended upon the roads leading into the city under the direction of the council. The money will be expended in townships where the farmers are willing to do their share of the road building.

It did not take the council long to arrive at the conclusion that the services of F. Hibner, city attorney, could be dispensed of, and the salary of $200 which has heretofore been paid to him will be saved.

The salary of city engineer was fixed at $35 per month, and that of chief of police was made $40. The city clerk will receive $300 a year and will be required to act as street commissioner for five months of the year—from Nov. 1 to April 1.

Dr. Grundy was elected health officer and his salary is to be $25 per year.
